SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 29.

THE Register affects a great deal of high souled contempt for the recent dalliance on the part of the Republicans of West Virginia with the Greenbackers. And yet it is fully aware that in every State in the Union in which it was possible for the Democratic party to daily with the Greenbackers it has done so. This was conspicuously the case in Maine, and hardly less so in Ohio and Iowa. The Democratic party is always ready to "pool its issues" in any State where anything is to be made by doing so.

IT was very cruel in Senator Ingalls to observe that the trouble about Senator Henry G. Davis' infatuation as to rottenness in the Treasury Department consisted in an "incapacity to understand the difference between a change in the mode of stating the public debt and a change in the debt itself."

The New York Tribune expresses with warmth a great deal of indignation at the persistency of Mr. Davis' attempt to smirch the National credit despite the fact that his experts could not show anything wrong—any money stolen or lost. It delivers itself thus on the subject:

"Throughout the investigation the dullness of the chairman of the committee on this subject was a permanent stumbling block. But, if Mr. Davis has been ridiculous all this time, there has also been a mixture of malice in his ignorance; and the behaviour of some of his party friends who are trying to make political capital by pretending to believe in his crazy disclosures is little less than infamous. The honor of the Government is attacked; the good name of the whole American people is besmirched; the financial credit of the United States is assailed, and a dangerous blow is thus struck at what Mr. Ingalls calls "an indispensible element of the national life." There is hardly any language too strong to denounce the "public enemies," who are joining hands with the thick minded Senator from West Virginia in attacking the public credit because they hope that the scandal may help their selfish schemes in the campaign.

Necessity for a Harmonious Nomination At Chicago.

In 1876 Hayes' majority over all in Illinois was only 1,971. The vote stood as follows:

Hayes	278,232
Tilden	276,661
Cooper	17,536
Others	427
Total vote	564,856
Hayes over Tilden	1,571
Hayes over all	1,974

Now suppose that a large dissatisfied element should be created in the Republican party of that state by reason of the action of John A. Logan and his comrades at Springfield, who can say that General Grant has a desirable prospect at the polls next November? That there is a very large and very decided anti-third term element in Illinois is manifest enough. For instance, Mr. Ben. Davenport, formerly of Wheeling, who is known to be a reliable man, tells us that he has met but two Grant men among all his business acquaintances in Chicago. At his boarding house where there are twenty-eight Republican voters, only one of them is a Grant man. This shows how very decided is the feeling against General Grant's renomination in Chicago. It is no wonder that the people of that city resent Logan's high handed usurpation at Springfield.

It is to be remembered that in Illinois the delegates to the State convention from each of the nineteen Congressional districts met in district meetings, and appointed two delegates to represent each of such districts in the National Convention. After this had been done according to unbroken usage, the State Convention by a majority vote, under the dictation of John A. Logan, repudiated the appointment of twenty delegates selected by ten of the Congressional districts, and deliberately selected twenty other persons to represent those districts.

The West Virginia case has frequently been quoted as analogous to this case of Illinois, but there is this difference: The West Virginia Republican Convention simply made a choice between two sets of delegates reported by delegates from the Third district. The Sherman men made a majority report and the Blaine delegates a minority report, and the Convention adopted the latter. In Illinois the selections presented by the Blaine districts were wiped out altogether, and other selections were substituted for them by a committee of nineteen designated for that purpose by the Logan crowd in the Convention. This is the difference between the two cases. The Congressional districts were at least recognized in West Virginia as the proper sources wherefrom to receive nominations.

But Illinois is not the only State in which the effects of the Chicago nomination must be carefully weighed. Pennsylvania is a Blaine State. The Republican party there is overwhelmingly for Blaine. And no wonder, seeing that he is a native of the State and has shed such great honor on the land of his nativity by his public career. That he has been cheated out of the delegation from that State the recent election in Lancaster county, along with other evidence, plainly shows. The election was held to nominate a Congressman, a batch of Legislative Representatives, involving the choice of a United States Senator, and a county ticket.

The County Central Committee last February, instead of calling a County Convention, took it upon themselves to appoint delegates to the State Convention, and they sent none but third-termers. These packed agents of Don Cameron, when they reached Harrisburg, elected two Grant delegates—A. J. Kaufman and William K. Seltzer—to the Chicago Convention, while it was a notorious fact that the Republicans of Lancaster county were overwhelmingly for Blaine. From that day on there was trouble in the "Old Guard" county, which is a small State of itself, and which gave Hayes 8,000, being nearly half the majority he got in the State. The dissatisfaction becoming intense at the dishonest trick played upon the party, it was finally agreed by both the factions to submit the question of Presidential preference to a direct vote at the time of nominating the county ticket, which was last Saturday. The third-termers professed to be confident of sweeping the county. The contest was naturally a hot one, and the vote cast very large. The Blaine men swept the county by nearly a three-fourths majority! The Blaine men not only swept the county, but took the precaution to elect two Blaine delegates to the Chicago Convention. It had been previously agreed that this should be done.

If similar elections could be held throughout Pennsylvania, similar results would follow in the large majority of cases. And yet Pennsylvania, by the trickery of Don Cameron at Harrisburg, has 58 delegates at Chicago instructed against Mr. Blaine, when there should be nearly that many for him.

It is the height of folly in a political party, not to recognize a burst of public sentiment like this one in Pennsylvania, and like the popular demonstration a few nights ago in Chicago, against Logan's usurpation. The great county of Lancaster, in Pennsylvania, resented its disfranchisement at Harrisburg, and sent a protest to Chicago in the shape of two Blaine delegates. Such an exhibition of public sentiment cannot be ignored with impunity. Those who attempt to smother it must expect a day of settlement.

"A thousand years scarce suffice to form a State,
But an hour may lay it in the dust."

A political party may in like manner, by a great mistake, be laid in the dust. The Democratic party made a great error in 1860; it attempted to force a policy and a candidate upon the country, that the country overwhelmingly repudiated, and from that day to this it has paid the penalty of exile. Its return to power, depends wholly upon the result at Chicago.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

The Blaine Men Hopeful—The Adjournment Question—Yellow Fever Safeguards—The Mt. Vernon Association—West Virginia Politics.

WASHINGTON, May 27, 1880.

Special to the Intelligencer.

THE FIRST BALLOT.

In conversation to-day with one of the Blaine managers here, I learn that there is no question but that the combined vote of Blaine, Sherman and Edmunds, together with the scattering complimentaries known to be intended as such, will prevent any choice at Chicago on the first ballot, and it is confidently claimed that this being the result, the opposition can be concentrated elsewhere than upon the third term candidate. On the other hand it is urged that if General Grant cannot be nominated on the first ballot, it will develop such strength for him, as to draw out the wavering element for him on the next and secure his nomination beyond any peradventure on the second. There are very few of the active leaders of either wing left in Washington, and all the working force of each candidate will be settled in Chicago by Saturday.

ADJOURNMENT.

A good deal has been written on the subject of the probable adjournment of Congress, and it is as fruitful a subject of speculation as ever. The Senate Committee on Appropriations will consider the adjournment resolution on Saturday, the present indications being that a majority of the committee will recommend the 10th of June as the date of winding up. A good many of the members who expect to attend the Chicago Convention have signified their intention not to return here, and as seventy in all have directed their mail to be sent elsewhere than Washington after this week, it may require some work on the part of the Sergeant-at-Arms to prolong the session after Monday.

YELLOW FEVER SAFEGUARDS.

It is a matter of regret that the House manifested an inclination to cramp the National Board of Health in its efforts to deal with the yellow fever scourge, that annually threatens us. In conversation with Dr. Billings, Assistant Surgeon-General, who is detailed from the army as a member of the Board, he gives me some facts and figures as to the past and prospective work of the Board, which I will be glad to furnish you hereafter. It may be sufficient to say at present that the plans adopted to prevent and check the almost annual visitation of yellow fever, to some portion of the country, are intelligent and comprehensive and would doubtless prove efficient if not trammeled by foolish parsimony, or exploded States rights doctrine.

THE MOUNT VERNON ASSOCIATION.

Quite a number of the leading members of the Mount Vernon Association arrived here yesterday, and went down the river to attend the annual council of the regent and vice regents, of the association. I did not notice the arrival of the accomplished member from your own State, Mrs. Washington, who took such an active part in former years, and who will be kindly remembered by the excursionists who accompanied Gov. Mathews on the visit to Mount Vernon some time since. During a recent visit, I noticed the West Virginia room in the old mansion, which is capable of being made much more interesting and attractive than it is at present.

DECORATION DAY.

There will be the usual services here next Saturday in connection with the observance of Decoration Day. It falls this year on Sunday, but the President to-day issued his order closing the departments on Saturday, which has been set apart for strewing the graves of soldiers in and about Washington with flowers, and listening to appropriate addresses. Senator Mat. Carpenter is expected to speak at Arlington, and among the orators at other places James Cunningham, Jr., of Wheeling is announced to speak at the Congressional Cemetery.

It is admitted here that the best specimen of this class of oratory delivered in Washington since the war was the address of Gen. Goff, delivered three year's since at Arlington.

OUR BOAT SELLS.

I sent you a few lines yesterday evening about the Hanlan-Riley boat race, more perhaps than the affair warranted. It was in most respects a repetition of the Courtney affair, the only difference being that Riley rowed over the whole course. The Canadian amused himself a good deal with his ambitious competitor, pulling away from from him at the start, and managing to beat him a quarter mile in thirty-seven minutes, which it will be remembered is nearly one minute slower than when he rowed last Wednesday week with no real competitor. The suggestion that we adopt Hanlan as our National oarsman is a good one.

STATE POLITICS.

I don't hear much about State politics here now, discussion of West Virginia matters being overshadowed by the nearness of the National Conventions. I understand, however, from prominent Democrats here, that Mayor Jake Jackson, of Parkersburg, has got tired of being knocked around to suit the convenience of the managers, and has turned his Gubernatorial boom loose again, not to be tied up this time until after the election. This will be bad news for my venerable but agile friend, Mr. Faulkner, whose boom as it is, is a little attenuated, and requires a good deal of Washington wind to keep it alive.

CONGRESSIONAL.

As to Congressional nominations and renominations, I can only say that the delegation here seem to be resting easy. Kenna and Martin say they are all right for renomination, and do not seem to be alarmed about re-election. Your distinguished representative from the county of Harrison, who has a somewhat harder row of stumps to extract, was consoled by the appearance of ex-Speaker of the third House, Charley Caldwell, who, arrayed in that historic duster, arrived yesterday morning, bearing glad tidings of great joy from Wetzel. H.

How to Buy Meats.

N. Y. Tribune.

There are not many housekeepers who have any thorough knowledge about meats; the condition in which it ought to be bought, its appearance when it is unfit for use, and the most desirable cuts to purchase. This sort of knowledge is most essential, especially when there exists so little conscience on the part of the butchers as seems to be the case in New York. One fact should be remembered, and that is, that in the purchase of meats, as in everything else, the best is the cheapest. Cheap joints always include large bones and sinews; such joints should be used for soups and gravies. For roasting and boiling choose the better cuts, such as legs of mutton and veal, ribs, sirloin and round of beef.

Ox beef when good and young has a fine open grain and a good red color; the fat is firm and white. The grain of cow beef is closer and the color darker. When the fat of beef is hard and skinny, and the lean of a deep red, it is very inferior. Old meat may be known by a line of horny texture running through the meat of the ribs. The cuts known as chuck, brisket and round are the least desirable. Sirloin and middle ribs are best for roasting.

In choosing mutton, look for firmness and fineness of grain, good color and firm, white fat. Lamb should be fresh. The vein in the neck of lamb is blue when the meat is fresh, but turns green when kept too long. In buying, hindquarters, examine the kidney; there will be a slight smell if the meat is not as fresh as it should be. Veal is generally preferred when the meat is delicately white, but it is better flavored and more juicy when the color is a little deeper. To test veal look at the loin; if the kidney, which will be found on the under side of one end of the loin, is enveloped in firm and white fat, the meat is certainly recently killed and undoubtedly good. The kidney always changes first, and then the meat is flabby and spotted and the suet soft.

State Superintendent of Schools.

Col. Ben. Byrne, ex-State Superintendent of Schools, is working for a renomination at the hands of the Democracy. The Colonel put in part of his time making political speeches when he was in office before. The present Superintendent doesn't seem to do anything of that kind. Perhaps, on this account, he does not suit the Mercer county Democracy, who, as we notice, have instructed for Col. Byrne.—Intelligencer.

Pretty well put in. We have a distinct recollection of the complaints made about the ex-Superintendent in that regard, while in office, and his speechifying was generally considered in very bad taste.—Wellsbury Herald.

MR. JOHN PARKINSON, father of J. L. Parkinson, Esq., of this place, returned last Saturday from an extended trip over the West. He visited Illinois, Iowa and Kansas, and reports the wheat crop in some sections of that country as not very promising, and says that in central Kansas it is a total failure.—Moundsville Commercial.

Malaria Destroyed.

G. A. J. Gadbois, of Brockville, Canada, certifies that he was prostrated by a malarial disease contracted in Texas, and was quickly and completly cured by the use of Warner's Safe Pills and Safe Bitters. He adds: "I shall never travel in that climate without your Safe Pills and Bitters as a part of my outfit." TH&S
