THE GREAT AMERICAN HEDGE PLANT "MACLURA" OR OSAGE ORANGE.—PITKIN'S SEED AND PLANTS.

A FEW years have only elapsed, since the introduction of this beautiful plant, but experiments have already shown that the great desideratum in "fence" is now discovered. The objections so many urged against other hedge plants, do not apply to the Osage Orange. It is easily propagated and of rapid growth, does not spread troublesome like the Locust, it bears flooding or drought; does not "spread from the root" has a very sharp thorn, and the wood contains an abundance of oil which renders it as indestructible by time or insects, as the Cypress or Cedar. It makes a cheap fence of singular beauty and impenetrable almost to a bird.

Many persons have become discouraged in their attempt to grow the Osage Orange, by their repeated failures in making the seed germinate, which may be attributed alone to the worthless seed usually sold, the vitality of which was destroyed in the process of extraction from the Orange.

As I am engaged in the business of raising plants, my seed is all gathered and preserved under my own care, and will be warranted good and fresh.

Also on hand, for sale, Osage Orange Plants all ready for setting in hedge. They can be forwarded to any part of the country, in season for Spring planting.

A descriptive pamphlet containing full directions for planting the seed, rearing the hedge, &c., sent on application to

ARCHITECT'S OFFICE,
OPPOSITE THE EXCHANGE BANK, RICHMOND, VA.

HENRY EXALL would make known to his friends and the public, that his attention is now exclusively given to the ARCHITECTURAL DEPARTMENT of his business, and finding the demand for his services in this line increasing constantly, he has established an office, and procured the assistance of one of the best Architects in the country. Mr. LYBROCK, who will generally be found in the office, was thoroughly educated in the business in the best Academies in Germany, spent several years in the study and practice of his profession in Italy and France, and for the last four years has had charge of some of the leading offices in New York, where he has planned and superintended many of the most prominent public and private buildings in the city and surrounding country, some of which are the Metropolitan and St. Nicholas H
