They Thought They Had Gold and Silver Mines Hereabouts,

IN OUR GRANDFATHERS' DAYS.

Measured by Our Standards, the Sires of '76 Were Queer Old Ducks,

BUT THEY BANKED ON GOOD CHARACTER

It is known to comparatively few people in this county and in several adjoining ones that going back to the base of operation for titles some of them do not own in fee simple. The donation lands, some of which lie about Sewickley and others about Tarentum, were given by the State to soldiers who fought in the war of the Revolution. In the books containing the first records of title in the Court House, are found the names of Nicholas Biddlee, Benjamin Franklin, John Penn and Hon. John Penn, Jr., Peter Muhlenberg and others, who bossed the Commonwealth in those days. Mr. John Gullett, of the Recorder's office, exhibits copies of signatures of both Wm. Penn and Benjamin Franklin.

In grants to soldiers of donation lands the Commonwealth reserved one-fifth of the gold and silver to be mined, stipulating that the vendee was to deliver the metal at the pit mouth. This reservation is what is supposed to have suggested to a genius up Montour run some years ago to start the report of having found a silver mine. Had he studied the subject slightly he might have learned that though the precious metals are widely distributed, occurring in various strata, yet they do not exist in paying quantity in this section above the metamorphic rocks. There may be gold and silver under Allegheny and Westmoreland and Beaver counties, but if there is it isn't likely that any corporation will go down four miles for it during this, and scarcely during the next century, judging from what science has disclosed on the subject.

WEALTH IN UNKNOWN SHAPE.

Had the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in 1787 known the value to which coal would attain and of petroleum and natural gas, and had reserved these instead of gold and silver, there would be no State debt to talk of or sinking fund to excite invidious surmises. But then Governor Beaver would not have had an opportunity to show his ability as a financier.

These old chestnuts, to be gathered in the Court House, are interesting to a student of ethnology. They show changes both material and moral, and suggest the possibilities of environment as forunkiw of morals. For instance, though the patriarchal institution of slavery was then regarded in Westmoreland county as legitimate as the marriage relation (Allegheny county was then a part of Westmoreland), and slaves were not only bought, sold and assessed as property, but solemnly devised by people who testified to their belief in a literal resurrection of the body every time they made a will, yet good name in man or woman was, as the dramatist phrased it, the immediate jewel of the souls of those sturdy pioneers. By damning the sins they were not inclined to, they gave themselves more liberty in another direction. The jealous care with which a name was guarded was maintained down to a later date than 1787. In 1836 the following was filed in the County Recorder's office:

A TRUSTWORTHY ETHIOPIAN.

CERTIFICATE OF JOSEPH MILLER, } CARLISLE, PA., Sept. 5, 1836.

The undersigned certify that Joseph Miller, the bearer of this, a mulatto man, 22 years of age, 5 feet 9½ inches in height, was raised in the borough of Carlisle, Pa., and has behaved himself correctly for the many years he has been known to us. He is, in our opinion, trustworthy and honest.

Wm. R. Biddle, Wm. S. Ramsey, J. R. Goodman, rector of St. John's; L. Langston, J. B. Parker, Edward M. Biddle, John Moore, Chas. McClure, John J. Myers, N. W. Woods, United States of America, State of Pennsylvania, Cumberland county.

John Creigh, a Notary Public, certified under seal that he was well acquainted with Miller's indorsers, and knew them to be men of respectability.

THEN A SLAVE STATE.

In partial explanation of Miller's case it might be stated that Pennsylvania was at that time still a slave State, and, as Joseph was under 28 years of age, he may have been afraid that he might be apprehended as a fugitive from service and thereby given trouble.

This kind of certificate of character differs somewhat from that given by a kind-hearted man to a female servant, which runs as follows: "This is to certify that Mary Jenkins had a good character when she left Buffalo, but lost it on the boat on the way to Cleveland."

By a figure of speech, it is quite common among professional servitors to denominate a certificate of character character itself, and the blunder of Mary's friend did her prospects no harm.

How would it be now to require people who move into a new place nowadays to record an official certificate of good character in each county in which they reside, and have the same advertised briefly, but generally? Probably experience has shown that it isn't good policy, but such a restriction would surely be hard on switchers of all kinds, on strangers who did not comply or could refer to well-known local authority, would be under suspicion.

STILL THINK IT QUEER.

Police Officials Are Not Satisfied With the Commercial Travelers' Club.

There is still some question in the minds of the police authorities regarding the purposes of the men who are collecting funds for the establishment of the proposed Commercial Travelers' Club. One of the officials said yesterday that he intended to look into the matter further, and that unless he was thoroughly convinced of the honesty of the purpose of the men, he would take steps to have the collections stopped. He had received information, he said, that the same method had been worked in Cincinnati, and after the money was obtained no club was established. Moreover, he could not see why commercial drummers had any more right to solicit charity for a club house than had traveling bummers.

Nevertheless, Mr. Schomaker, as attorney for the persons making the collections, has applied for a charter for the club, and Mr. Frank K. Kohler, secretary of an accident insurance company in Pittsburg, is treasurer for it. The police official says his suspicions were more aroused as to the legitimacy of the transaction because of the methods of soliciting funds. He says he knows that various persons have refused to contribute, but yet a book is shown with the names of these individuals down for subscriptions ranging from $25 to $100, as an inducement to others to subscribe.

A NOSE AND A BITER GONE.

James Flinn Gratifies an Unusual Appetite and Then Skips.

Last night James Flinn bit the end off John Connors' nose, on Clifton street, between South Eighteenth and South Nineteenth streets. Flinn formerly boarded with Connors, but left about three weeks ago. Yesterday he came back, and in the evening they got into a quarrel, with the above result.

The police were called, but before they arrived Flinn took a skiff and rowed across the Monongahela river to Soho and escaped.

Dead in a Stable.

Fred Heller, aged 50, was found dead in the stable of Frank Haslage, by whom he was employed, on Leamington avenue, Nineteenth ward, yesterday morning. The Coroner viewed the remains and they were interred at Bellevue yesterday afternoon. Death was caused by a disease from which Heller had been suffering for years. He had no friends in this vicinity. An inquest will be held this morning.

OVERRUN WITH DOGS.

Policemen Have Not Killed Trump Canines for Two Years—The Remarkable Result—Inspector McAleese's Suggestions for Legislation.

There has been an enormous increase in the number of dogs in Pittsburg during the past two or three years, and they threaten to overrun the city unless something is done to keep them within bounds. Some of them are getting vicious, too, and reports are frequently made of persons being bitten. There is no dog pound, and therefore no dog catcher in Pittsburg, and it is over two years since the police quit killing wandering canines with dog buttons, and there is no other way to dispose of them.

"The dogs ought to be kept down," said Captain Dan Silvus yesterday, "but I am glad the police have quit killing them. When it was the duty of the officers to put away stray dogs, every dog that was killed in the city was blamed on the police. There were hundreds of very valuable animals killed every year, and while I don't believe the police killed one of them, yet they got the credit, or discredit, of doing it. People would have a grudge against some one, it might be even against the policeman himself, and would give a button to a valuable dog; then, of course, the owner contended every time that it was the officer on the beat who had done it out of spite. That was one reason the killing by the officers was stopped. Another reason was that the fallmaster's wagons were always very slow in getting around after a dead dog, and the bloated carcass of a defunct canine lying in the hot sun for several days is neither pleasant to see nor to smell."

"Something should certainly be done with the dogs," said Police Inspector McAleese. "There are thousands of them running around the city which have no owners, and are regular tramps. Then, being without control, they breed and multiply very rapidly. I don't believe in poisoning the dogs, but I do believe in killing them in some way. We should have a dog pound, a city tax on, or license for dogs, and a place in which to properly kill any which may be taken up and are not reclaimed by their owners. There should be a license fee of not less than $1 for every dog, and the owners should be compelled to place collars and muzzles on them. If the license was made $5 it would be a great deal better. With such a system there would be a speedy abatement of the nuisance. It is pretty certain that something of the kind will have to be done, and that very soon."

ACCIDENTAL, OR INTENDED?

That's What the Police Want to Know as to the Shooting of Gustav Reiter.

A shooting affair occurred last evening shortly after 6 o'clock on Sixteenth street, but it is claimed to be accidental. Mannus McFadden, a young man, was shooting at a tin can with a small revolver. Gustav Reiter, who lives at the foot of Herr's Island in a small boat, was passing and was shot in the left cheek. Reiter was taken to Dr. Duncan's office where the bullet was taken out and he was turned over to the police. His condition is not serious.

McFadden disappeared immediately after the shooting, but was arrested on Spring alley at 10 o'clock last night by Lieutenant Teetlers and put into the Twelfth ward station. He said he did not see Reiter or he would not have shot. McFadden claimed that the ball glanced from the can and struck Reiter. The police do not think, however, that the wound could have been inflicted as it was had the bullet glanced.

A CASH DISTRIBUTION.

The Stipulated Way in Which G. A. R. Funds Are to be Distributed.

City Treasurer Denniston, as Treasurer of the G. A. R. relief fund, yesterday forwarded to Department Commander Stewart the final report of subscriptions received from the G. A. R. of Allegheny county for the benefit of the G. A. R. sufferers at Johnstown. The money is to be distributed in cash to the suffering comrades and their families, and the Department of Pennsylvania will see to its distribution themselves. The fund reported was as follows:

Previously acknowledged, $1,898 21; Post 206 (colored), $25; John A. Wheny, Post 117, $2 50; Loyal Legion, $50; total, $1,963 71, from which $6 50 were deducted for expenses, leaving a net sum of $1,957 21.

WAGON LOADS OF BEER

Left the City in Kegs—It Came Back in Receptacles Without Hoops.

On the streets of the Southside last night dozens of wagons loaded with semi-intoxicated men and women were returning from the country, where they had been spending the Fourth. A four-horse wagon crossed the Smithfield street bridge last night about 10:30 o'clock empty with the exception of the driver, two men and one young girl. The girl and one of the men looked as if they were making strong resolutions never to celebrate the Fourth again. The other occupant was attempting to sing "We Won't Go Home Till Morning."

NOT STINGY AT ALL.

The Emerald Association's Good Work for Johnstown.

The Emerald Beneficial Associations have been raising money right along to benefit the Johnstown sufferers. Almost every member belongs to a labor union, but alongside of that they will continue to accumulate funds until the wants of the people who have suffered greatly or slightly by that terrific calamity have been satisfied. The Emeralds do not and shall not sustain their own. Their charity is not discriminating.

Yesterday $60 came to them from a branch of New Jersey, to be utilized without limit.

FIREWORKS AND BEER.

The Two West Ends in Hand for the Southside Celebration.

All along Carson and other streets of the Southside last night, July 4 was being celebrated with fireworks and beer. The fireworks were ahead, however. The display at various places was exceptionally fine, considering that it was put off by private citizens.

At Alderman Hartman's office, on Pius street, a large quantity was fired. About 500 people witnessed the display.

An Intoxicated Woman's Accident.

About 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon an old woman walked into the First avenue entrance of the Monongahela House and fell through the shaft of the elevator. She was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital. No bones are broken, but her head is cut in several places. Her injuries are not serious. She is about 60 years old, and was intoxicated. No one about the hotel knows who she is. Mr. Woog, one of the proprietors, said that she had come there several times before to beg for cold victuals.

A Rural Merchant Missing.

Relatives of Herman Tertlebaum, of Derry station, reported to the police yesterday that he had come to this city on Tuesday last, purchased a bill of goods at Jos. Horne & Co.'s, and had not been heard of since. He is a sandy-haired Hebrew, 42 years of age; wore a sandy moustache, barred suit, and had $300 on his person. The bill of goods he purchased was shipped and arrived at Derry on Wednesday.

Four on One Charge.

METAL WHEELWAYS

To Save the Streets From the Wear and Tear of Heavy Hauling.

SOME CITY COUNCILMEN THINKING

About Duplicating a Big New York Street Improvement,

BUT TEAMSTERS DO NOT WANT IT

The city of New York is considering the advisability of laying flat iron rails on the streets on which heavy hauling is done, as a method of saving the streets. The idea is to put down rails 12 inches wide, which will suit the gauge of all vehicles. Such a proposition has set some Pittsburg Councilmen to thinking, because this is a city that has heavier hauling than any other in the country, or, at least, much more heavy hauling. It is well known that the heavy hauling some years ago splintered all of Pittsburg's wooden pavements, and in a short time rendered them worthless, while the heavy iron wagons plowed through cobblestones and made it necessary for a street paved with them to be renewed at least every two years; and even then it was full of chuckholes much of the time. On this account it was shown in this paper some years ago that a cobblestone pavement in 20 years cost about four times what one of best Belgian block did.

Chief Bigelow, of the Department of Public Works, didn't have time to talk on the subject yesterday, but one of the employes in the Highway Department gave some information.

A PIKE STREET SCHEME.

"There is no necessity of putting down rails in Pittsburg," he said, "because all the principal streets now have street cars on them, and the heavy hauling is all done on those streets. There is no question but what flat iron rails on the streets save the streets, but there is no necessity for them being 12 inches wide. Horses are liable to slip on ordinary street car rails, and 12-inch rails would be worse. Some two or three years ago there was a proposition to lay steel car rails on Pike street, in order to relieve Penn avenue of the heavy traffic, but nothing has been done about it. Teamsters will seek the streets that have rails on them, and it never has been the intention of the city to have to pull off occasionally, so far as Pittsburg is concerned, however, there is no necessity for putting down more rails, unless it might be on Pike street, which is right in line with the mills, and it is very doubtful if you could get teamsters to drive on that street, when Penn avenue, Fifth avenue, Liberty avenue, Smithfield street, Second avenue, Penn avenue, Wylie avenue, and Center avenue all have street car lines on them. There is only one other arterial street that hasn't street car tracks on it, and that is Forbes street, and no heavy hauling is done on it. There is little use for rails on the short cross streets, because but little hauling is done on them."

TEAMSTERS NOW SATISFIED.

Ardary Bros., who do about as heavy hauling as any one else in iron transportation business in the city, do not take kindly to the idea. They said that if the wheelways were to be made smooth, horses would slip on them and injure themselves. They stated that they, the horses, frequently strain themselves now on street car tracks and a wheelway a foot wide would be much worse, and that even if it were corrugated the case would be but little better, as the iron would soon grow slippery anyhow. Those they object on the further ground that the iron, if corrugated, would make wheeling noisier than even the cobblestone pavements do; also that the metal, being harder than the pavement alongside, the latter would wear, and when a wheel went off the metal way it would be difficult to get it on again. On a road where there are large deposits of bituminous coal there always chuckholes. This is shown most uncomfortably in the country where supervising cobbers fill holes with stones. Soon after the filling, the first time there is a wet spell, there are two holes where there was but one before—a hole each side of the hole that has been filled.

PITTSBURG'S HEAVY LOADS.

Messrs. Ardary say there is not nearly so much heavy hauling in this city as formerly, and that the average four-horse load is now five tons, though sometimes weights of 27 to 30 tons are hauled on big timber wheels. Owners of teams do not like to do this heavy hauling. Their best horses are frequently injured more by hauling one heavy casting or shaft than the compensation is worth. Where 10 or 15 horses are hitched to a load the spirited animals do the bulk of the work and sprain themselves, and efforts to make the laggards pull up only render matters worse by further exciting the spirited animals and making them exert themselves still more. Most large establishments now have railway tracks running into their works, and they by use of heavy cranes load directly on cars. Consequently streets are worse than any other large city from the fact that they are opened by pipe line layers and for other purposes oftener than streets in any other city and are consequently more uneven.

Constable Boyle was stabbed yesterday afternoon by a distant relative of the same name. The wound is on his hip, and was inflicted with a penknife.

The constable knocked his assailant down twice with a cobble stone. The latter was afterward arrested and taken to the Eleventh ward station house. The constable's wound is not very serious. The cause of the trouble is not known.
