OFFICE: No. 15 Quincy Street.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1872.

The Liability of Wheeling as a subscriber to the W. & L. E. Railroad.

The Register the other morning denied flatly that in case this city became a stockholder in the W. & L. E. Railroad Company it would be liable for double the subscription. The editor knew he was trying to conceal the truth and deceive his readers. Col. ELLIOTT, who is quoted by the W. & L. E. folks as good legal authority, as he is, on Ohio law, and who is not authority to the W. & L. E. project, said the same day that the Register was wrong and that "of course Wheeling would be liable for double her subscription to the W. & L. E. Railroad." The editor of the Register knew this as well as anybody. The Constitution of Ohio [Art. 13 sec. 2] provides:

"Dues from corporations shall be secured by such individual liability of the stockholders and other means as may be prescribed by law, but in all cases each stockholder shall be liable, over and above the stock by him or her owned, and any amount unpaid thereon, to a further sum of land equal in amount to said stock."

The general corporation law of Ohio, under which the "W. & L. E. Railroad Company" was organized, provides, in pursuance of the foregoing constitutional provision:

"All stockholders of any railroad, turnpike or plank-road, magnetic telegraph or bridge company, or any joint stock company organized under the provisions of this act, shall be deemed and held liable for an amount equal to their stock, for the purpose of securing the creditors of the said company."

The Register pretends to say that a corporation outside of Ohio could not be sued for such liability. That is simply absurd. When an individual anywhere in the United States becomes a member of a corporation organized under the laws of any state, he takes upon himself precisely the same liabilities and responsibilities in that relation as if he were an inhabitant of the State, and the creditors can recover from him just as well in one place as another. The responsibilities and liabilities of a corporation in the same case are precisely the same as those of an individual. The city of Wheeling as a stockholder of a railroad company organized under the law of Ohio, can be sued and proceeded against by the creditors precisely as any individual stockholder could in the State of Ohio or in any other State. We are surprised that a newspaper which pretends to ordinary intelligence should argue the contrary. It would be very strange if a West Virginia corporation could become a stockholder in an Ohio corporation, and reap the (supposed) advantages, without incurring any liabilities.

In this connection we beg attention to one point. By Mr. ALTHEER's amendment, the Second Branch of Council provided that the subscription to the Railway Company should go to the Bridge Company without passing under the control of the Railway Company. That is prevented to protect the city, so far as that subscription would be endangered in the hands of the Railway Company. Yet where are we to get protection against the risk of the additional $300,000 for which we become liable to the creditors of that company? As the case stands, Wheeling would be the only stockholder liable for any large sum, and in case of a break down she would be the easy mark against whom the creditors would proceed. The Ohio townships, townships and counties are not liable as we would be, for they are not stockholders in the company and cannot be. It is only the few and small individual subscribers who would be on the same footing with this city in respect to liability to the creditors.

Under the contract, as we understand, the New York sharpers, Wilson & Co. would be creditors. They have got the thing fixed so that the company is a mere plaything of, theirs, and if the work of construction is ever begun, they could easily break down the company just whenever it might best suit their purpose to do so—assuming that the company should have vitality enough to begin work—and then as creditors they would come down on this city for the additional $300,000.

Gentlemen of the First Branch of Council, there are wheels within wheels in this matter. It is complicated and dangerous. It is your duty to proceed with caution and to act only upon the clearest, fullest information and the most unquestionable guaranties.

Concerning Stationery and Stamps.

The Martinsburg Bee solemnly calls upon the Auditor to refuse to audit the bills for the stationery furnished for the use of the two Houses of the Legislature by the Sergeants-at-Arms, in obedience to their order. This, we submit, is carrying the joke a little too far. We have no doubt the provision in the Constitution on the subject of allowances to members of the Legislature had its inspiration in a very pitiful sort of demagoguery; but we can have no part in that equally contemptible demagoguery which seeks seriously to magnify itself as virtue over a perverted construction of that provision. If the Constitution did actually forbid furnishing the two Houses of the Legislature with the stationery necessary for the convenient transaction of their business, it would be a different thing. We are rather inclined to strict construction, and we should say let the Constitution be respected if the Legislature has to shut up shop. (Nor are we prepared to say that such a shutting up would be a public calamity.) But the Constitution does nothing of the kind. The 33d section of Chapter VI provides what compensation the members shall receive for their services. Then it adds a cautionary provision that they shall not have any other allowance or emolument, directly or by indirection, in the shape of postage, stationery, newspapers &c. To get at the meaning of this it is to be considered in connection with the rest of the section. The pay of members in money is made to them individually and for their private use and the intent plainly is that they shall not increase that pay by allowing themselves any other articles or commodities as individuals for their private use or emolument. The provision is perfectly proper. But this does not forbid the furnishing of all necessary materials and accommodations for the use of members acting in their capacity as members, in the transaction of the public business. It is proper to provide chairs for the members to sit on and halls for them to sit in, and tables and desks for them to write on. It is equally lawful, necessary and proper to provide them with paper, pens and ink to write with; and in short with all other reasonable conveniences that can facilitate their transaction of the public business. It is equally proper that the postage on public documents furnished to the Legislature for distribution, and on all correspondence of members which relates to their duties as such, should be paid out of the contingent funds of the two Houses. It is as ridiculous to say that members of the Legislature shall pay this class of postage and pay for the stationery they use in the discharge of their duties out of their own purses, as it would be to say they should bring their own desks and chairs, rent their own halls and furnish fuel to keep themselves warm. The constitutional provision contemplates no such absurdity.

The proper thing for the two Houses to do is to order the Sergeants-at-Arms to provide members with what they need for the transaction of their business as members, and just as they need it, to be used as the property of the State for public purposes and not to be made use of as allowance to members individually or to be appropriated by them for their private use or emolument. Possibly a member will sometimes appropriate the property of the State thus put in his hands; but against that kind of petty pilfer there seems to be no complete security. The remedy is in the hands of the people. They have only to leave at home persons who are capable of such petty peculation.

Concerning Guaranties.

If the First Branch of Council is to concur in making the city liable as a stockholder of the W. & L. E. Railroad Co. for $300,000, the matter of guaranties for the building of the road into this city is a thing of first class importance. It was ignored in a surprising manner by the Railroad Committee in the preparation of the ordinance. The City Solicitor protested that the ordinance as drawn by the Committee contained no safe guaranty and that officer interlined suggestions, but they were ignored by the Committee. The advocates of the W. & L. E. Road in the Second Branch intended that there should be no guaranty in the ordinance. They meant to force it through, just as it came from the Committee, last Tuesday night, and only desisted from this purpose upon a demand from a friend of the Bridge that immediate consideration of the document should be deferred and they printed for public information. As finally passed by the Second Branch, the railway ordinance gives the city no adequate security. The action of the Council last winter, the act of the Legislature, the vote of the people investing Council with discretion to make the subscription, all contemplated that the completion of the road into the city was to be absolutely secured before the city was involved in further debt. The act of the Legislature, under authority of which all subsequent steps have been or are to be taken, provides:

"But before the subscription authorized by this act shall be made, said Railroad Company shall give a guaranty to the Council of said city that it will construct its road into said city and make its eastern terminus, and have its depot grounds and buildings thereon, within the corporate limits of said city east of the east channel of the Ohio river."

The people of the city voted on the faith that this guaranty would be required and nearly all the members of council gave a written pledge before the election that it should be. The Railroad Company has given no guaranty yet, and though the subscription has passed through one branch of Council, nothing has been said about requiring it. What is the "guaranty" here contemplated? It would be such a bond executed by this Company as, if violated, would enable the city to recover all it might lose by its subscription and additional liability. If the Company were a responsible one, its own bond would be enough. Not being so, some responsible endorser is needed. Is anything of this kind proposed or contemplated by either Company or Council? We have as yet no indication of it. The Council cannot require less than the security provided by the Legislature. If they do, their action will be invalid and will afford ground for an injunction. But they may require more; and if it appears that a mere guaranty to construct the road into the city and make its terminus here—leaving it still uncertain whether the whole line will ever be completed so as to make a bridge and terminus worth something—the Council ought to require more. Because, unmistakably, the people of this city intend and desire that their money shall be put into this enterprise only upon an absolute certainty that when it is it will insure the completion of the line. Such a security as this would be afforded by the plan we suggested last spring, viz: That the city's bonds should be placed in the hands of trustees to be delivered by them only when the work was completed. In this position, under a contract with the Company, they would afford a basis for credit, and a company that had any ability or character could go on and build the road and on its completion would receive the bonds, and neither party would be cheated. Nothing less than this, in dealing with the W. & L. E. corporation, will give the city complete security. If the bonds are paid over as the work progresses, the subscription may be exhausted and the work be scarcely begun; and then so, far as the present resources of the Company indicate, the work would be likely to stop and our subscription would be sunk, just as that to the Marietta road was; and we should go on for thirty years squeezing taxes, like blood, out of our people to pay a debt that never did us a dime's worth of good.

Gentlemen of the First Branch of Council, this is too serious a matter to be trifled with. If you intend, in the teeth of an express constitutional prohibition, to go on and consummate these subscriptions, then at least you cannot afford to omit any precaution needed to give the city the amplest security. You should bear in mind that the people of this city are intelligent enough to know whether such security is afforded them or not; and if your action when it is done will not stand for then those of you who support it will soon be in a position to wish you had never been born.
