THURSDAY.....FEBRUARY 9, 1882.

MANCHESTER AND VICINITY.

Aid for the Sufferers.—The meeting of citizens held Tuesday night at the court-house in aid of the sufferers by the explosion in the Grove shaft at the Midlothian coal-mines was so fully attended by the best of our citizens as to show at once that that untimely and lamentable casualty had taken the deepest hold on the attention as well as enlisted the warmest sympathy of all. A goodly sum was directly contributed, and a committee was selected, with Mr. Augustine Royall as chairman, charged with the duty of making further collections in aid of the sufferers. The meeting had the earnest sympathy of all classes of citizens, white and colored alike.

The Oarsmen.—The members of the Olympic Boat Club are prepared to commence practice just so soon as the weather will permit. Most of the apparatus of the Club (on Mayo's island) is in fine order. There are several hundred names on the Club's roll, and the question of a uniform will probably engage the attention of members at the first general meeting in the spring. The subject has been mooted before. The main thing is to get a uniform that will be sufficiently distinctive without being too conspicuous. Members do not want to run the risk of being mistaken for bogus naval officers, railroad conductors on a holiday, or members of a German brass band.

Lecture.—The announced lecture of Rev. Dr. Lambeth, of Richmond, to come off to-night at the Methodist church, is exciting considerable interest amongst the unmarried portion of the people, being on a subject ("Approaches to Matrimony") that interests most of the single members of the community. There is every indication that the lecturer will have a large crowd to hear him discourse on the congenial topic.

Briefs.—The proprietor of the stage-line will proceed immediately to have the vehicle which went in the river by the falling of Mayo's bridge repaired and made ready for continued use in the conveyance of passengers between Manchester and Richmond. The two horses drowned at the above disaster have been supplanted since by others. Yesterday one stage was on the line, coming by way of the Free bridge.

The contract for the recrection of the broken span of Mayo's bridge will be given out to-day. The work will be pushed toward completion with all speed. Pending repairs, a temporary bridge for foot-passengers is talked of.

The thoroughfares of this city were never before in a more deplorable plight. The soaking rains of nearly a whole month's continuance have just put them in a condition to make even a pedestrian angel weep, if not curse and tear his hair.

The new foundry, machine-shop, and other additions to the Danville depot buildings are about completed, and the railroad authorities will proceed at once to put in the machinery necessary to operate the new premises to the fullest extent. The company proposes hereafter to build their own engines as well as do all other sorts of work necessary in operating the road.

Eads's Ship Railway.

THE PROJECTOR STATES HIS CASE TO THE HERALD—SHIPS TO BE WHIRLED ACROSS THE ISTHMUS WITHIN FIVE YEARS—THE QUESTION OF BRITISH OR AMERICAN CONTROL OF THE TRAFFIC.

In a letter to the New York Herald, in which he clears up what might have been calculated to mislead the general reader in an article from that journal's Washington correspondent, Captain J. B. Eads gives some interesting facts about his great projected ship canal.

"Your dispatches from Washington" say—first, "that the House Committee on Commerce had decided to report adversely upon my bill"; second, "that it was said I was going to try to get the aid of the English Government," and third, "that any alienation, mortgage, or transfer to a foreign Government, or because of its becoming a partner, would work complete voidance of my concession from Mexico.'" The first and second statements are erroneous, and the third misleading.

I have no anxiety whatever about raising the money with which to build the road. If I live five years longer, I shall transport the largest-loaded vessels from sea to sea across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, whether the United States contributes one nickel in aid of the enterprise or not. To do this it is not necessary that I shall alienate, mortgage, or transfer to the United States or to any other Government any right granted by Mexico, nor do I expect to take the United States or any other Government into partnership with me. I have no intention of appealing to the British Government for aid in this matter. Should an American or a British board of directors of the company, when it is organized, choose to appeal to the British Government for the assistance which is asked of the United States, it will have the right to do so, and to receive such aid under the terms of the concession, without forfeiting a single right which Mexico has granted, if the United States shall have then declined my proposition. It is proper for my countrymen to understand distinctly that my grant is from an independent nation, and not from one of the Central American republics, which are under the protectorate or suzerainty of the United States, and which are included in the terms of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. The concession authorizes me to form a company which shall be distinctly Mexican, no matter what is the nationality of its stockholders, and it gives it the right to charge whatever tolls it pleases, so they do not exceed what is equivalent to about $8 or $10 per ton on the cargo carried by the ship. It leaves it as free to alter its tolls as the California railway to New Orleans is to carry grain for nothing to that port when the harbor of San Francisco is full of British or American ships, and to charge any price it chooses when it has thus destroyed their competition.

Article 27 of the concession is as follows:

"In consideration of the magnitude of the work, Eads or the company may obtain aid from any foreign Government, either in money or in guarantees, and may hypothecate the net revenues to it, and may transport its mails, ships, property, and appurtenances, free of charge, and may reduce the tariffs on its commerce and the prices of passage. In this case making the same reduction to the commerce of Mexico."

The same article gives to any Government entering into such agreement with the company the right to enforce it in the courts of Mexico. I offer to carry the commerce of the United States for ninety-nine years across the isthmus at half the rates that shall be charged on all other commerce but that of Mexico, and for this I ask the guarantee of 6 per cent. dividends for fifteen years on $50,000,000 of the capital stock of the company. For any money advanced, under the guarantee the Government is to receive bonds payable in fifteen years, and in the event of their non-payment at maturity, they are to be received at 10 per cent. premium in payment of tolls on American vessels. Hence every dollar of advance made to the company is to be repaid. Certain rights are also to be given to the United States by which the dividends of the company are not to exceed 8 per cent., thus giving it to a certain extent the right to limit the tolls that are to be charged. Should the Government accept the proposition and the control of the stock afterward pass into the hands of English capitalists, the United States would have acquired a vested right to have her commerce carried at half rates for ninety-nine years, no matter who were the directors of the company, and no other Government could then be called upon by the company to furnish its aid to the road, because the grant does not authorize it to accept the aid of more than one Government. Should the United States decline the proposal I shall certainly be justified in going where I can get the necessary funds most easily. Should the stock then or afterward be controlled by English capitalists, the commerce of the United States will be very differently affected. British commerce will then doubtless be favored to the fullest extent, and the commerce of the world, except that of Mexico, may be made to pay all that it will bear. More than this, the company will have the right, if it chooses, to ask the aid of the British Government, under the terms of the concession, and if given, what is called in England "a fighting interest" in the works would be then acquired by Great Britain, which would never be surrendered except at the end of a war that would cost probably ten times as much as the entire ship railway.

British experts of the very highest standing and ability have, with wonderful unanimity, pronounced the ship railway entirely practicable, but no part of the guarantee asked of the United States Government is to attach until an absolute proof of this shall have been given. There is not a single engineering difficulty in the entire project which begins to compare with the uncertainty, delay, and costliness involved in undertaking to construct a harbor for the Nicaragua canal at Greytown. The San Juan river once discharged its waters at this place, and ships of war, twenty years ago, were then able to cross the bar. The main volume of the river is now discharged through the Colorado river, which runs through the territory of Costa Rica, and the immense volume of drifting sands moving along the coasts of the Caribbean sea have almost if not completely obliterated the harbor of Greytown.

I am anxious that the ship-railway shall be built and worked in the interest of American commerce, and that my countrymen shall not be misled as to the real merits of the proposition which Mr. Page so summarily attempted to throttle. If Congress sees fit to decline the proposition, the United States will be estopped from objecting to its acceptance by another Government, and any talk afterward about our right to dominate a portion of Mexico or to control the inter-oceanic transit across her territory will be as ridiculous as for France to forbid a Swiss railway making a rebate on through traffic to a house that had saved it from protest, or for England to assert the right to regulate rates on the New York Central railroad because Canada is at the other end of it. Very respectfully,

JAMES B. EADS.

Brief News Items.

Six cases of small-pox and one death from that disease were reported in Baltimore on Tuesday.

A runaway team ran into a funeral procession at Pittston, Pa., Tuesday, and Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Lloyd, of that place, were seriously if not fatally injured.

The winning horses at the Charleston Jockey-Club races on Tuesday were Ballast, Helen Wallace, and Kent.

The dead body of William Rice has been found in a small swamp in Gwinnett county, Ga. He is supposed to have been killed by illicit distillers, as his life had been threatened.

No more bodies were found in the ruins of the old World building in New York Tuesday, although fourteen persons who were known to be in the building are missing.

The Masonic Royal-Arch Chapter of Mississippi, after two days' session at Jackson, Miss., adjourned Tuesday night. William Richards, of Satarlia, was elected Grand High Priest.

At Chicago, Ill., Monday, Andrew Olsen, fearing an attack of small-pox, drank nearly three quarts of whiskey, believing it to be an effective preventive. He died in a few hours.

Mr. Andrew D. Hunt, of New York, Tuesday notified the Stock Exchange that he was unable to meet his engagements. He was short of stocks to the amount of $26,000.

Rev. John B. Scanlan, for the past three years pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic church, Summit Hill, Carbon county, Pa., died on Sunday in his fifty-fourth year. He was ordained priest by the late Archbishop Bayley.

Hon. Charles M. Pond, of Hartford, Conn., has sold his trotting-horse Clingstone to William L. Gordon, of Cleveland, Ohio. The price is said to be $30,000. Clingstone is a bay gelding, seven years old, out of Gretchen by Rysdick, and has a record of 2:19, made at Fleetwood Park last summer.

Rev. Daniel F. Richardson died from paralysis at Hanover, N. H., Tuesday; aged seventy years. He graduated from Dartmouth College and Andover Theological Seminary, and was professor of Latin and Greek at Wake Forest College, North Carolina, from 1834 to 1839. He was an active Baptist preacher for twenty years, ex-postmaster of Hanover, and a prominent Mason.

Captain Billups, of the steamship McClellan, of the Miners' and Merchants' line, from New York, reports the steamship Alleghany, of the same line, which sailed on Tuesday for Providence, aground three miles below Seven-Foot Knoll. The McClellan made an effort to get her off, but was forced to relinquish assistance by pulling out both quarter-bits.

In New York, early Tuesday morning, John O'Hara and Mary Mandeville, while stupefied from liquor, had a narrow escape from being burned to death; and but for the timely arrival of Roundsman Back, of the east Fifty-ninth-Street station, the entire tenement, No. 239 east Fifty-ninth street, which contains twenty families, might have been burned to the ground with loss of life. The couple named set fire to their bed, and were rescued with some difficulty. At the Yorkville Police Court they were each fined $10.

Dramatic and Musical Notes.

The Chicago Herald says Minnie Hauk has not been properly appreciated here.

Emma Abbott offered $500 to have the Opera-House at Peoria called the Abbott Opera-House. The offer was declined.

Maurice Strakosch's last advertising dodge concerning Miss Thursby is "poison." He is distributing printed slips in which it is stated that Miss Thursby swallowed a glass of hair-dye instead of port wine, and was only saved by the stomach-pump.

Sara Bernhardt fainted during her performance in the "Dame Aux Camilias" at Genoa Monday. She spat blood in the third act. The audience cried "Enough!" and quitted the theatre.

Sardou's latest Parisian success, Odette, adapted by Augustin Daly, was produced Monday night at Daly's Theatre, New York, before a large and fashionable audience. It was its first production in America.

Madame Patti went to hear Miss Emma Abbott sing in St. Louis the other evening. At the end of the second act the diva made her way behind the scenes, and, as a reporter writes, "the artistes kissed and kissed each other." "The Abbott stage kiss, with its wealth of lusciousness and warmth," continues the reporter, "was more than doubly discounted every time the ladies' lips met." Madame Patti called Miss Abbott "my darling little pet," and otherwise made a great to-do over her. It seems that Miss Abbott was regarded by Patti as a protégé when the former was in Paris several years ago.

A Clergyman's Canary.

[From the Titusville (Pa.) Herald.]

The Rev. Dr. Day is fond of canaries, and the bay window in his library is occupied by a large number of these favorite songsters, to some of which are given the freedom of the entire room at times. One of these is very much interested in penmanship, and will watch Dr. Day write by the hour. The black line left by the pen in its travels is the greatest of mysteries to the bird, and he will follow it as it spins out across the page, and make frequent examinations, first with one eye and then with the other, but can never quite understand it all, and after scratching his head with his claw he will follow the line across again. This he will keep up by the hour, and it would be interesting to know his thoughts on the subject—if canaries ever do have thoughts.

A Rejected Lover's Mad Act.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., February 7.—At Phillipsport, Sullivan county, yesterday afternoon, Frederick Mesner, of Ellenville, shot himself in the presence of a young lady named Orvelia David because she refused to marry him, and died shortly afterward. VACCINATION.
USE ONLY NON-HUMANIZED VIRUS.
In an article in the Nineteenth Century Dr. CARPENTER, the distinguished English scientist, says that the alleged inefficiency of vaccination, often asserted since Dr. Jenner's time, has been due to the fact that the virus used in vaccinating persons who afterward took the small-pox was not fresh from the cow, but had been weakened by long transmission through the human subject. Vaccine virus not fresh from the cow, but "humanized" by many removes, affords no protection, and may communicate dangerous maladies. But Dr. Carpenter details many facts to show that good bovine virus is free from nearly all the objections which can be urged—and with a good deal of force—against "humanized" virus.
We are constantly receiving supplies of BOVINE (non-humanized) VIRUS from the Pennsylvania Vaccine Company, who have facilities not surpassed by any vaccine farm in the country for producing reliable virus fresh from the cow.
