THAT VETO WAS LOST

Under the Majority of 30 to 1 in Select Council Chamber.

DIAMOND STREET TO BE WIDENED.

The Discussion Sifted Down to Warmcastle vs. Lambie.

OTHER IMPROVEMENT ORDINANCES UP

The Diamond street widening ordinance was passed over the Mayor's veto in Select Council yesterday afternoon by a vote of 30 to 1, and the ordinance is now a law. When President Ford called the special meeting of the Select branch to order, Mr. Keating moved to postpone action upon the Diamond street ordinance until 3:30 in order to finish a lot of accumulated business of the Council. The motion was carried, and at 3:45 the unfinished business had been attended to, and the Mayor's veto was read. Chairman Ford then announced: "The question is, 'Shall the ordinance pass notwithstanding the objections of the Mayor?'"

Mr. Warmcastle was the first to address the Chair. He was sorry that his convictions compelled him to differ in his opinion with his good-hearted, honest friend, the Mayor, but if the latter's claims were correct, then Councils had been either in grave error or guilty of gross neglect. He was inclined to think that Councils were right. In the first place, he said, the Mayor stated that he had personally noticed the travel on Diamond street and thought it was adequate to accommodate the traffic. If the Mayor had really done so he could not fail to notice that much of the travel was driven from Fifth avenue to Sixth and Seventh avenues, showing that if a personal view of that thoroughfare did not prove the statement itself. The time would soon come, Mr. Warmcastle thought, when not only Diamond street, but several other narrow thoroughfares in the central part of the city, would have to be widened. Mr. Warmcastle also objected to the Mayor's statement that there was no foundation for the passage of the ordinance as a public convenience; and as for the statement that two-thirds of the total frontage of the street was opposed to it, the Mayor was decidedly wrong. There were property holders representing 565 feet of the total frontage on the petition for the improvement, while there had been only 168 feet on the remonstrance. He also denied that the estimated cost of making the improvement, $750,000, would be saddled upon the city. The Board of Viewers had reported that the property along Diamond street would be sufficiently benefited to pay that amount. The Board of Viewers had a very liberal estimate of claims for damages, basing their estimate upon the claims made by the property owners themselves, and this item of the expense had amounted to $555,000, which, the speaker had no doubt, would be reduced to $100,000 less when the assessment was properly made and the benefits to the property were considered in the summing up.

Mr. Warmcastle questioned the possibility of the city being mulcted for the payment of the cost of the improvement. How could it be when the damages must be assessed and paid before the work was begun? If the assessment failed then the plan would simply be set aside and dropped. The passage of the ordinance did not settle the matter as far as Councils were concerned, by any means.

A MARKED DISTINCTION.

It was not the same as if, after the passage of the ordinance, the work was placed in the hands of a contractor. This was a work the city would do herself, and it would be in her own hands all the time. The only trouble the city could possibly have with the property holders by making this improvement would possibly be with one property, where a building was being erected, and where the owner or the contractor might come on the city because he could not finish his building, but the chances for this were very remote indeed. It would be impossible, said Mr. Warmcastle, to charge the improvement of a street to the public benefit, for all street improvements were public benefits; but the property along those streets was benefited by an increase in value to at least the cost of the improvement. For these reasons, Mr. Warmcastle said, he must, with the best of feeling for the Mayor, vote against his veto.

Mr. Keating thought that Mr. Warmcastle's argument was comprehensive enough to convince anybody that the ordinance was a worthy one and should be passed. Mr. Keating's only objection to it was that it had not included the widening of the square between Grant and Smithfield streets.

Mr. Lambie had voted against the ordinance before, and was opposed to it now. He thought the Mayor's objections were all reasonable and founded on fact. He referred to the speech made in Common Council by Mr. Carnahan, in which the latter said the street laws of Pittsburg would not apply to the widening of Diamond street, and the city had no law to support it. Coming from such a source, Mr. Lambie thought this opinion was worthy of consideration. As to the matter of widening the street, if the Mayor was right, there is no necessity for widening the street but the public benefit, and in that case the public should pay for it. If it was necessary to widen this street in order to ease up the travel on other streets of the city, the improvement would be public, and they should pay for it, and the city could not assess the property on the street.

VIEWERS AND JURIES.

As to the cost of the improvement, the claims for damages, and the assessments upon the property, Mr. Lambie said it had been his experience, as well as that of most old lawyers, that when the Board of Viewers' assessments were taken into court the jury almost invariably reduced the assessment, and increased the amount of his claim for damages when he appealed on that. He cited an instance that recently occurred, where the Board of Viewers awarded a man $1,200 damages for a street improvement; but he took it to court, the jury awarded him $3,000 and he got it. In this case every property holder will have the right to appeal, and every appeal will go to a different jury, with the probabilities that most of the claims will be increased rather than lessened. Mr. Lambie said the city would embark in a scheme with this ordinance, the termination of which it could not see or anticipate. The people who were pushing it had not over 200 feet frontage, and the majority of the property holders were either indifferent or opposed to it. This improvement was called a public necessity. If that was the case, why had it stopped at Smithfield street? That statement was founded on error. Fifth avenue travel would not go to Diamond street, because Fifth avenue had an outlet, while Diamond street, even widened, would be out of the way, almost as much as Fourth avenue. Mr. Lambie thought the widening a good thing for the Diamond street property; it would increase the value greatly, but a minority had no right to force this burden of expense, this improvement, upon an indifferent and protesting majority. That the scheme was not a public improvement Mr. Lambie thought was evidenced by the fact that there were no representatives of other parts of the city present urging its passage; but, if it was a public improvement demanded by the public, it should be done, if it had to be done against the objections of all the property owners on the street.

LAW AND INFLUENCE FOR IT.

Mr. Warmcastle disputed Mr. Lambie's statement that there was no law to cover the proposed improvement. He had an opinion from City Attorney Moreland, in which the latter said that the act of 1889 conferred the right upon Councils to widen any street, lane or alley within the city limits. Mr. Lambie had asserted that the Coleman estate was in the hands of a corporation known as the Pittsburg Opera House Company and that the absence of their signature from the petition for the improvement showed that they were opposed to it. Mr. Warmcastle said the directors of the Opera House Company were in favor of the improvement, and the only reason they had not signed the petition was because they were all away from the city and no one was authorized to use the company's signature in a case like this without a meeting of the stockholders. But Mr. Warmcastle was sure they would pay their share.

During the latter part of his speech Mr. Warmcastle exhibited his talent as a mimic by throwing back and shaking his head, stamping his foot and pounding upon the table, in imitation of another well-known member of Council. The effort was recognized and appreciated, and a general laugh was the result.

Mr. Nisbet was the last speaker on the ordinance, and he was very brief. He was satisfied that the Board of Viewers understood their business, and as they had reported the Diamond street property would be sufficiently benefited to pay for the improvement, and there was no possibility of the tax being put upon the people, he was in favor of the ordinance.

The vote was then taken on the question to pass the ordinance over the Mayor's veto and resulted as follows:

AYES—Messrs. Anderson, Benz, Brophy, Carnaugh, Collins, Doyle, Evans, C.; Evans, D. P.; Gillespie, J. H.; Gillespie, T. A., Haslett, Jones, Keating, King, Matthews, Miller, Murphy, McCord, McKinley, Nisbet, Paul, Perry, Reilly, Rohrkaste, Treusch, Warmcastle, Warren, Williams, Wilson, Ford—30.

NAYS—Mr. Lambie—1.

IMPROVEMENTS AUTHORIZED.

Select Council Lays Out More Good Work for the Summer.

Among the important proceedings of Select Council yesterday was the final passage of ordinances as follows:

Granting the Pittsburg, Knoxville and St. Clair Railway Company certain privileges on the Southside; locating Murdock street, from Wilkins avenue to Homewood avenue; authorizing the improvement of Highland Park; authorizing the opening of Railroad street, from Twentieth to Thirty-first streets; vacating Virgin alley, Southside; vacating South Eleventh street, from Muriel street to the Monongahela river; authorizing the construction of a sewer on Gum street; grading and paving Fox street; grading and paving Mahoney alley; grading and paving Howe street; grading, paving and curbing Omega street, grading, paving and curbing Broad street; authorizing a sewer on South Twenty-fifth street; also the following opening ordinances: opening Harriet street, from Whitfield avenue to Railroad street; opening Beatty, Landwehr, Broad, Industry, St. Clair, Alder, Lydia, Torley, Summerlea, Mifflin, Moore and Kirkpatrick streets, Larimer avenue, Balboa way, Bowery, Government, Woolslayer and Clement alleys.

The ordinance granting switch privileges to Rea & Co. was laid over until September; the petition of A. J. Davis against the opening of Fairmount avenue through his property was read, also the opinion of the City Attorney relative thereto, and Select Council decided to concur with Common in disregarding the petition.

The report of the Board of Awards on a large number of contracts let was approved, except the awards for paving Atwood and Boquet streets, which were referred back to the Board because the contracts were for block stone, and the petition called for asphalt.

The report of the Department of Charities for June, showing $5,781 expended, was approved.

The following matters were presented and properly referred:

Ordinances, for sewer on Yale alley; opening of Duff street; opening of Humber alley, opening of Sobo street from Wylie to Mahon streets; petitions for water pipe on Junilla and Booth streets; fire alarm box at Francis and Wylie streets; a remonstrance was filed against the vacation of Granite street.

AN INJUNCTION DISOBEYED.

John Holland to be Taken to Washington Under Arrest.

John Holland was taken before United States Commissioner McCandless yesterday, having been arrested on a bench warrant, issued by Judge Acheson, on an indictment pending against him in Washington, D. C., for contempt of court. Holland was a resident of the District of Columbia. An injunction had been issued against him in 1888 to restrain him from removing goods that had been attached by Danenhower & Co. for the payment of several notes.

Holland disobeyed the injunction, and removed the goods to this State. He was then indicted for contempt of court. He was held in $1,500 bail for his appearance at the next term of court in Washington.

A Few Words Concerning Peruna.

In the first place it is a tonic that has no superior in equalizing the circulation, building up debilitated structures and giving tone to the various organs of the body. A little of it taken from time to time will effectually keep the system from running down. But it is more than a tonic. It will cure any curable case of consumption and all lung troubles, neuralgia, heart disease, quinsy, dyspepsia, colic, cholera morbus and infantum, dysentery and kidney disease. It is the best of remedies in cases of scarlet, typhoid and yellow fever, ague, erysipelas, acute rheumatism and all diseases peculiar to women. Send to the Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, O., for Dr. Hartman's "Ills of Life." It will cost you nothing, and will not only tell you all about Peruna, but will also show you what remarkable cures are being effected by Lacupia, the peerless blood remedy, and Manalin, the unequaled regulator of the kidneys, liver and bowels. All these remedies are purely vegetable, and are pleasant as well as absolutely safe to take. They are sold by all druggists, and cost only $1 a bottle; 6 for $5.

THE CRIME IN CAMP.

Arrival of the Murdered Young Man's Body in This City.

A STORY OF BAD BLOOD AND BEER.

The Gunner Was a Young Alleghenian, and Chased the Camp.

HIS THREATS FROM THE SOMERSET JAIL

The homicide of a young East Ender, in a camp near Confluence, Sunday night, as reported exclusively in these columns yesterday morning, turns out to have been quite as tragic an affair as it was at first reported to be. The alleged murderer's name, however, is James Lehr, not Laird, as first reported, and he claims Allegheny as his residence. A tour among all the Lehrs and Lahrs in that city last evening failed to discover any one of them all who knew or had heard of this particular fellow.

The body of young Charles Scott was brought to the city yesterday morning, accompanied by his companions who had gone to the camp with him on Saturday, and now lies at Moreland's undertaking rooms. The funeral will take place from the residence of his father, John Scott, on Stanton avenue, East End, to-morrow at 2 P. M. The father is a well-known stone contractor, and the murdered young man has a brother in the firm of Vincent & Scott, the East End carpet dealers, in whose store he worked, and also a brother in the firm of Scott & McLean. He was about 21 years old and unmarried.

THE STORY OF THE CRIME.

With regard to the crime, and how it came to be committed, an eye-witness, Gus Straub, who returned with the corpse of Scott yesterday, tells the whole story, as follows:

Saturday night young Scott, Wm. Marshall, Thos. Nisbett, Mr. Echenlaub, Chas. Kurtz and myself went to the camp as guests of the Eureka Club. We had a most pleasant visit till Sunday afternoon. Mr. Scott and I had been up in the woods near the camp and came back about 4 o'clock. Some of the boys told us they had been having some trouble with James Lehr, the cook. He had been drinking heavily, and Harry Knorr, one of the members of the club, told him he could have no more liquor. Lehr became abusive and threatened the camp with revolver in hand, but finally came back. While he was gone Mr. Kurtz knocked the spigot out of the beer keg and let it run, in order to prevent Lehr from getting any more. Lehr then made for Kurtz, revolver in hand, but did not shoot. He was in terrible anger and threatened and swore around for a long time, to the terror of all in camp.

Up to this time Lehr had not said a word to Scott or Scott to him. Finally, about 5 o'clock, some of the members of the club said to us that as there was not much chance for supper, the way Lehr was acting, we had better go to Confluence for supper. To this we agreed, and all started from camp. Scott was the last one to leave the camp. He was about 100 yards behind me, and was standing in the door of a tent. He called to me to wait, and started toward me. He had come about ten yards when Lehr came toward him, and, calling him a vile name, "Where are you going? You come back here." Scott faced him, and said: "I am going to Confluence." "No, you are not," said Lehr, and pulled out his revolver, and, as Scott moved away sideways, fired a shot at him.

SELF-DEFENSE WAS USELESS.

Scott then moved away further, but all the time keeping his eyes on him, when Lehr fired again. Then Scott fired a shot from a little revolver he had. I called to him to run, and he turned to do so, when Lehr fired again, and the bullet struck Scott in the back. He fell and never spoke a word, dying instantly.

Some of the boys hurried to Confluence, and the magistrate and a constable at once went to the camp. When they got near camp Lehr pulled his revolver again, but the boys persuaded him to put it up. He did not and was arrested and taken to Somerset, where he is in jail. The magistrate held an inquest and 14 witnesses told the same story I am telling.

There had been talks of any kind between Scott and Lehr, and the shooting was entirely unprovoked. Lehr was the only man in camp who was in the least affected by liquor, and I would not have anyone think for a moment that liquor had anything to do with the affair as far as Scott or anyone but Lehr was concerned. I know that Scott had not had a drink since 11 o'clock in the morning, and all day he did not drink over two or three glasses.

Interviewed in the Somerset jail yesterday, James Lehr said his home was in Allegheny and that when he got out he would do up any newspaper man that dared to publish anything about it. He said he didn't care for himself, but didn't want his father and mother to know anything about it. He is a slight-built young fellow about 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighs about 135 pounds. He had $350 in his clothes when arrested. He has employed W. H. Koontz as his attorney.

THE IDEA NOT PATENTED,

But the Odd Mechanism of That Cigar Slot Machine May Be.

Theodore Askins, the inventor of the slot cigar machine, called at THE DISPATCH office yesterday and, in reply to the statements by a commercial drummer in yesterday's DISPATCH, that it was probable that his machine was an infringement on a machine made in Lima, O., said that the idea of putting a nickel in a slot to obtain a cigar could not be patented, and that the mechanism of his machine was altogether different from that of the Lima machine. In the Lima machine, when the knob is pulled, it brings out a cigar with it, while in this the cigar drops down in a receptacle made for it.

Mr. Askins also said that the machine was no infringement of the tobacco license laws, as the cigars come direct from the box. He said that he had been in the patent business 20 years, and was not afraid of any infringement proceedings. He expects his patent in about 20 days, and, until then, of course nothing is certain in regard to the duplication of the machine, or whether it will be considered an infringement or not.

THE NEXT GRAND JURY.

Hon. Russell Errett, Who is Now Sick, is Among Those Drawn.

Judge Ewing, Sheriff McCandless and the Jury Commissioners yesterday drew the panel of jurors for the September term of the Quarter Sessions Court. The grand jury, which will commence operations on the first Monday in September, is composed of the following:

Peter Gallus, laborer; James Pender, toll collector; David H. Cunningham, farmer; H. H. Phillips, oil cloth dealer; A. J. Brown, laborer; James Barrett, gentleman; J. C. Stephenson, merchant; Wm. Brankston, glass manufacturer; Russell Errett, clerk; Samuel Albertson, glass cutter; Thomas Daulon, Sr., laborer; John Keefer, laborer; Charles A. Hay, gardener; Henry Beltzhoover, farmer; J. R. Gibson, horse shoer; Henry Slicker, glass cutter; N. S. Brokaw, Jr., clerk; James D. Hays, carpenter; Thomas Alexander, laborer; Adam Henning, saddler; John Hasser, gardener, Henry A. Barbin, painter.

Taken From Jail.

Humane Agent O'Brien has taken charge of the five little children of Mrs. Catherine McFarland, who was committed to jail by Justice of the Peace Thomas Lowry four weeks ago for illegal liquor selling at Braddock. The children have been lying in jail with the mother. Agent O'Brien will place them in St. Paul's Orphan Asylum to-day.

To build up the system when run down from general debility, young or old should use Dr. Jayne's Tonic Vermifuge, a pleasant and effective tonic, a prompt corrective for a disordered stomach and a sure destroyer of worms. The large-sized bottles are cheapest when a tonic is wanted.
