INAUGURAL CIVIC SECTION CHOSEN

Col. Robert N. Harper Announces Appointment of Biggest Committee Yet.

qDEVOL ADJUTANT GENERAL

Three Meetings of Assistants Are Called for the Holiday Weeks.

Appointment of the civic section committee for the March inaugural, the largest committee yet selected, was made by Col. Robert N. Harper, inaugural chairman today.

Another appointment formally announced was that of Brig. Gen. Carrol A. Devol, retired, as adjutant general for the inaugural parade.

General Devol, who formerly was assistant to the quartermaster general of the army, and an American Red Cross executive, will lay out the route of the parade, arrange for places of assembly, assign organizations to places in the parade, and assist Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott, grand marshal, in handling details.

Three Meetings.

Chairman Harper today called three meetings of his aides for the holiday weeks.

The advisory council will meet next Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock at headquarters in the Willard.

The finance committee will meet Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Cabinet room of the Willard.

The inaugural committee will meet Wednesday, January 2, at 11 o'clock, in the red room of the Willard.

SANTA ARRIVES IN FRENCH WAR ZONE

Not a Single "Tommy" Forgotten in Huge Christmas Mail.

MOTOR TRUCKS KEPT BUSY

25,000 Bags of Letters and Parcels Received Daily for Soldiers.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Dec. 22 (Delayed).—

"'Twas the week before Christmas in the war zone of France,
And the needs of the season made old Sarta dance.
He swooped off his reindeer; he scooped his old sleigh—
And handled his gifts on transport and dray.
Then dodging through shells and barrages of bombs—
Each second in danger of being blown into crumbs;
Screened by his whiskers, he kept on the go,
And missed not a Tommy in the whole bloomin' show."

For the third time Christmas is about to arrive at Armageddon. Supply trains bearing man-killing explosives for once have yielded the right of way. Lorries in hundreds, driven by business-like Kris Kringles clad in khaki, have strewn gifts up and down the entire line—proving that the milk of human kindness is stronger than the red wine of war.

Nobody Is Forgotten.

Santa has now finished the job. Nobody has been forgotten, even the Tommies without families have received their Christmas puddings, chocolates, cigars, Christmas cards, cakes and trinkets.

Despite the titanic dimensions of the undertaking, St. Nicholas has completed the job without a single hitch. Weeks ago parcels began arriving—the Canadian mail bags among the first. During the past fortnight an average of 25,000 bags of letters and parcels have arrived in France daily—these being solely for the troops. But by every night the postmaster has been able to announce a clean slate on the day's business.

Anzacs Had to Reach.

The distribution of gifts to the Anzac contingent was the most difficult job of all. The Anzac divisions are always shifting, so the bags were sent to London for a first sorting. There they were addressed to the various divisions and sent along to the bases in France. Thence by rail they went to the rail heads, and there lorries transferred them to field distribution centers. At that point postal orderlies carried the mail to the company quarters—and then the parcels and letters went direct to the men in the trenches.

Only forty-eight hours is usually required to transport rations from London to the trenches and some 1,400 sorters are usually employed in handling mail addressed to the expeditionary force. But Santa Claus multiplied that number many times in order that the Tommies might have their presents in time.

Fighting as Usual.

The outgoing mail is five times normal—soldiers sending their home folks money, trench souvenirs and post cards, the latter mostly silken strips. The average soldier writes one letter a week and receives four. This ratio is being maintained at present and over 2,500,000 letters and parcels are sent homeward daily.

With the approach of the holidays, notwithstanding the fact that the fighting is proceeding the same as usual, the Christmas spirit is alive inside each warrior. Despite the grenade warfare on each side, the war god is almost unrecognizable, disguised with a big tummy and cotton whiskers.

No dugout is too deep, no trench too exposed to discourage his paradoxical mood.
