"FAVORITE SONS" TO BE OPPOSED BY ROOSEVELT

Fairbanks and La Follette May Be Permitted an Indorsement.

Taft Managers Watching Big States With Great Zeal.

The "big States" are being looked after with especial zeal by the Administration in its conduct of the Taft Presidential movement. By "big States" is meant particularly New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Ohio, and Illinois. Massachusetts, as the leader of New England is considered to possess a significance quite out of proportion to its bunch of votes in a nominating convention.

Secretary Taft's coming trip to Iowa is also significant of a considerable interest in that State. The President sets great store by Iowa. He knows it is devoted to him, and he considers it a remarkably accurate index of Western opinion. He hopes that it may get in line early for Taft, and encourage such a movement in other States of the big Northwest.

Massachusetts presents an undeniably difficult problem is management, because of the attitude of Senator Crane, who is regarded as one of the chief "conspirators" against the program of perpetuating Roosevelt policies. Crane is a power in Massachusetts. As a governor there he was distinctively of the progressive type. As Senator he has been regarded as of the opposite sort. But his people have confidence in him, and the State will go as he wants it to go, unless special and determined efforts are made to change its direction.

"Favorite Son" Program.

The President sees most danger in the "favorite son" program that has for many years been used by the machine politicians as the basis of their manipulation of conventions. Around the banner of a favorite son the politicians of each State have been able to gather their supporters; the "right men" could be put on the delegations; and then when all the favorite son movements were shaken up in the bag by the assembled politicians in national convention, they could agree on the man most serviceable to the largest number, and nominate him.

The President fears that move at this time more than anything else. He recognizes that the favorite son in each particular case is quite likely to be innocent of any part further than an honest desire to try out his own chances. But, because he realizes that the local candidate is the politician's refuge, the President proposes to keep the local candidates out of it. He is going to demand Taft indorsements from just as many States as possible. Apparently no favorite sons except Fairbanks and La Follette are to be permitted an unopposed home indorsement.

For Vice Presidency.

There is, of course, the possibility of using second place on the ticket to bring some one of the favorite-son States into camp. Massachusetts might get the place for Guild, New York could have it for Hughes, or Iowa could get it for Cummins. There has been talk, too, of La Follette in this connection. But nobody imagines that La Follette would take second place on the ticket.

Pennsylvania is being watched by the Taft managers with great care. There has been a serious suggestion of putting forward Justice John P. Elkin as a candidate for Penrose's seat in the Senate, and making him the new State boss. That would put Pennsylvania where it could be controlled. There would be no danger of a Knox movement taking it away from the Roosevelt-Taft column and voting it at the end for some representative of an anti-Roosevelt combination. Senator Penrose is watching the White House just as sharply as the Administration people are watching him, and he proposes to make no costly mistakes if he can avoid it. But like all the anti-Roosevelt politicians, he is in terror because of the fearful uncertainty as to where the President may "break out next."

Cannon and Hughes.

Governor Hughes and Uncle Joe Cannon are two men whom to discipline is not easy. Neither shows a disposition to come back to the reservation and give up his weapons. Each presents the possibility of a big State going against the Administration's plans. The Speaker may be jarred by the intimation that has gone forth that, unless he is good, he will be deprived of his scepter and czardom.

Hughes looks today like the one real reliance and hope of the opposition to the Roosevelt-Taft program. He is independent enough to suit the most independent. He is the same sort of progressive as Roosevelt. And he is without certain weaknesses which the politicians regard as menacing Republican success in case Taft is nominated.

Baltimore city went Democratic by a big majority the other day, and all analyses of the result agree that it was because the colored Republicans either remained away from the polls or voted for the Democrat. Why? Brownsville. That's all.

Then there is the union labor vote. From many States come reports which insist that Taft's anti-labor injunctions, together with the Debs-Moyer-Haywood-Harriman letters, have so far aroused suspicion among the labor unions that Taft would be certain to suffer severe losses. One of the plans under consideration, indeed, by the anti-Taft forces is to exploit these issues before the delegates are chosen and frighten the country away from nominating him. Perhaps it can be done, but it doesn't look very probable at present.

Don't waste your money on some unknown, unreliable make that will always be out of order, or that you could never obtain extra parts for, should the occasion require. In order to give the best of service a sewing machine must run swiftly, easily, and noiselessly, and with as little wear as possible.

The White Sewing Machine

Is the fastest and easiest running Sewing Machine made. The rotary shuttle on the White has a continuous movement in the one direction—the needle dips but once in making a stitch, instead of twice—doing away with all vibration and enabling the machine to do twice the amount of work that could be done on an ordinary sewing machine. THE WHITE SEWING MACHINE RUNS ON BALL-BEARINGS, making it run easily and swiftly, and taking up all unnecessary wear to which the parts would be subjected.

Be sure to see THE WHITE SEWING MACHINE before making your selection. We can show you points of superiority that are found in no other makes, and our demonstrator will be pleased to give you any instructions you may need.
