IT WAS MADE FOR MAN

Christ's Broad Interpretation of the Fourth Commandment.

HOW THE SABBATH IS BROKEN.

Why the Seventh Day Was Set Apart as a Day of Rest.

A LAW WRITTEN UPON NATURE'S FACE

[WRITTEN FOR THE DISPATCH.]

There is one of the commandments which nearly all good Christian people are in the habit of breaking once every week. I mean the fourth. The fourth commandment is perfectly plain. There is no excuse to be found for us in that direction. There are no disputed readings in the text of it, nor any obscurity, nor any ambiguity about it. We know well enough that this commandment sets down for us two entirely unmistakable duties: We are to set apart a certain day, and we are to keep that day in a certain manner. As a matter of fact, we neither keep that day, nor do we observe even the day which we have put in its place in that manner.

"The seventh day," the commandment says, "is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God." No kind of arithmetic, no kind of almanac can make seven equal to one, nor the seventh mean the first, nor Saturday mean Sunday.

And upon this seventh day "thou shalt do no manner of work; thou and thy son, and thy daughter, thy man-servant and thy maid-servant, thy cattle and the stranger that is within thy gates." Let us even suppose, for a moment, that when the Bible says Saturday it means Sunday. Even so, who can plead innocent? Wherever there is fire in a cooking-stove to-day there is the fourth commandment broken. Whoever goes to church to-day in his own carriage, or in the people's carriage—the cars, steam cars or cable cars—breaks the fourth commandment. Whoever is interested in a mill where men work on Sunday is just as much guilty of a violation of the fourth commandment as the men who work. The opening of a public conservatory or reading-room, the running of a summer excursion train, the consequent necessity for work—these

BREAK THE SABBATH DAY.

The fact is that we are all Sabbath breakers, every one of us.

Christ was a Sabbath-breaker, the Jews said. "It came to pass," we read, "as He went into the house of one of the chief Pharisees to eat bread on the Sabbath day, that they watched Him." They watched Him, because they fully expected that He would break the Sabbath. He had many times already done things upon that day which went straight in the face of the fourth commandment, so the men of that generation thought. And, sure enough, "behold, there was a certain man before Him which had the dropsy." And it was written down somewhere in the 24 dreary chapters which the Rabbis had occupied with their expoundings of the law of the Sabbath, that one of the works which was forbidden in that comprehensive phrase, "no manner of work," was the exercise of healing. And so, here was a man in need, here was a deed which called for Christ's doing of it; this was one alternative. And here were the watching scribes, reciting the law over to themselves, and waiting to see what He would do. They stood on the other side. Upon one hand, a man; upon the other hand, the Sabbath. Christ hesitated not. Straightway he put aside all that the Rabbis had taught, and helped that man. Saying here, perhaps, as he said another time—saying it at least by his significant action—"The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath."

Everyone who interprets a law in a large way runs the risk of being a sinner to him who interprets it in a small way. The letter is always striving with the spirit, and the temporary with the eternal, and the local with the broad and universal.

There are two elements within this fourth commandment, two plain parts. There is an eternal and universal principle, and there is a local and temporary application of it. There is God's part and there is man's part. The two parts show themselves the more distinctly if we accept the opinion of scholars that the ten commandments, or the "ten words," as they are called in the Bible, were originally as brief, all of them, as several of them are still. This fourth commandment, for instance, is recorded twice in the Old Testament, and each time

IN A DIFFERENT WAY.

We are all familiar with the wording of it in the twentieth chapter of Exodus, but this is how it stands in the fifth chapter of Deuteronomy: "Keep the Sabbath day to sanctify it, as the Lord they God hath commanded thee. Six days thou shalt labor and do all thy work, but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son nor thy daughter"—and the rest of the list as it is given in Exodus—"that thy man-servant and thy maid-servant may rest as well as thou. And remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched-out arm: therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day." The resting of God from the act of making the universe is not mentioned. The deliverance out of Egypt is put in the place of it. Did God write the commandments in two versions? Did the chronicler make a mistake? Is the Exodus way the true reading, or the Deuteronomy way? Or is it this: that God gave the commandments and Moses set his comментary beside them?

"Remember that thou keep holy the Sabbath day." That, I take it, is the whole of the original fourth commandment. The rest was added by way of explaining and applying. Here is the statement of the eternal will of God. This touches us, and claims obedience from us to-day; while the rest, written for the Jews, has gone out with the old sacrifices, and with all else which was merely provincial and temporary in the Old Testament.

The word "holy" means "separate." The word "Sabbath" means "rest." Set aside a day of rest; that is what God commands, in the fourth commandment.

The two versions of the fourth commandment agree in selecting for this rest day one day out of seven. And whether this provision was written or not upon the tablets of stone, it is written plainly enough upon the nature of man. Rest is an eternal necessity for man. A stated rest is a necessity equally lasting and universal.

ONE DAY IN SEVEN

is the best of all possible arrangements. That is what experience says, setting its testimony here beside the commandment. They tried the experiment at the French Revolution, as everybody knows, of separating out one day from ten. And they found that men could not stand that. They found that it was needful for the well-being of that nation that the old law should stand.

Now out of the Old Testament into the New comes every word of teaching which is true eternally. And nothing else lasts. We read the Book of Psalms continually, and the Book of Leviticus very rarely. Why? Why, because these psalms are full of truth which is eternal, which was true then, is true now, and will be true in heaven; while these elaborate services and ceremonies have done their part and are worn out. They were true for men once; they fitted men once, just as the coats which we wore when we were 2 years old fitted us when we were 2 years old. They fit us no longer; we have outgrown them.

Even out of the commandments come down to us only those parts of them whose truth and application are as wide as the universal sky. And whatever was only wide enough to reach from the Valley of the Jordan to the shore of the Great Sea, and from Dan down to Beersheba, and no farther, that concerns us not—that was meant for Jews.

We separate, accordingly, in this fourth commandment, between the temporary and the permanent. Two things, evidently, are set forth here which are to last. These are the principles of stated rest and the separation of one day out of seven. These were built upon foundations laid so broad and deep in human nature that they must last. The other duty, however, which is set forth in the commandment, has passed away. I mean the selection, among the seven days, of Saturday,

THE JEWISH SABBATH.

There are two good reasons given, one in each of the versions, why the Jews should hallow Saturday. It was a reminder of the making of the world. It said once every week to every Israelite: God made you. That is a good thing for a day to say to a man. It was a reminder also of the escape out of bondage. You were slaves, it said, you were bondsmen in Egypt; now you are free. In this meaning of it the Sabbath was for the Jews a sort of Fourth of July every Saturday. It stood for liberty.

Now, those were good reasons for the setting apart of the seventh day out of the seven, just so long as they were good reasons; and not a day longer. When there were better reasons attaching to another day, that old obligation ceased. The Son of God upon the first day of the week won the victory of victories. He conquered death on that day; that meant all that the old Sabbath had meant, and a great deal more. "God made you," said the old Sabbath. "God loves you," said the new Sabbath. That was better. "You are free from that bondage under the dominion of Pharaoh," said the old Sabbath. "Yes, and from that harder bondage under the devil and sin and death," said the new Sabbath. That was better. That was so much better that by a kind of immediate impulse and instinct men who had learned these blessed Easter truths began keeping the new day. "The Lord's Day," they called it. They waited not for the decree of any council. They waited not for any formal abrogation of that old commandment. The Sabbath of the old time faded away just as effectually and just as naturally as the moon fades away out of the sky when the sun begins to shine. For a time men kept it. Kept both days together. But it got more and more dim, just as the moon gets paler. It was recognized as belonging to the night which was past. At last St. Paul says, "Let no man judge you in respect to the Sabbath days." Let no man hold that we Christians are bound to keep them. If any man will keep them, he may. Whoever will may keep both, but that old commandment, in the local and temporary part of it, is beneforth binding upon no man's conscience. That was the position of St. Paul.

And then, as parties rose in the church, some on the side of narrowness and some on the side of breadth and progress, the old Sabbath became a party badge, for a little while, and then passed away altogether. Only that which was eternal lasted.

NATIONAL GUARD NOTES.

LIEUTENANT PETTIT, of West Point Military Academy, spent a few days in the city during the week on business.

DURING the latter part of November, the Washington Infantry will give a number of entertainments at Old City Hall.

W. F. REED, formerly a member of the local guard, who has been living in Denver for some time, is back on a visit to friends in this city.

COLONEL W. E. MERRILL, of the Engineers' Department of the United States Army, spent several days in the city during the week. Colonel Merrill is considered an expert in his department.

THE members of Company I, of McKeesport, who had not already qualified as sharpshooters, contested yesterday for a handsome gold medal, which had been presented for that purpose by Captain Coon.

A NUMBER of members of Battery B were on the range at Saltworks yesterday, and some of them succeeded in making the requisite qualifying score. The regular drill night of the battery has been changed from Monday to Thursday.

INVITATIONS were issued during the week for the wedding of Hospital Steward Fred Eggers, of the Eighteenth Regiment. The happy event takes place November 7, at Trinity Church, and the boys are wishing him a bright future.

CADET CHARLES J. REED, of this city, who has been at West Point Military Academy for some time, is home on a sick leave, having recently been injured in an artillery drill. One of his classmates was run over by a gun carriage and killed in the same accident.

ADJUTANT GENERAL HASTINGS advocates a popular subscription among members of the National Guard of this State for the purpose of erecting a monument to the memory of General Hartranft. A circular will probably be issued to that effect during the coming week.

AT the close of the fiscal year there were 489,725 pensioners of the United States, drawing $64,246,552, or an average of $131.18 each. If these were all fighting men, and had that amount of money to spend on equipment, we should have an army of European proportions ready to take the field.

THE floral tribute sent by the officers of the Eighteenth Regiment to the funeral of General Hartranft, last Saturday, was one of the largest and finest floral pieces that ever left this city. It represented the regimental badge with the letters D. G. in the center, and stood nearly five feet high. It was the only token sent by any regiment, strange to say.

THE commission of Captain R. W. A. Simmons of Company H, Eighteenth Regiment, expires to-day. An election to fill the vacancy has been ordered for next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, and will probably be held by Lieutenant Colonel Rutledge. Captain Simmons will be re-elected to the position for five years more and it is thought without opposition.

MAJOR SAMUEL HAZLETT, Brigade Inspector of Rifle Practice, and Adjutant Hayes, of the Tenth Regiment, put in a day last week at the rifle range at Morgan's Crossing. Lieutenant Hayes qualified with a score of 40 points, while Major Hazlett succeeded in making the remarkably fine score of 47 out of a possible 50, thus adding another sharpshooter's bar to his string.

COLONEL L. A. WATRES Division Inspector of Rifle Practice, in a circular issued during the week, states that at the request of the brigade and many of the Regimental Inspectors of Rifle Practice, the season for target shooting will be extended to Saturday, November 16. As the date for becoming qualified marksmen will positively end at this time, all members of the guard who have not already earned their bars, should get out on the range at once.

CAPTAIN JAMES H. GAGEBY, of the United States army, who is well known to local members of the guard, has been instructed to open a recruiting office at Johnstown and take charge of the territory embraced in a number of the adjoining counties. Captain Gageby rendered considerable service at Johnstown during the past few months and some of the officers of the Fourteenth Regiment have started a subscription to purchase a sword and belt, to be presented to him at an early date.

CONSIDERABLE speculation is being indulged in as to who will be the successor to General Hartranft as Major General commanding the division of the National Guard. By reason of seniority of rank General Snowden, of the First Brigade, should step into the position, but there seems to be considerable opposition to his appointment, and most of it from his own brigade. General Gobin, of the Third Brigade, has also been spoken of; but it is extremely improbable that he would be allowed to jump General Snowden. The latest suggestion to the question is that Governor Beaver will hold the appointment over until his term as Governor of the State expires, and then make a move for the position himself, as at different times he has expressed himself as not wanting to leave the guard as long as he lives.

THE principal feature in military circles in this vicinity during the past week was the annual contest for the Brown & Hirth medal, which took place last Thursday on the range of the Fourteenth Regiment, at Salt Works. Heretofore the medal has been shot for by members of the Fourteenth Regiment only, but this year a number of entries had been made from the Eighteenth Regiment, and the contest brought out more or less rivalry between the two organizations. The result of the match, however, was favorable to the Eighteenth, as both first and second prizes were taken by members of that regiment. Ten shots were allowed at each range, 200 and 500 yards, making the possible 100 points. The score in the order of merit was as follows: Corporal W. S. England, Eighteenth Regiment, 82; Captain O. C. Coon, Eighteenth, 81; Private Hugunin, Fourteenth, 80; Private Haddock, Fourteenth, 79; Adjutant Robb, Fourteenth, 79; Lieutenant Lauer, Eighteenth, 78, and Quartermaster Patterson, Fourteenth, 77. There were a number of other contestants, but their scores were generally much lower than those given above. The medals won by Corporal England and Captain Coon are fine pieces of workmanship, and they can both be congratulated on their success.

LAYER ICE CREAM CAKE.

Two cups granulated sugar, three-fourths cup butter, beat to a light cream, then add one cup corn starch which has been stirred into one cup tepid sweet milk, beat this all together, adding one teaspoonful extract vanilla. Stir into this the well-beaten whites of seven eggs and two heaping cups of flour, having thoroughly mixed through the dry flour one and a half measures "Banner" Baking Powder. Bake in three layers.

Icing—Take two and a half cups granulated sugar, half cup water; boil three minutes; when cool add the whites of three eggs slightly beaten, and one tablespoonful extract vanilla.

The "Banner Recipe Book" is replete with valuable household information for baking tea biscuit, rolls, muffins and all kinds of fancy cakes; instructions for roasting meats, fish and fowl; for preparing French and mayonnaise dressing and making all kinds of desserts. Every lady should have one of these books.

Order a pound can with the Banner Recipe Book from your grocer. If he cannot supply the book, send your address to Banner Baking Powder Company, P. O. Box 245, Pittsburg, Pa., and we will mail it free.

HOUSE CLEANING WITH SCOURENE

Now is the season to keep on hand a supply of "SCOURENE" to do all your house cleaning. There is no known article for 5 cents that will so help through house cleaning and do it as well.

TO THE SICK AND AFFLICTED—

Dr. Wilford Hall's great discovery for health and longevity without medicine. This wonderful and revolutionary advance in physiological, therapeutical and pathological science is accomplishing such wonders in the restoration of health, even where persons had been given up by their physician as incurable, that we have no words to set forth its real merits. "Four dollars well invested." This is the verdict of thousands who have purchased his Health Pamphlet, and who congratulate themselves that henceforth they are forever done spending money for drugs and for worse than needless doctor bills. There is, perhaps, to-day no one man living who can show as many grateful acknowledgments for a personal favor as Dr. Hall can show for having printed his Health Pamphlet and brought it to the attention of the afflicted, he having received over 800 voluntary indorsements since last April. Pamphlets unfolding the system can be obtained from HENRY CORNMAN, Forward and Shady ave., oc27-81 Pittsburg, Pa., Local Agent.

A CAPITAL OPPORTUNITY

An Army of Renters Seeking Homes and Business Houses at Wilmerding.

The East Pittsburg Improvement Company has invested large sums of money in laying out the town of

WILMERDING

And in furnishing it with the most complete and extensive system of public improvements in Allegheny county, outside the cities, including sidewalks, sewers, water, natural gas and electric lights, and it now takes pleasure in calling the attention of wide-awake builders and investors to the opportunity afforded them by the great and growing demand for residences and business houses at Wilmerding. This demand comes especially from young and enterprising men and firms who have not sufficient capital to both build and stock large stores, but who are able and willing to pay a handsome rent for adequate facilities, or purchase buildings outright on long time. Many houses are now in course of construction, but not enough to fill 10 per cent of the requirements.

Information as to the kind and size of houses in greatest demand cheerfully furnished by the company, and special prices given on lots sold for immediate improvement.
