Medical.

Dr. J. E. SMITH,
No. 1404 Chapline Street,
Near Fourteenth Street.

The best evidence of a physician's success is the testimony of his patients. The increasing demands for my professional services prove that I have dealt honorably and fairly with those who have consulted me. I never use a patient's name without permission, though I have many hundred certificates from those whom I have cured after they had been pronounced incurable. A thorough medical education with many years hospital experience and familiarity with therapeutic agents, a close observance of temperamental peculiarities and strict attention to hygienic management insures success, a cure is possible, and I frankly give the patient my opinion.

INOCULATED POISON.
Some eight years ago I became the victim of a fearful Blood Poison, communicated by a nurse to my infant, and thence through the breast, and suffered for six long years. The Mercury and Potash treatment seemed to drive the poison further into my system only to break out in worse form on other portions of my body. Three months ago I began taking Swift's Specific, and it has cured me sound and well. It is the greatest blessing which has come to mankind in years."

LOVE'S PROMISE.

"I will come back," Love cried; "I will come back;"
And there where he had passed lay one bright track,
Dreamlike and golden as the moonlit sea.
Between the pine wood's shadow, tall and black,
"I will come back," Love cried. Ah, me!
Love will come back.

He will come back. Yet, Love, I wait, I wait;
Though it is evening now, and cold and late,
And I am weary watching here so long.
A pale and watcher at a silent gate—
For Love, who is so fair, and swift, and strong
I wait, I wait.

He will come back—come back, though he delays;
He will come back—for in old years and days
He was my playmate. He will not forget.
Though he may linger long amid new ways
He will bring back, with barren sweet regret,
Old years and days.

Hush! on the lonely hills Love comes again;
But his young feet are marked with many a stain;
The golden haze has passed from his fair brow
And round him clings the blood-red robe of pain;
And it is night. O Love—Love—enter now!
Remain! remain!

HOME-MADE PRESENTS.

Pretty and Useful Gifts for the Holidays. Work for the Weeks Between Now and December 25.

Philadelphia Press.

With shops full of bric-a-brac and dainty trifles of all sorts for all purposes of use and ornament, it is an easy matter for those who have money to spend to choose an appropriate gift for any one. Fortunately, however, for those with short purses, to loving hearts the least part of a gift is its money value. The tender remembrance, of which it is the token, is that which makes it precious. To such, the veriest trifle made by loving hands is more welcome than would be diamonds given coldly as a tax which must be paid to the season; while jewels become doubly precious by reason of the affection which prompts their gift.

This is the age of art needle-work, and there is no lack of exquisite fancies and beautiful materials for home-made Christmas gifts—lambrequins and table covers, screens and sofa cushions, afghans and quilts, etc., without limit, in plush or satin, heavy silk or fine cloth, decorated with wonderful embroidery in ribbon and chenille, silk and arrasene. Such ambitious efforts as these call for both money for materials and plenty of time for execution. It is the purpose of this article rather to deal with simpler objects, such as may be made with small outlay of money, by even unskilled fingers.

For an umbrella case to hold two silk umbrellas, buy a yard and an eighth of stout gray linen. Cut from this two pieces, each ten inches wide, and slope from top to bottom, making the bottom six inches across. Now, from the rest of the linen cut two strips thirty inches long, seven inches broad at top and four inches at the bottom. Bind each of these with with seal brown mohair braid. Work on the wide part of each an umbrella in brown crewels, and stitch on to one of the pieces already cut to form pockets, leaving open at the top for the umbrella handle, and at bottom for the ferule to pass through. The back should extend eight inches beyond the pockets at top, two inches at bottom and one inch on the sides, and the top should be slightly rounded. On the space left above the pocket embroider the initials or monogram of the person for whom the umbrella case is intended, and baste the part which you have finished on to the strip left, with an interlining of buckram; round off the top to match the first piece, and bind together all round with brown braid. Sew brass rings at top and bottom to hang the case to the wall, and the work is done.

TRAVELING TRAPS.

Very convenient dressing cases for use when travelling may also be made from gray linen and braid—red, blue, or brown—one yard of linen, and either two bunches of skirt braid or seven yards of another braid will be required. Cut two pieces each twelve inches wide, one twenty inches long and the other twenty-four. Round off the tops of both pieces exactly alike for the flap of the case when rolled up. Cut two pieces of linen, each three inches deep by four long, bind three sides with braid and stitch on the shortest piece of the foundation in the centre, one on each side, with the raw edge which should measure four inches on the edge of the foundation. Cut two flaps, bind them with braid and stitch on, so as to come over each of these pockets, work a button-hole in each and sew a button on the pockets to correspond. These are for sponge or wash rag and soap. Cut a strip four inches in length and one and a half wide, bind and fasten lengthwise between the two pockets, dividing the strip into three straps, to hold toothbrush, nailbrush and small comb.—Set a pocket four inches deep at the top, binding the strip with braid on both the long sides, and furnish with flap as before; this is for hairbrush and comb. Set on another pocket three inches deep, four inches from the bottom of the case, the top of the pocket to be towards the bottom of the case. Now lay the two parts of the case together, having first bound the straight end of the long piece, and turn the extra four inches up on the other to form another pocket, the top of which should just miss touching the top of the one last set on. Cut an oval piece of linen eleven and a half inches long and four wide, bind with braid, and stitch it between these two pockets, so it shall form flaps for them both. Bind all round with braid; sew a yard of braid on the upper end of the case, directly in the middle, for strings to tie when it is rolled up. The case is, of course, much handsomer when furnished, but this is not at all necessary. It is also improved by working in cross-stitch on each pocket the name of the article for which it is intended—towel, on the bottom pocket, clothes brush on the next, soap, sponge, comb and brush each on their respective places, and the initials of the owner on the outside of the flap, where it will be seen when the case is rolled up.

THINGS TO WEAR.

Slipper pockets are a useful piece of furniture to hang on the wall of either chamber or sitting room. To make one use either cretonne or gray linen. For the back take a piece of stiff pasteboard, sixteen inches long, six inches broad at the bottom, sloped up to eight inches ten inches from the bottom, and thence tapering to a point at top. Cover this with cretonne, overseaming the edges with sewing silk. For the pockets take a piece of cretonne, thirteen inches long and fifteen inches across. Turn down two inches at top and one at the bottom to form a hem above a casing. In the top one should be run a piece of stout elastic, that at the bottom gathered on tape. Sew the pocket to the foundation at the bottom and on the sides. The elastic should be drawn tightly enough not to sag, but not too tightly to admit the slipper with ease.

A pretty toilet set consists of a pair of bottles and a pin-cushion to match, all three covered with satin and decorated either with embroidery, decalcomanie or etchings, in narrow lines drawn with a fine brush in oils, or they may be left plain. Toilet bottles with glass stoppers may be bought for the purpose, but a pair of citrate of magnesia bottles with the corks covered with satin to match, may be made to answer. Cut a piece of pasteboard the size of the bottom of the bottle and just small enough to be entirely covered when the bottle is set upon it. Cover this with satin or with silesia in the color of the satin used for the toilet set. Make a case for each bottle, of satin, to fit smoothly when on, but not so tight as to start it in the seam, and take care that the seam is well sewed. Attach this at one end to the round piece and coax the bottle gently into its case. Fringe out an inch deep at top, and tie around the neck of the bottle with satin ribbon, say an inch wide. The cushion may be oblong or square, with a quilling of satin around it, and bows at each corner; or you may have a brushcase and cushion combined. For this, take a pasteboard box, such as fine shoes come in. Use the top for the cushion, covering it neatly and hiding the edge under quilled ribbon. Line the top, as well as the box, with quilled sateen or silesia, and put silesia on the bottom with a puff of satin around the outside. The top edge of this puff must be nearly turned in and overseamed to the lining. The lower should be finished with a quilling to match the lid of the box.

HOUSEHOLD ORNAMENTS.

A pretty ornament for mothers bureau may be made from a pair of baby's worn shoes. Take the two and brush them with either bronze or gold paint. In one put a satin pincushion, stuffed with wool; in the other a hairpin cushion, with the top of moss-knit wool to match the color of the satin on the other. If the shoes are worn at the toe put a piece of satin on the inside to cover the cotton which must be used to fill them out, and fasten the two cushions side by side on a foundation made of two pieces of pasteboard covered with satin and sewed together.

There is literally no end of the pretty bags which you may make for Christmas gifts. A set of two button bags, with a larger bag to match for spools, is a useful adjunct to a work-basket. For the button-bags cut circular pieces of pasteboard an inch and a half in diameter and cover for the bottoms. Take a strip of cashmere, silk, velvet or calico, or whatever material you use, ten inches long and four inches deep. If velvet, it must be lined; if cashmere, silk or cotton, allow for a hem at top with a casing below it. Sew the ends of the strip together and gather the band to the circle which forms the bottom. Run elastic tape in the casing, or narrow ribbons, as you prefer. The spool bag must be exactly twice the size of those intended for buttons. Bags for opera glasses, to hold kerchief and glasses, are made of plush or velvet, lined with satin in either the same or a contrasting color. The bag should be five or six inches by seven or eight long, and the casing for the ribbons must be run two inches below the top. Charming work-bags for embroidery are made from a large silk kerchief or, what is less expensive, a square of pongee. Turn the corners back on the kerchief, ornamenting each with a small flower in needlework or a tiny ribbon bow. Stitch a narrow ribbon around the kerchief, below the corners, to form a casing. Narrower ribbon, run in this casing, serves to draw the square into a bag, or allows it to open flat on the lap at pleasure. Cases for crewels, or embroidery silks in skeins, may be made by the merest novice at needlework. They are merely two pieces of silk or silesia, sateen or gray linen, with casings stitched across, through which the skeins are first pulled and the ends then cut. The names of the colors may be marked on the casings, but this is not essential, as the ends of the skeins appear. One end of the case may be devoted to a few leaves of flannel for holding loose needles and eases for full papers, and strings should be attached to the roll together.

ODDS AND ENDS FOR CHRISTMAS.

Sachets are generally acceptable, and may be made in infinite variety. Some are square, woven in ribbons of two colors in checker-board pattern, the ends of the ribbon fringed. Two of these squares, with cotton batting sprinkled with violet or rose powder or with orris root or dried lavender between, forms the sachet. Small bags of silk or satin embroidered or etched, fringed at top and tied with ribbons like a tiny sack, are filled with perfumed cotton for the same purpose. Others look like tiny pillows, and are edged with chenille cord. A tiny sachet and handkerchief combined may be made from a fancy handkerchief costing from fifty cents to a dollar. Fold the kerchief in four, and, in the center of one of the squares thus formed, embroider some design—monogram, initial, spray, Kate Greenaway figure or what not. This is to come on top of the satchet when finished. Now take a sheet of cotton batting, half the width and the full length of the kerchief. Put this open and sprinkle liberally with sachet powder. Replace as before and lay on the kerchief, doubling the latter so as to cover the batting. Sew the edges of the kerchief together and tuck here and there with stitches in fine silk, which must be secure but show as little as possible. Now work a row of feather stitching around the doubled kerchief, and another through the middle the shortest way. Sew ribbons at each end, equi-distant from the corners, and tie together, forming a square, which opens like a blotting book.

Bedroom slippers for invalids, for mothers, or others who may be called on to rise suddenly in the night, are crocheted of double zephyr or Germantown wool in Russian crochet, which is done by taking the back of the single crochet stitch, producing a ridged effect. Make a chain of thirteen stitches; crochet a straight strip of thirty-eight rows, cast on twenty-one more stitches in chain, and crochet as before, narrowing one stitch in the centre each time for the toe, until the width is decreased to fit the toe of the fleece-lined sole to which it is to be sewed. Join the end of the strip to the side of the toe and finish around the top with a scallop. Run elastic through the open space below this scallop, and ornament the toe with a ribbon bow. This size is for a No. 3 sole.
