DANIEL J. KELLY,

Here is a Real Cause Bell.

In a recent article analyzing Lord Rosebery's character, the London Saturday Review says: "If he regards as he pretty certainly does regard, the fads of the old Radicals as doctrinaire nonsense, he has at least coquetted with the new labor theories the new Socialism, and other things which, in the judgment of some of us, would make England little better worth living in than the United States."

GENERAL NEWS OF INDUSTRIES

The New Steel Casting Combination and What It Really Signifies.

OF COURSE IT IS NOT A TRUST

One of the Members Say It Is Not, Which Naturally Settles the Doubt. Economies of Management Are to Be Introduced and Details So Adjusted as to Facilitate Business—Activity in the Anthracite Trade Is Rather Mild Just Now—Other Industrial Gleanings.

Further insight into the character and composition of the new American Steel Casting company of Chester shows the following steel plants to be interested in the trust: The Standard Steel Casting company of Chester, the Norristown Steel company, the Sharon Steel Casting company of Sharon, the Solid Steel Casting company of Alliance, O.; the Syracuse Steel Foundry company, and a majority interest in the capital stock in the Pittsburg Steel Casting company. The capital stock is $3,200,000 and an issue of $700,000 in bonds was made. The bonds were used to buy the Standard plant in Chester, all of the other concerns taking stock in the new company. President Bole, Treasurer Williams and Managing Director Daniel Egan will all reside in Chester, and the great business, which will class with Carnegie's, will be managed from that city. It is further stated that the consolidation of interests is in no way a trust and not intended to squeeze the trade. On the contrary, the very considerable lessening of expense to individual firms will enable the union to bring the price of steel castings down to that of iron castings. The new concern will commence business on April 1. The statement that it is intended to antagonize Carnegie is in no way true, as Carnegie does not make steel castings.

A Duluth dispatch says that the output from the iron range in St. Louis county for the coming season is practically determined. It will be in the neighborhood of 3,000,000 tons, an increase of nearly 1,500,000 over that of last year. Of this total about half will be shipped by the Minnesota Iron company; 500,000 tons from the Chandler mine and an equal amount from the Norman and Iron King mines in the Mesaba range. The intentions of Mr. Rockefeller as to his properties on the Mesaba range have not been definitely announced, but it is certain that the output of the consolidated mines with that of the Biwabik, leased by Mr. Oliver, of Pittsburg, and the Missabe Mountain, controlled by Mr. Kimberly, of Sharon, will exceed 1,000,000 tons.

If the sales agents at the meeting in New York tomorrow reduce prices it may act as a stimulant, but the Philadelphia Stockholder thinks there is room to doubt whether it will. The trade is awaiting the announcement of spring prices and spring rates to tidewater, not yet adjusted. It is, however, by no means certain that activity will immediately follow such announcement. The trade has learned wisdom by following a waiting policy, and the belief very generally prevails that there will be more or less shading of prices even after the spring circular is issued. Among the larger producing companies there is evinced a desire to continue working in harmony, to limit production to demand, and to maintain prices, but a more restless feeling exists among the smaller companies and individual operators. The latter know, however, that their only opportunity for profit is to work in sympathy with the larger companies; they view with apprehension a possible repetition of developments like those prior to the time when Mr. McLeod guided them safely over the verge of bankruptcy.

The Real Estate Trust company of Philadelphia placed on record at Wilkes-Barre yesterday a mortgage against the Pittston Street Car company for $200,000. The money is to be used to equip the road with electricity.

The eminent French scientist, Gaston Tissandier, describes an absolutely new method of determining the quantity of foreign gas contained in air by the passing of the gaseous mixture through sonorous tubes. The invention is credited to M. E. Hardy, a distinguished French physician, who calls it the formenephone, and intends it primarily for the detection of fire damp in mines. One of the best detectors of gas yet known is the safety lamp, but it has the radical objection that the aureole around the flame which indicates the presence of dangerous fumes does not show itself until such a quantity of gas is present as constitutes a critical danger. The formenephone, on the contrary, gives the indication in a few seconds. The principle on which it is based is that when two organ tubes, giving the same pitch, are subject to the influence of two equal blasts of pure air, the sound produced is identical. But, everything else being equal, if one of the tubes is blown into a mixture of air and gas of different density, the sound of the tube is correspondingly modified, and the vibrations produced are more or less frequent as more or less gas is mixed with the air. This occurs with such unvarying results that M. Hardy has been able to lay down a regular scale of vibrations and their significance for the guidance of those using his invention. The apparatus consists, briefly of two blowers, or pairs of bellows, enclosed in tight-air metallic envelopes. One of these cases contains pure air only, and to the other is conducted by a pipe the air of the part of the mine to be tested. The air in each receptacle is blown by the disengagement of a weight on the top of the bellows, whereby downward and forcible pressure is immediately produced, into the organ tube with which each receptacle is provided. The resultant sound is so intensified by a special adaptation of the microphone and the telephone that it can be distinctly discerned and a comparison of the difference in sound of the two tubes gives an absolute indication of the quantity of gas in the air tested.—Black Diamond.

MINOR INDUSTRIAL NOTES:

The result of the New England election on last Wednesday is generally regarded as meaning control of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

The published statement that the Pennsylvania Railroad company was interested in the North river bridge project to unite New Jersey and New York is officially denied.

Coal operators of Maryland propose a 10 cents a ton reduction to miners, who will probably accept it.

Only twenty-eight boats have reported at Port Clinton to carry coal to Philadelphia via the Schuylkill canal. Ten years ago 800 were in use.

The new $40,000 bridge over the Lehigh river at Hokendauqua was accepted recently by Lehigh county.

By a consolidation of three companies, the Sulphur Mines company, of Virginia, becomes one of the largest sulphuric acid producers in the world.

The Bradford oil operators, Thedy & Northrop, are sinking an oil well at Folkston. Thousands of acres of oil land in Wyoming county have been leased by the United States Pipe Line company, and it is expected this will soon become a petroleum community.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

Stocks and Bonds.

NEW YORK, March 27.—A reduction in the posted rates of sterling exchange, the direct result of purchases of American securities for foreign account and the general belief that the seigniorage bill will be vetoed, led to a higher demand for stocks early today. The industrial stocks scored the widest changes, American Tobacco rising 1¾ to 83¾; preferred, 1¾ to 99; Lead, 1¼ to 37¼; preferred, 1½ to 80½; Sugar, ¾ to 90¾; common Oil, preferred, ⅞ to 69⅝. The changes in the railway and the anthracite coal group were slight during the early trading, but generally in an upward direction.

Late in the afternoon the market received under the leadership of Burlington and Quincy which fell from 84¾ to 82¾, and Chicago Gas which declined from 61⅛ to 62⅝. The loss outside of these stocks was equal to ¼@¾ per cent. American tobacco, however, sold down 1⅝ to 82⅝. The reaction was ascribed in some quarters to reports of damage to the winter wheat crop, while others contended that the reaction was the result of sales by traders who believed that the effect of the seigniorage veto had been discounted. At the close the market was steady to firm. Total shares were only 129,260.
