COUNTED OUT.

The Senator-Elect in the Second District is Named James H. Furbee, but He Will Possibly Not Get His Seat.

FAIRMONT, W. VA., October 27.

Editors Intelligencer.

The Democratic counting out process has been instituted in this county. Fifty of the legal voters of the county have been disfranchised. An outrage has been perpetrated by our "returning board" which arouses the just indignation of all good citizens.

While the commissioners conducting the election at the court house were assembled on the fifth day after election, to canvass the vote of the county and declare the true result, a report reached them that Hon. James H. Furbee, the Republican-Greenbacker, had defeated our own Fountain Smith, the Democratic candidate, by five majority. It would never do to let Smith be defeated when a half dozen votes would save him.

The two Democratic members of the Board at once began to cast about for the necessary votes. Their truly impartial Bourbon eyes fell on Benton's Ferry voting place. By some inadvertence the commissioners conducting the election at that place had failed to sign the poll books. At that voting place Smith received 17 votes and Furbee 32. Here there were the necessary votes, coupled with an excuse for the outrage—if, indeed, such a miserable subterfuge can be called an excuse. Thereupon, the "returning board," by the vote of two Democrats to one Republican, solemnly and with deep regret, of course, proceeded to disfranchise 49 of the legal votes of Marion county. The poll books, tally sheets, ballots and all other papers connected with the election at Benton's Ferry were properly returned to, and in the possession of the commissioners, at the Court House.

The Commissioners who conducted the election at Benton's Ferry, and who are three of the best and most respectable citizens of the county, appeared before the board and offered to sign the poll books, to identify all the books and papers kept by them, and the package containing the ballots, and give all the information necessary to enable the board to ascertain the true result of the election, but were not permitted to do so.

The law defining the duties of the Commissioners conducting the election at the Court House as a canvassing board is plain. Section 29 of the election law in the Acts of the Legislature of 1872-3 provides that "the Commissioners may, if deemed necessary, require the attendance of any of the Commissioners or other officers or persons present at the election to answer the questions under oath respecting the same, and may demand the production of the ballots, poll books and certificates concerning the said election filed in the office of the Clerk of the County Court, and make such other order as may seem proper to procure correct returns, and ascertain the true result of the said election in their county."

The gist of which is, that they shall ascertain by any legal means the true result of the election. If the officers conducting the election verify the result, that is sufficient proof to make a prima facie case. If, however, they fail to do so, then the Commissioners should seek such other evidence as will enable them, if possible, to "procure correct returns and ascertain the true result" of the election. It is manifestly not the duty of the Commissioners to seek an opportunity to reject legal votes, but on the contrary to ascertain what the legal voters did.

The special court which tried the case of Loomis vs. Jacks, very properly says: "Many provisions of the law in regard to the manner of holding and conducting the election and counting the votes, and certifying the result, must be held to be directory only, and intended to point out to inexperienced and ignorant persons who sometimes act as election officers, a plain, easy and direct way by which they are to attain the great end of their creation, viz: To ascertain the true result of their election. When the true result of a legal election has been ascertained by the officers charged with the performance of this duty, no irregularity, mistake, or even fraud committed by any of the officers conducting the election, or by any other person, can be permitted to defeat the fair expression of the popular will expressed in said election." Sec. 6, West Virginia Reports, page 615. The courts with unanimity hold that where it is possible to ascertain the true result, no irregularity, misconduct, or failure on the part of an election officer, or other person, shall vitiate an election otherwise legal. The true result of the election held at Benton's Ferry could have been ascertained with as much certainty as at any other voting place in the county—in fact was as well known to the Commissioners. And yet this poll is rejected, and as a consequence Mr. Smith elected. Will Mr. Smith accept the office under the circumstances? Can he afford it? We think not. Mr. Smith made many speeches during the canvass and never forgot to condemn President Hayes for accepting an office to which Mr. Smith said he was not elected. In the face of all this can Mr. Smith accept an office which he knows full well he was not elected? It is but just to Mr. Smith to say he was not at Fairmont when the "returning board" was in session. He had nothing to do with the affair so far as I hear. I do not think he would have. His friends think he will denounce the Commissioners and decline the seat. If, however, he insists in holding the seat, Mr. Furbee should contest it. The Senate of West Virginia, however partisan, will not dare disregard the well settled and long established law of this State, as well as of almost every State in the Union. The technical rules insisted upon by our Commissioners would exclude the polls of more than nine-tenths of the voting places in the State. Indeed, it is extremely doubtful whether at a single voting place in the State the strict letter of the law was followed in every respect. To insist upon such a rule would be to render elections absolute farces—all would depend upon the whim, caprice, intelligence or honor of the election officers. This is putting a premium on ignorance and fraud. Happily for us, such is not the law. X.

BOB INGERSOLL'S ELOQUENCE.

His Tribute to the Men Who Fell in the War for the Union.

The past rises before me like a dream. Again we are in the struggle for national life. We hear sounds of preparation—the music of the boisterous drums—the silvery voices of the heroic bugles. We see thousands of assemblages and hear the appeals of orators. We see the pale cheeks of women and the flushed faces of men, and in the assemblages we see all the dead whose dust we have covered with flowers. We lose sight of them no more. We are with them when they enlist in the great army of freedom. We see them part with those they love. Some are walking for the last time in quiet, woody places with the maidens they adore. We hear the whisperings and the sweet vows of eternal love as they lingeringly part forever. Others are bending over cradles, kissing babes that are asleep. Some are receiving the blessings of old men. Some are parting with mothers who hold them and press them to their hearts again and again and say nothing, and some are talking with wives and endeavoring by brave words, spoken in the old tones, to drive from their hearts the awful fear. We see them part. We see the wife standing in the door with the babe in her arms—standing in the sunlight sobbing. At the turn of the road a hand waves. She answers by holding high in her loving hands the child. He is gone and forever. We see them all as they march proudly away under the flaunting flags, keeping time to the wild, grand music of war, marching down the streets of the great cities, through the towns and across the prairies, down to the fields of glory to do and die for the eternal right.

We go with them one and all, we are by their side on all the gory fields, in all the hospitals of pain, on all the weary marches. We stand guard with them in the wild storm and under the quiet stars. We are with them in ravines running with blood, in the furrows of old fields. We are with them between contending hosts, unable to move, wild with thirst, the life ebbing slowly away among the withered leaves. We see them pierced with bolts and torn with shells in the trenches by forts, and in the whirlwind of the charge where men become iron, with nerves of steel. We are with them in the prisons of hatred and famine, but human speech can never tell what they there endured. We are at home when the news comes that they are dead, we see the maiden in the shadow of her first sorrow. We see the silver head of the old man bowed with the last sorrow.

The past rises before us, and we see four millions of human beings governed by the lash. We see babes sold from the breasts of mothers. Cruelty unspeakable! Outrage infinite!

Four million bodies in chains—four million souls in fetters. All the sacred relations of wife, mother, father and child trampled beneath the brutal feet of might. And all this was done under our own beautiful banner of the free.

The past rises before us. We hear the roar and shriek of the bursting shell. The broken fetters fall. These heroes died. We look. Instead of slaves we see men, women and children. The man of progress touches the auction block, the slave-pen, the whipping-post, and we see homes and firesides, and schoolhouses and books, and where all was want and crime and cruelty and fear, we see the faces of the free.

These heroes are dead. They died for liberty; they died for us; they are at rest. They sleep in the land they made free under the flag they made stainless; under the solemn pines, the sad hemlocks, the tearful willows and the embracing vines. They sleep beneath the shadows of the clouds, careless alike of sunshine or of storm, each in the windowless palace of rest. Earth may run red with other wars, they are at peace. In the midst of battle, in the roar of conflict, they found the serenity of death.

I have one sentiment for the soldiers, living and dead: Cheers for the living, and tears for the dead.

J. P. CAIN, Esq., a prominent lawyer, of Augusta, Ga.: "Tutt's Pills have been used in my case (Torpor of the Liver) and in my family, with marked success. I believe them superior in all biliary derangements to any pills ever made. It is the only remedy that has in my experience proved effectual for nervous headache. They never fail."
