Richmond Dispatch.

MONDAY MORNING.....MARCH 24 1862

Captain John H. Morgan.

[From the Atlanta (Georgia) Commonwealth.]

The heroism and unflagging energy of this gallant gentleman and brave soldier, have attracted to him the attention of the nation, and challenged its admiration. Possessed of an ample fortune, and so situated as to enjoy life to the fullest extent, with scarcely a care to beclood its pathway, he generously gave up all, and sacrificed personal pleasure and ease at his command, and entered the service of the Confederate States, boldly resolving to stand or fall with them.

Capt John H. Morgan, we are informed by a very intelligent gentleman who knows him and to commend with his command, is a delineation of that noble old hero of revolutionary memory, General Daniel Morgan. He is now only thirty-three years of age, and is, consequently, in the prime and vigor of manhood. He is a native of Lexington, Ky., where he had property valued at $800,000. He has been married, but his wife died last fall, about three weeks before he linked his destinies with his beloved South, leaving him childless. His property having been confiscated, he is now homeless, wifeless, childless, with little to live, love, fight and die for, but the new Republic.

Originally he was Captain of the Lexington Rifles, which was company A, of Col. Hanson's regiment, of the State Guard of Kentucky; but in accordance with a firm determination to die in defence of the rights of his section, rather than live where those rights were trampled upon, he left Camp Clarity on the night of the 23d of September last, at the head of about forty-five or fifty picked men. A few were added to his command on the way South, and a large number of refugees placed themselves under the protection of his true and trusty men, so that in all he had with him between four and five hundred persons—a large majority unarmed refugees. With this handful of troops, and encumbered with this responsible charge, this gallant soldier managed by his address, skill, and bravery, to make his way through a tract of country where were quartered not less than fifty thousand of the enemy's troops, the leaders of which were aware of his design and on the alert and anxious to secure him and those with him. After three days travel, during which the party stopped only to eat, this heroic band with those they protected, reached a place of safety on Green river, within the Confederate lines. In his efforts to intercept them General Sherman placed two thousand troops at Magnolia, LaRue county, Ky.; but the vigilant Morgan, always watchful, ascertained the fact, and disappointed them of their prey, and evaded the trap set for him by taking a different route. To conduct such a party over so long a march, through a country filled with armed and unarmed enemies, on the watch for him, with fortified camps of Lincolnites at short intervals, required superior military skill and judgment, and a coolness and bravery, as well as tact, possessed by few, and should stamp the man who could do it as a military commander of no ordinary capacity. His subsequent exploits, some of which have been given to the public, and an account of others which we are promised, fully prove him to be this commander.

Captain Morgan's squadron consists now of four companies, viz: his own, the Lexington Rifles, which is Company A; Company B, Captain Thomas W. Allen, whose brother, Jack Allen, is on General Breckinridge's staff; Company C, Captain Bowles, and Company D, Captain Churchwell; numbering in all about four hundred and fifty men. Morgan commands as the senior Captain, having declined a superior appointment, because he had magnanimously pledged himself to remain with and share the fate of his brave followers. His command wear the plain costume of private citizens, and Captain Morgan himself is without any distinguishing mark, and always rides with his rifle in hand and ready for action.

The Adjutant of the squadron is Lieut. B. Duke, who married Capt. Morgan's sister the night before the squadron left Lexington. Much Captain; many subordinate officers and privates, of this daring, dashing body of warriors, are represented to be well qualified to head and lead them to battle and to victory, should their idolized commander fall upon the field. The entire squadron is composed of Kentuckians, the majority of whom are men of wealth and influence, and moral and social worth, or the sons of such—robust, stalwart, and hardy, all well mounted and amply equipped. Their undying devotion to each other, their commanders, and the cause they have espoused, accounts for their ardor and vigor, the enviable distinction they have already so gloriously won, and the terror with which they have inspired the invader's hosts. God grant that the gallant Morgan and his brave command may be long spared to strike terror into their hearts; and that for every one of them slain a thousand may spring up to take his place and avenge his death.

CONFEDERATE CURRENCY.—Any attempt to discredit Confederate currency is an offence that should be visited with severity upon the guilty. Whatever form it may assume; whether in the refusal of individuals to receive it in payment of debt, or for articles purchased; or in offering to dispose of it at a discount, it matters not; in either shape it is giving aid to the enemy, and the individual or corporation so conducting himself, or itself, is amenable as well to the law as to public condemnation. The soldiers of our army, who have gone to fight the battles of their country; who have sacrificed all the comforts of home; who have left wife and children to battle for Southern independence and save the country from subjugation, receive their pay in Confederate currency. With what spirit can they fight, when they learn that speculators at home are tolerated in depreciating it for the sake of greedy gain, if not from disloyal motives? But more than this—the Confederate Government itself has to be sustained, the army fed, munitions of war manufactured and purchased, and all through the instrumentality of the Government currency. Depreciate it, and who will dare to say that he is not aiding and abetting the enemy? The fact is as criminal as it is unpatriotic. It strikes a harder blow at the Government than the enemy have yet struck, and if tolerated by the Government, or the people of the South, it will produce most fearful results. For the sake of the South; for the success of our cause; that we may be freed from Yankee subjection, let all true men resolve, no matter what the pretence is, that there shall be no depreciation of the Government currency, and that those who are working to that end shall at once be arrested in their career.

Brokerage is a legitimate business, but in a time of war it is not legitimate for brokers or any one else to depreciate the currency of the Government, and to place that of the enemy, or which is in possession of the enemy, at a premium over it. More, it is forbidden to trade with the enemy by the law, and he that does so, that far, gives aid to the enemy, and commits a disloyal, if not a treasonable act.—Atlanta Intelligencer.

A GENTLEMAN who had a warm side for a young lady was making fun of a sack which she wore.

"You had better keep quiet or I'll give you the sack," replied the lady archly.

"I should be most happy," was the gallant response, "if you give it to me as it is, with yourself inside of it."

Further despondeth sayeth not.

LOST—About the 4th of March, a DRY-GOODS BOX, containing a military saddle and bridle, some bedding, a pair of holsters and pistols, and other articles, together with a sword belt, upon which was the owner's name, "G. LIGHT ARTILLERY BATTALION.

I am anxious to confer with the commandants of companies who have applied for the admission of their commands into my battalion. It is important to state at what time they can be ready for rendezvous. Immediate attention to this is necessary. If any persons desire to join this battalion, application may be made to me, and I can promise recruits that they can be placed under good officers and with gentlemanly associates.

I wish to secure a good company that may be ready for service in a short time.

mh 21—3t* F. J. BOGGS.

ATTENTION, VOLUNTEERS.—All who wish to go into service under favorable auspices can do so by applying at Charles Hunt's "Our House," or at the rendezvous, on 10th street, next to Crawford's, Saloon.—Fifty dollars bounty and perquisites. This is to be a Heavy Artillery company. Apply to Capt. WM. J. DABNEY,

ADJUT. & INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, March 20th, 1862.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 64.

[Extract.]

"VIII. Any proceedings taken by the authorities of the State of Virginia for the collection of the public revenue, are hereby exempted from the operation of General Orders, No. 9, 11, and 13, A. & I. G. O., of March 1st, 5th, and 14th, declaring martial law."

By command of the Secretary of War.

JOHN WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

COLONEL GODWIN'S REGIMENT.—We are authorized to raise a regiment of infantry, to be stationed near Portsmouth; and we have the assurance of the Secretary of War that the regiment will be kept near Portsmouth as long as any troops are required for its defence.

We are happy to state that we have every prospect of the early completion of the regiment.

We have established, for the present, our rendezvous at the winter quarters lately occupied by the Third Georgia regiment, situated near Portsmouth.

Volunteers and recruits will be received at our rendezvous by companies, squads, or singly, and they will be forthwith mustered into service, and be entitled to pay, subsistence, &c., from the time of their being mustered in. Persons raising companies for our regiment may advantageously make our rendezvous the headquarters for their recruits.

Companies now in service can re-enlist for our regiment by having it so designated by the mustering officer on their muster rolls when they re-enlist; and they will be transferred at the expiration of the present term of their enlistment from their present regiment to ours.

Individuals in any company, now in service, can re-enlist for our regiment by having it designated on their muster rolls at the time of their re-enlistment, and they will be transferred from their present companies and regiments to our regiment on the expiration of their present term of enlistment.

Re-enlisted men re-enlisting for our regiment will be entitled to join together and organize themselves into companies, and to elect their company officers.

All persons wishing to re-enlist for our regiment must re-enlist under the Confederate law.

Persons volunteering or re-enlisting for our regiment will be entitled to the bounty and furlough provided for by law.

Organized companies, or re-enlisted men in any numbers, will be mustered in for our regiment at any time, by application to the proper mustering officer, or to Lieut.-Col. J. F. Crocker, who will attend to their being mustered in.

Lieut.-Col. Crocker will superintend the rendezvous at the winter quarters lately occupied by the Third Georgia regiment, and he will be found there or at the Mason Hotel, Portsmouth, at any time. He will give any information required, and will receive recruits and make immediate provision for them.

All communications addressed to Colonel D. J. Godwin, Suffolk, Va., 14th Regiment Virginia Vol
