HIS NAME WAS END.

A Peculiar Incident in the Selection of a Juror Yesterday.

SECOND TRIAL OF JOSEPH DIMMEY.

His Life in Jeopardy for the Murder of Policeman Miller.

A BIG COAL PURCHASE IS OUTLINED.

General News of the State and County Tribunals.

For the superstitious there is food for thought in the opening of Joseph Dimmey's trial yesterday for the murder of Policeman Miller. It was a curious incident in relation to the selection of a juror, which is told below. The Umberger murder case from Somerset was considered by the Supreme Court yesterday.

Joseph Dimmey, a colored hack driver, was put on trial in the Criminal Court yesterday, for the murder of Special Officer William Miller, of Allegheny, on the morning of September 4, 1888. This is the second trial of the case. Dimmey was convicted of murder in the first degree last spring, but it was proven that some of the jurors in the case were allowed to take whisky with their meals during the progress of the trial, and a new trial was asked for and granted.

Yesterday the case was begun for the second time. The work of selecting a jury filled in the day until 3 o'clock, when John End, a millworker of the Twenty-fourth ward, was accepted as the twelfth man. An odd circumstance appears in the selection of this juror. He was the first man called in the morning, and after answering the usual questions as to scruples against capital punishment and whether or not he had formed an opinion as to the prisoner's guilt or innocence, he was stood aside while others were called and chosen. Of the entire panel called, 19 were challenged by the defense and 2 by the prosecution. After exhausting the panel, End was again called and accepted as the twelfth and last man. The fact that he was called first and last, and that he bears the name he does, was commented upon as being peculiar by many interested in the case.

Judge White was on the bench. The Commonwealth was represented by District Attorney W. D. Porter and John S. Robb, while the defendant was represented by Thomas M. Marshall, Sr., Thomas M. Marshall, Jr., and William Reardon. The jury as finally made up is as follows:

Arthur Chislett, clerk, Seventeenth ward; David Elphanstone, bookkeeper, Fifth ward, Allegheny; August Meoni, dinner, Lower St. Clair township; Morris W. Mead, electrician, Fourteenth ward; Samuel Crawford, merchant, Nineteenth ward; Peter Hill, farmer, Indiana township; W. W. Sawhill, druggist, Thirty-second ward; A. C. Montgomery, tobacconist, Twentieth ward; F. R. Smith, manufacturer, Fifth ward, Allegheny; Thomas Scanlon, dyer, First ward, Allegheny; John U. Smith, clerk, Seventeenth ward, and John End, mill hand, Twenty-fourth ward.

District Attorney Porter opened the case and defined the law relating to homicide, and the different verdicts that could be brought for first or second degree, or manslaughter if the evidence warranted it, and if not a verdict of not guilty would be expected. He reviewed the circumstances of the murder and told of how, on the morning of September 4 of last year, about 1 o'clock, Special Officer Miller, of Allegheny, had, in the vicinity of his beat, seen the prisoner and another man quarreling. In attempting to stop the fight one of the men shot him and ran. A Pittsburg officer who had been doing duty heard the shot, and, seeing a man run away, gave chase, the fugitive turning and shooting at him twice. The pursued ran through the park, and was caught on Western avenue, and proved to be the prisoner Dimmey.

The first witness called was Mrs. Annie Miller, widow of Officer Miller. She told of how her husband had left home about 7 o'clock on the evening before his death and of his singing a song as he went out the door. She next saw him dead about 5 o'clock in the afternoon of the 5th, when he was taken to their home on Perrysville avenue. She said he was 42 years of age and had been an officer for three years. When she was shown her dead husband's clothes to identify them, she completely broke down and wept pitifully. She was led from the stand by a young lady attendant.

Officer David Speer, of Allegheny, was next called. He said he was on a street car going home when he heard a pistol shot, and met Dimmey coming out through the park to Western avenue. He ran forward to arrest him, when the prisoner said: "D— you, I'll let you have one, too." He took the pistol from him, which was pressed close to the witness' stomach. Officer Fitzgerald, of Pittsburg, came up and another man whom he knew as Wiggins. Dimmey was taken to the patrol box on Irwin avenue and sent to the lockup, and the witness went to the hospital with the wounded man, whom they found on Irwin avenue near where he was shot. Miller said to the witness: "I'm shot and done for. God have mercy on my soul."

THE UMBERGER MURDER.

Review of the Celebrated Case Before the Supreme Court.

In the Supreme Court yesterday the argument list for Armstrong, Cambria, Lawrence, Somerset and Mercer counties was next taken up, and will occupy all of this week.

The first case argued was the appeal of Joseph Nicely and David Nicely from the decision of the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Somerset county. The two Nicelys were tried, convicted and sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Herman Umberger, on February 27, 1889. Umberger was a farmer in Jenner township, Somerset county.

On the day in question two men with handkerchiefs around their heads and faces went to Umberger's house and represented that they were officers with a warrant to search his house for stolen jewelry. They started to make the search, and Umberger removed some money from a drawer and put it in his pocket. His money or his life was then demanded. The result was Umberger was shot dead and his pockets rifled. The two Nicely brothers, married men, living in Westmoreland county, were arrested and identified by the Umberger family by their voices and clothes as the murderers. Their appeal is based on errors of the Court in rulings and the admission of evidence.

TO PURCHASE COAL LAND.

Why That Privilege Has to be Applied for in Court.

An argument was heard by Judge Hawkins in the Orphans' Court yesterday on the petition of the estate of James H. Hays, for leave to purchase some coal land. The estate in question is mostly composed of coal interests. To work the coal property in Mifflin township successfully the trustee states it is necessary to purchase 93 acres of coal land adjoining. In consequence he asked permission from the court to bid for it at the proposed sale at a price not to exceed $300 per acre.

Two of the heirs of the estate, McClurg Hays and Mrs. Davis filed objections to the purchase. They held that it was not necessary to purchase the additional land for the working of their mines, and that they desired a distribution among the heirs of the income of the estate instead of making additional investments with it. The other heirs of the estate had agreed to the purchase. Attorney Lozier appeared in court for Mr. Bookman, the trustee, and Messrs. Brown and Cook for the objecting heirs. The case, at the adjournment of court, was continued for ten days.

—A rather startling financial disclosure has been made in Southwestern Kansas by a shrewd attorney living in that region, which promises to cost the loan companies interested in Western mortgage loans millions of dollars. Mortgages have been placed upon large quantities of homestead lands before the full time of settlement had expired. These mortgages are now believed to be illegal, and the effects will be widespread.

—A State convention of New York French-Canadians will be held at Troy to-day. It has been called by a committee of six, all of whom are Republicans, but it is claimed that the convention will be a non-partisan one, and that it is called simply for the purpose of advancing the interests of the French-Canadians of the State, who are about 100,000 in number. It is thought that the political rights of these citizens can be better secured through united action.

—Prince Bismarck had a final and prolonged interview with the Czar at the Russian Embassy before his departure. He bade the Czar farewell within the court salon of Laherte station, and did not appear upon the station platform. The conversation between the Czar and the Chancellor was extremely amiable. —Henry Fritz, a St. Louis blacksmith, notified his landlady yesterday morning that his wife had just died of hemorrhage of the lungs. The police were notified, and on entering Fritz's room the woman was found in the bed with one side of her head crushed in and her body and the bedclothes besmeared with blood. One corner of the stove was also bloody, and the indications were that Fritz and his wife, both of whom had been drinking heartily, had quarreled, and that Fritz had thrown his wife against the stove and killed her. Fritz was arrested, and the woman's body taken to the morgue.

Their names are Bill Alexander, Mag Alexander, Nan Alexander, Aaron Alexander, John Houston, Monroe Cathey, Peter Crawford, Doc Powers, Jim Neal, Downas Jackson, Mary Jackson and Bob Morris. Bill Alexander was the leader of the gang. Over 100 residences and business houses have been raided by these thieves. In one instance $600 worth of jewels were taken from one store, and the losses traceable to the gang aggregate nearly $100,000. The arrest of the gang was brought about by one of the robbers selling a gold badge which had been stolen. They will be tried this week. Burglary in this State is a capital offense.

Ten Years of Intense Suffering

Mr. Frank Bordar, a well-known gentleman, suffered for ten years from kidney disease. After receiving two months' treatment from the physicians of the Polypathic Medical Institute, he gave the following interesting history, with permission to publish it. He said: "I had much pain across my back and lower part of my body. My hands and feet would often get cold, and sharp cramps would often seize me. My heart would at times palpitate as if it would jump out of my body. Hot flashes would often come over me. I was always tired on getting up in the morning. The disease finally extended to my lungs, causing much pain and tightness in my chest. In vain I tried to find some doctor who could cure me, but could only get a little relief, and so I suffered on in this way for ten years. I finally read in the papers of wonderful cures being made by the physicians of the Polypathic Institute, and as I read that they made a specialty of my disease, I began treatment, and I am glad to state that I have been cured."
