GROWTH OF A STORE.

KAUFMANN BROS' HELD A CELEBRATION LAST NIGHT.

Their New Building Formally Opened—Big Crowds—Good Music and a Speech by Mr. Israel.

J. Kaufmann & Bros. last night celebrated the completion of the addition to their mammoth building on the corner of Fifth avenue and Smithfield street, a building containing on its six floors and acres of space, over 91,000 square feet, half a million dollars' worth of merchandise; celebrated an enterprise which from a very small beginning 21 years ago has grown to surprising proportions through the energy of its proprietors, and their judicious system of advertising bringing back compound interest on the many thousands of dollars devoted to telling the public what the proprietors had to give them.

In 1868, J. Kaufmann came to this city a penniless youth, but through industry and sagacity, in a few months succeeded in establishing a little store on the corner of Twentieth and Carson streets, Southside, a store which served its purpose for that day, but which to-day could all be put into one of the mammoth windows of the present concern. By degrees they pushed their business regardless of expense, until to-day they have buyers scattered over the entire commercial world, in London, Paris, Berlin, etc., and themselves attend personally to the business in New York, and take the entire output of New England factories. At home they have 300 employes, and their weekly payroll is about $4,500, and the firm to-day, Jacob, Isaac, Morris and Henry Kaufmann, can complacently look back over the numerous trials in reaching their present attitude, feeling that their success is the reward of merit and hard work.

Three dynamos, furnishing hundreds of electric lights last night, showed the palatial establishment to the best advantage, while the two steam power elevators relieved the crush that could not find free passage on the capacious stairways. These were decorated artistically and gorgeously with flowers, and a magnificent floral representation of a bell added, gave a beautiful tropical appearing vista, that could only be thoroughly appreciated by a view from the third story.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather people attended by the acre, and every floor was crowded. The Cathedral Band was in attendance and will be to-night.

A. Israel, Esq., was the orator of the occasion. After referring to the occasion which brought out the crowd Mr. Israel told of the exertion of Kaufmann Bros., which had produced such grand results, and congratulated them on the success of their endeavors, and the audience agreed with them.

"Ladies and gentlemen, we are glad to say that we all rejoice in the prosperity of the men who have built this business, and hope for a continuance of their prosperity," he said. "Fortune seems to have smiled on them. Their energy and business ability have placed them among the leading citizens of this city, and it is such energy that has placed this city among the leading cities of the land. Five years ago this city was sleeping—suffering from commercial lethargy. Then the principal corner of the principal streets of the city, in the heart of the business community and opposite the postoffice, was a block that was a standing disgrace—a block composed of old shanties and rookeries. The men whom we to-night congratulate and whose success we celebrate, took hold, and have erected on that spot, which was an eyesore, this beautiful business structure, one of the most beautiful and extensive of its kind—retail—in the United States; one of the most beautiful in the world. It is through the enterprise of such men as Kaufmann Bros. that a State becomes greater; that a nation becomes great. It is the activity and undying energy of such men as the Kaufmann Bros. that all will join in congratulation upon this success, and know that with such men Pittsburg will become great.

"This building is stocked from cellar to housetop with clothing by Kaufmann Bros., and they will not only treat you to this beautiful sight, but will sell you their goods at the least profit consistent with sound business principles. They will not rest content with present triumph; it is not their nature, but will continue to go forward. We congratulate them that not only have they erected the most beautiful building in this section, but hope their success will go with them through life and know no end and the people of Pittsburg this night extend them their heartiest wishes for success. I thank you for your attention. [Loud applause.]

Among distinguished people present were City Controller Morrow, John N. Neeb, William H. Seif, of the Times; Mr. Campe, of the Chronicle Telegraph; W. A. Magee, Josiah Cohen, Isadore Coblens and Hon. A. C. Robertson.

The following letters and telegrams were received:

WASHINGTON, December 14, '89.

J. Kaufmann Bros':

GENTLEMEN—I am just in receipt of your telegram inviting me to be present on Monday at the dedication of your enlarged business block. I am sorry engagements here will prevent my acceptance of your kind invitation, but I take occasion to say that in common with the citizens of Pittsburg I rejoice at the success of which your enlarged business is an indication, and wish you a continuance of prosperity.

I am, etc.,
JOHN DALZELL.

Not an Electric Killing.

PITTSBURG, PA., December 16, 1889.

To the Editor of The Dispatch:

Referring to the horse which is alleged to have been killed by electricity upon our Observatory Hill branch, the Federal Street and Pleasant Valley Passenger Railway Company have this to say, after a carful investigation:

First—The horse did not step upon the rail at the time of its death.

Second—There was not sufficient electricity in the rail at any time to injure the horse, even if it had stood upon it.

Third—We have had the horse thoroughly examined by veterinary experts, who certify that certain diseased conditions of its stomach was the actual cause of its death.

Fourth—These rails have been in use on Federal st. for years, and if it were true that there is in them sufficient electricity to kill a horse, our road would be lined with dead horses. Besides there are now in operation 179 street railways in the United States using the overhead wires as a motive power, and neither man nor animal has as yet been killed thereby. The wild statements now in circulation will seem absurd when people get better acquainted with electricity as a motive power.

Fifth—We would cheerfully pay for this horse if conclusive evidence were shown that our electric current had killed it.

Respectfully yours,
D. F. HENRY, President.
