SIR MICHAEL COSTA.

Sketch of His Career—His Various Compositions.

Michael Costa, whose death was announced Wednesday, was born in Naples in February, 1810. He belonged to a good family, and was of Spanish descent. Early in life he showed a taste for music, and began to compose while yet a boy. His father encouraged him, and sent him to the Royal Academy of Music at Naples, where he had the advantage of studying under the famous Tritto, whose reputation then was very high. At fifteen he wrote a cantata called "L'Imagine," which was produced at the Theatre of the Academy. Its reception was encouraging, and it was not long before he wrote another cantata, "Il Delitto Punito," which was performed also in the same place, and which exhibited remarkable merit. On leaving the Academy he became conductor of the orchestra of one of the minor theatres at Naples. There he produced his first work for the lyric stage—"Il Carcere d'il Degonda." It was highly successful, and ran so long that the young composer came under the notice of Barbaja, the Italian impresario, and he engaged him to write an opera for the San Carlo. "Malvina" was the result. Its pure Italian music captivated the audience, and it was played at various theatres in the chief Italian cities. "Malvina" was written when Costa was only nineteen, and while he was yet under the instruction of Zingarelli. The maestro sent him to England in 1829 to take part in the Birmingham Musical Festival. He was welcomed so warmly that he determined to make England his home. In 1831 he was engaged as conductor of her Majesty's Theatre, and soon after he produced his charming ballet, "Kenilworth," which he followed up by two others equally successful, "Une Heure à Naples" and "Sire Huon." Four years later he went to Paris to conduct his opera, "Malek Adel," which he had composed especially for the Italian opera in the French metropolis. His work was much applauded, and he went back to his post at her Majesty's with renewed confidence in his own ability. In 1839 he was made a naturalized subject of Queen Victoria and in 1844 brought out his opera, "Don Carlos." Mme. Grisi, Signor Lablache, and Signor Mario were among the performers, and the piece was emphatically pronounced to be admirable. For two years longer he wielded the baton at her Majesty's and then was made conductor of the Philharmonic concerts and conductor of the Royal Italian opera at Covent Garden. While fulfilling the duties of this post Mr. Costa wrote the work by which his name will be best remembered, the oratorio of "Eli." Excepting only Mendelssohn's "Elijah" and "St. Paul," this work is generally admitted to be the finest oratorio produced during the last hundred years. It was originally performed at the Birmingham Musical Festival in August, 1855, Mme. Viardot Garcia, Mme. Castellan, Mr. Sims Reeves, and Herr Formes undertaking the principal solos. Its reception was most enthusiastic. Soon after its production a massive piece of plate was presented to him as a testimonial at a banquet in Birmingham, presided over by Lord Willoughby de Droke. The subject of the testimonial was appropriately taken from the first chapter of the First Book of Kings, illustrating the presentation in the Tabernacle of the infant Samuel to Eli. On the silver plate at the back the following inscription appeared: "To Michael Costa, in commemoration of the first performance, on the 29th of August, 1855, of 'Eli,' an oratorio generously composed by him for the Birmingham Musical Festival, in aid of the funds of the General Hospital. As a tribute to his genius, and as a record of his disinterested liberality, this testimonial is presented by the noblemen and gentlemen of the Committee of Management."

The first performance of "Eli" in London was an event of considerable interest. It occurred at Exeter Hall on February 15, 1856, Queen Victoria, the Prince Consort, and a brilliant suite being present. The audience, forgetting the silence usually observed during the progress of an oratorio, frequently burst into energetic applause, and finally were aroused to extraordinary enthusiasm by the splendid battle song, "Philistines, hark! the trumpet sounding," declaimed with wondrous force by Mr. Sims Reeves. At the conclusion of the oratorio Mr. Costa received an ovation of the most flattering description.

From that date his career was brilliant. He was made permanent director of the Sacred Harmonic Society, and his pen was ever active. Fine accompaniments to various oratorios were written, among which "Naaman," perhaps, is the best. In 1869 he was made a knight, and the King of Wurtemburg in the same year gave him the royal order of Frederick, "as a mark of the admiration entertained by his majesty of the oratorio of 'Eli,' performed under the composer's direction at Stuttgardt in the previous November." Sir Michael was also a knight of the Turkish order of the Medjidieh and was decorated also with many other orders.

A HEROIC DEED.

A Train with One Hundred Passengers Saved from Destruction.

D. Rafael R. Quintero, a Mexican, who for several years was employed at Pittsburgh, Pa., as a mechanical engineer, and is now an inspector on a Mexican railroad, has recently distinguished himself as a hero. He was engaged at work at the intersection of two Mexican railroads, and, by a daring feat, succeeded in saving the lives of nearly one hundred persons. The work, which was under the direction of the contractor, T. Mariano Brito, two inspectors, and the district judge, consisted of raising one of the tracks in the vicinity of an embankment and placing a cross-piece in position. A large gang of men were employed, and they had just succeeded in suspending the cross-piece over the ditch, or embankment, when the shrill whistle of an approaching train from Merida was heard. All present became filled with terror, as the passengers were doomed to a terrible death, as were also the workmen and horses, who were unable to leave the track at that moment on account of the enormous weight of the cross-piece which they suspended. In that moment of anxiety the terror-stricken workmen were informed that the station-master of Progreso had ordered a white flag placed on the bridge beyond as a signal that the road was clear, which increased the terror of the horrified workmen. The train came thundering along, when Quintero, procuring a red flag, ran up the track and gave the danger signal. The engine was blowing off steam, and thick clouds of black smoke issued from the stack, so that Quintero was invisible to the engineer, and the train came along with full speed. The brave inspector did not move from his position, and when the engine was within a few feet of him he hurled the flag to one side, flung himself upon the seat of the engineer, and pressed violently on the lever and succeeded in stopping the train not thirty meters from the yawning ditch, over which stood the gang of pale, terror-stricken workmen. The train was crowded with passengers. Twenty minutes after it was stopped almost the entire population of the city of Progreso were at the scene and broke out into exclamations of delight over the heroism of the young inspector. The district judge subsequently arrested the station-master and engineer and conductor of the train and instituted an investigation.

Bill Nye, Josh Billings, and other humorous writers, have contributed their best efforts to the ST. JACOBS OIL FAMILY CALENDAR, 1884-5. The same can be had by inclosing a two-cent postage stamp to the SUPPLY DEPARTMENT, THE CHARLES A. VOGELER COMPANY, BALTIMORE, MD.
