MEDICAL.

A VETERAN SOLDIER.

Mr. G. F. BOWLES, No. 21 Common street, Lynn, Mass., says:

"While in the army, at the battle of Spottsylvania, I fell while getting over a rail fence and was badly injured and left for dead, but after a time I was picked up by my comrades; and upon examination it was found that my back was badly hurt and my kidneys seriously injured, and I have suffered the most excruciating pain since, and could obtain no relief although treated by several physicians and I had given up all hope of getting help when I was recommended to use Hunt's Remedy. I purchased several bottles at one of our drug stores in Lynn, and began to use it as directed, and can now attend to business and am free from the pains I formerly had; and I wish to say to my friends and comrades that Hunt's Remedy will do all that is claimed for it, and worthy of all praise. You can use my testimony when you have occasion to, as I most heartily recommend it to all that have kidney or liver troubles."

APRIL 26, 1883.

"You May Use My Name."

I desire to inform you what your valuable medicine has done for me. I was induced to try it by a member of our family, "who had been benefited by its use." I have suffered terribly from kidney difficulties. At times I have been very bad, having severe pains in my back, with general loss of strength and vitality.

My urine was very bad, with a heavy sediment of brick dust, which was fast leading to gravel. I commenced using Hunt's Remedy with a marked improvement from the start; the pains left, the urine became more natural, and I can truly say one bottle effected a permanent cure.

I have recommended it to many persons both here and in Boston, all of whom speak of it with the highest praise.

You are at liberty to use this letter or my name in any manner you may think best, that other sufferers may learn the value of the greatest of all remedies. Most truly yours,

JOHN F. COX, 62 Pleasant Street.

THE NYMPHS.

A Dream of the Cross of Christ.

From the Russian of Turgueff.

I stood before a noble range of mountains, clothed from top to base with fresh green forest, and stretching round about me in a semicircle. Blue and clear above them shone the Southern sky. The sunbeams played upon their tops, while in the valley, half hidden by the grass, gurgled the running brooks.

And there came to me, in thought, a story of the ancient time; how once, in the first century after Christ's birth, a Greek ship sailed the Ægean Sea.

It was noon. The winds were laid at rest. When of a sudden from the clear sky fell a voice, as if from heaven, saying to the helmsman: "When thou by yonder island sailest, then cry with loud voice: 'Great Pan is dead!'"

The startled sailor shook with fear; yet, as the ship passed by, obediently he cried: "Great Pan is dead!"

And now, at once, there rose, as if in answer to his cry, from all along the barren shore, a wail and mighty groan, while in long-drawn lamentation echoed the cry: "Dead is Great Pan! Great Pan is dead!"

Thus ran the ancient tale, and, as I mused upon it, there came to me a strange and wonderous thought: "How were it if I, too, should cry?"

But in the joyous presence of that lovely scene I could not think of death, and so with all my strength I cried:

'Arisen is great Pan! He is arisen!"

And at once—O wonderful!—there rang from all that circle of green hills, as 'twere in answer to my call, a joyous laughter, while with one accord, on every side, there arose the sound of happy voices and youthful tongues re echoed the glad cry:

"He is arisen? Great Pan is arisen!"

All nature about me then began to smile, brighter than the sunbeams on the heights, more joyous than the the purling brooks that murmured in the grass. I heard the hurried steps of fairy feet, and throng the thicket saw the gleam of snow-white garments and the ruddy glow of naked limbs. The nymphs, the Dryads, and Bacchantes were thronging to the vale. Suddenly from every side they came. From their immortal heads streamed down the waving hair, their shapely hands bore garlands and the cymbals, while laughter—clear Olympian laughter—rippled round about them as they came.

Before them strode a goddess, taller and more lovelier than them all. Upon her shoulders hangs the quiver; in her hands she bears the bow, while above her clustering hair sparkles in silver light a lustrous crescent.

Diana—art thou she?

Suddenly she halts, and with her all her nymphs. The clear-toned laughter dies away, and I saw how a deathly pallor crept o'er the features of the goddess thus struck dumb. I saw her limbs grow rigid, her lips part in unutterable pain, while in fixed gaze her eyes stared in the distance.

What had she seen? Whither bent her gaze?"

"I, too, turned to look.

On the horizon's farthest edge, circled by fertile fields, gleamed like a point of fire a golden cross upon the white tower of a Christian church.

The cross had met the goddess' eye. Behind me then I heard a shrill, long sigh, as when a mighty harp-string throbbing snaps asunder, and when I turned again I saw no trace of nymph or dryad. Before me still there lay the green, far-stretching wood, and here and there in the dense thicket gleamed for an instant something white, and vanished. Was it the garments of the nymphs, or was it a mist cloud rising from the valley?

I can not say.

Ensilage.

Correspondent N. Y. Tribune.

Professor W. A. Henry reports in reference to ensilage, at the Experimental Farm of the University of Wisconsin, that cows were fed with all the cured corn fodder they would eat by stripping off the leaves and other tender portions for themselves, together with one pound each of bran and corn meal and one and a half pounds of oil meal for each animal. Other cows had the same grain and all the ensilage they would eat, made from fodder corn from the same field. Comparing the effects of the yields of areas in corn fodder, the fodder of one area being cured as usual and fed as above, that of the other made into ensilage, the latter went about twice as far as the former. This is explained, at least mainly, by the fact that the cows ate the ensilage clean, but would not eat the stalks of the fodder; but the Professor thinks the silo should be credited with thus securing the complete utilization of the fodder. The cows fed on ensilage gave 10 per cent. more milk and 11 per cent more butter than those fed on cured fodder; no difference could be perceived between the samples of butter made of the two fodders. Ensilage was fed to calves with very good results, and steers made a fair gain in weight on ensilage alone. The entire cost of a ton of the ensilage stowed away in the silo was estimated to be about $1.50.—C. C. G.

The Dangerous Oleander.

Texas Siftings.

A correspondent writes to know if there is any truth in the rumor that the oleander plant is dangerous to handle. We have read a great deal about the oleander being dangerous to handle, but we never knew of but one instance of unpleasant results. A teacher at Galveston, where the oleander is indigenous, handled its branches carelessly. He hit a boy several times with an oleander switch; but, strange to say, instead of his hands swelling up, his head acquired a large lump. The boy knocked him down with an inkstand. This is the only instance that we know of where a person became seriously affected by handling the oleander plant.

Another of the Governor's Blunders.

Charleston Call, (Dem.)

When the Tax Commission bill was before the Legislature, its enemies said it had been prepared by J. M. Mason for a special purpose and that Mr. Mason was employed by certain capitalists to lobby it through. Governor Jackson, with the happy faculty he possesses of always doing the wrong thing, has appointed Mason a member of the commission for which the bill provides. Mr. Mason is, no doubt, a very clever gentleman; maybap a very honest one—we believe he is—but as a political appointment his was a mistake.

Governor Jackson's administration will pass into history as a concatenation of big blunders.

The Brilliant Example of the McGlorys.

Hartford Post.

"Pa, dear, we are going to Saratoga this summer, are we not? The McGlorys are going." "Saratoga! Huh! If business don't pick up we shall go into bankruptcy. That won't be much of a summer resort." "But, pa, dear, the McGlorys went into bankruptcy last year, and that's just why they go to Saratoga this." "Maybe, maybe. But, my conscience!" "Oh, now, pa, what's the use of a conscience?"

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

Wheeling Wholesale Market.

INTELLIGENCER OFFICE, WHEELING, Tuesday, June 12.

A number of changes will be found in this morning's quotations. In the grain department wheat is strong and active; oats have dropped a cent or two; mill feed has an upward tendency, but as yet no changes are reported; hay has dropped, but there is almost no sale at any price. Meats have been marked down a quarter of a cent, owing to the drop in Chicago. The trade is very good, however. The grocery trade is very steady as to prices, and the sales are satisfactory. Speaking generally, the volume of trade of the past week was large, the greatest activity prevailing in the early fruit and vegetable line.

STOCKS.—The market showed considerable strength and improvement in prices in the morning.

In the last hour the market was lower without any special cause, except sales to realize profits. Central Pacific, which had been very dull for a day or two, declined ¾ per cent, and outside of this the decline was ¾ per cent on Ohio & Mississippi and ½ to ¾ per cent, leaving the market very little changed from the close of prices yesterday, though many of the stocks were a fraction higher than then. Wabash and Kansas & Texas were strong at the highest prices of the day, and St. Paul advanced ¾ per cent to 123¾. In the final dealings the market was firmer.

A MIRACLE IN OIL CITY.

Doctors Dumfounded — Druggists and the People Wild With Excitement.

From the Oil City Derrick, July 21st, 1881.

MISS MAGGIE MARTIN, of this city, has been ill and confined to her house for several years. Our best physicians failed to give her relief. She took Persona and, to the astonishment of all who knew her, she is now up and about again. MR. SIMMONS, the Druggist, sold 184 bottles last week. He buys in gross lots. MR. COWELL, too, sells it. Ask your druggist for DR. HARTMAN'S "Ills of Life" (gratis), or address
