Richmond Dispatch.

FRIDAY MORNING.....JUNE 13 1862.

(Written for the Richmond Dispatch.)

THE PRAYER FOR MARYLAND.

Who can forget what's dearest—next to Heaven?
Who can forget the home from which he's driven?
Who can forget a gray haired father's groan—
A mother's shriek—a sister's trembling moan—
When caused by miscreants, such as now do stand
Around our own loved hearths, in dear old Maryland?

Oh, brothers! we may pray, but prayers will be in vain,
Unless we say them on the battle plain.
Tis there, when meeting the invaders, steel with steel,
We know that God will answer our appeal.
And give us strength to make the base pack flee
Yes, even a rough to set our loved ones free.

Then, let our chapels be the battle field,
Our prayer, for strength; our promise, not to yield
Oh! then from our dear land will come a ray,
Bright as "a star by night, a pillar of fire by day"—
A beckoning smile, a smile we all shall see
We'll follow it! No more a refugee!

The high land is well adapted to the cultivation of wheat and tobacco, with a large Prize Barn and other houses sufficient to cure 25 or 30 hogsheads of tobacco.
