IT was a green Christmas. Let us hope that the fat grave-yards will not materialize.

ST. LOUIS is to have a Union depot that will cost $7,000,000. Chicago did not drop dead on hearing the news.

THE new government in Brazil is not having plain sailing, but it does not follow that the Republic is a failure. Even a peaceful revolution must meet and conquer difficulties.

IN the death of Henry W. Grady the country has sustained one of its greatest losses since the war. He did more toward wiping out sectional lines than any other man in the South. That is why the North weeps with the South over his grave.

IF Mr. Henry S. Walker has succeeded in bringing sufficient pressure to bear upon Judge Fleming to worm from him the promise of a retention in office, some Democrats will be sorry that they insisted on keeping General Goff out of the office to which the people elected him.

AN epidemic of itch is raging over in Ohio. Those most seriously afflicted are Democratic members of the Legislature, who have it in the palms of their hands since reading of the barrel opened by Mr. Calvin S. Brice, of New York, but who aspires to represent Ohio in the United States Senate.

THE influenza seems to have struck Wheeling with sufficient force to knock some citizens out in one round. In her misery, however, Wheeling has plenty of delightful company. In Europe the epidemic did not spare Emperors and Princes. Now that it has visited this country we must all take our turn. The McGinty joke can take a rest while we sneeze.

Protect Railway Employes.

One of the most important matters referred to Congress by President Harrison in his recent message has not attracted the amount of attention it deserves, and yet it effects the lives and limbs of thousands of workingmen who are engaged in a hazardous calling. The protection of the lives of the employes of our inter-state railways, two thousand of whom are killed and twenty thousand are injured every year, is as much a subject for congressional legislation as is the matter of protecting shippers from unjust freight discrimination.

In calling attention of our national law makers to the wretched system of brakes and couplers on our freight cars, and the necessity for the enactment of laws requiring the companies to provide some system by which the lives of their employes will not be endangered, the President has simply performed a duty which has been impressed repeatedly on his predecessors, but which has received little, if any, notice in the shape of a direct recommendation to Congress.

The New York Press in an editorial calling attention to the matter, says:

Formerly the railroad managers pleaded the want of a standard coupler which would answer the requirements of our system of interchanging freight cars. This objection, however, no longer obtains, as a standard has now been adopted by the Master Car Builder's Association. Of course it entails considerable expense to apply couplers to freight cars, and our railroad managers seem to object to an investment the returns from which are not directly visible.

In regard to the brakes the same conditions prevail. It is expensive to equip the cars and no direct return is visible, and therefore the railroad managers continue the barbarous practice of requiring human beings to endanger their lives and limbs by being exposed on the tops of rapidly moving freight cars.

Nor is it only in freight service that we see this negligence in regard to safety appliances. Each freight train thus poorly equipped with brakes endangers the passengers in trains running on the same tracks, either ahead or following such freight train.

After the recent accident at Spraker's Station, on the New York Central railroad, the Press called attention to the fact that the second section of that ill fated train was composed of sleepers, on which brakes were applied to only four wheels of every six, or, in other words, as a matter of economy apparently, the managers of the railroad sacrificed one-third of the stopping power of that train.

The Great International Enterprise.

Tuesday's issue of the INTELLIGENCER contained the first publication made in this country of the outline of the great Pan-American railway enterprise, which is understood to have the sanction of the International Congress now in session in Washington, and which has at its back unlimited capital to make it a sure go. The magnitude of the scheme, which has heretofore been referred to only as a matter in contemplation, was not before that publication thoroughly understood and appreciated, all the important details having been kept from the press by the projectors for business reasons. The INTELLIGENCER was the first paper to gain possession of them, and to-day is able to give to the public some further interesting facts regarding the enterprise, which is the most stupendous undertaking in the history of railroading or commerce in any country. The publication this morning is an authoritative one, and will attract more than passing attention in the world at large because it is given for the first time.

The movement referred to, as the INTELLIGENCER has before remarked, "grows out of the same feeling that inspired and called together the Pan-American Congress and is a part of the programme for cementing in the close commercial union the Continents of North and South America." It has the favor of the delegates and of Secretary Blaine, with whom Col. H. C. Parsons, its originator, is on intimate terms.

The matter is of more than local importance; it is more than international in scope, for it will excite the jealousy of Europe, which has up to this time been doing the bulk of the trade with South America, and is even now engaged in an effort to belittle the importance and the work of the Pan-American Congress, because she realizes that the convention is a forerunner of a number of events that must surely result in diverting to the United States the trade she has enjoyed with the richest territory in the world.

The Pan-American Congress was originated by Mr. Blaine, and he will bring to bear the force of his great abilities and wide experience in the direction that it may result, as he always predicted it would, in the accomplishment of our complete commercial supremacy on the Western Hemisphere.

It is to this end that he will, on behalf of this Government, lend all proper encouragement to the wonderful enterprise explained in our Washington dispatches this morning. In its success Mr. Blaine will not only have the satisfaction of witnessing the consummation of his most cherished hope, but the American people will more than ever appreciate his true worth as a statesman and a patriot.

The Committees and Mr. Carlisle.

New York Tribune.

It is rather surprising that Mr. Carlisle should allow such an interview to come from him as appeared in the Sun yesterday, and yet the contrast between the promptness with which the committees were announced in this Congress and his delay in the Fiftieth must be a little depressing. He hesitated and delayed action until after the holidays, though he did not have to reorganize a House just rescued from the opposition as Speaker Reed did. Mr. Carlisle says he was not authorized to name the Committee on Ways and Means and on Appropriations among the first, but he knows very well that he could have been authorized if he had so desired. In fact, his delay till January was caused by his unwillingness to name the Committee on Ways and Means earlier.

Mr. Carlisle's statement that business is not furthered by the early appointment of Ways and Means and Appropriations is belied by the prompt report of the District of Columbia appropriation bill by one committee and the very tariff hearing in vacation before the other which he himself is attending. Mr. Carlisle's further statement that no business can be transacted until the rules are adopted is controverted by the fact that two small appropriation bills have already passed without any rules, except those relating to committees. In fact, there is no trouble in doing business in the House under the general parliamentary law. Congress is not dependent for the transaction of business upon rules. The common parliamentary law is much better than bad rules. Rules are only regulations established by the majority embodying the methods which that majority deems suitable for the general transaction of business. If the minority under the leadership of Mr. Mills should insist that they alone could make rules then tyranny, which is the control of the many by the few would begin.

In the event of Mr. Mill's success in blocking Congress and preventing the adoption of such rules as the majority desires, then the House would fall back on the general parliamentary law, under which perhaps business could be better expedited than under any set of rules that even the Republicans would be likely to adopt.

The Abuse of Christmas.

New York Star.

Mr. H. C. Bunner, in the Christmas Puck, has a clever parody on Charles Dickens, which he calls "A Christmas Snarl." Beneath its fun lies a serious and well-founded protest against the abuse of Christmas. Mr. Bunner describes a genial, whole-souled fellow named Booze, who tried on Christmas to make all his friends and relatives happy. He stuffed the children with sweets and gave his friends of mature years handsome presents of every sort.

Mr. Bunner, in his sketch, tells how the Spirit of Christmas carried Mr. Booze around and showed him the effects of his extravagance in presents. "You have seen," said the Spirit, "a beautiful holiday profaned by shallow vanity and foolish indulgence. You have seen children robbed of the joys of childhood, taught too early a deceptive lesson of luxury, and grown men and women aiding to carry on this mad riot of extravagance and ostentation, spending more than they can afford, bartering the more kindly generosity of a more wholesome time for a sordid lottery of interchanged gifts."

The nature of Mr. Bunner's sketch forbids that he should comment on all the abuses of Christmas. Those that he refers to are both serious and degrading, but there is another class of abuses that carries, we think, more serious consequences. By that we mean the indiscriminate habit of gifts to people in an inferior position, which is an indirect but effective encouragement of mendicancy. When the ordinary New Yorker wakes up on Christmas day, he knows that he must face an army of mendicants before he goes to bed at night. His postman, his milkman, his messenger boy, his butler, his chambermaids, his cook, his office boy, his barber—in fact, everybody that is in any manner dependent upon him expects a gratuity in some way or another, until he is driven to desperation.

Among his social equals the business man finds himself urged on by Christmas to extravagance of every sort; on the other hand, his subordinates on every side are begging for alms. From a sensible, rational holiday, Christmas has become to a great extent a season of extravagance and purse-proud ostentation, which encourages unwholesome ideas of luxury on the part of some and degrading ideas of mendicancy on the part of others.

CLEVELAND IN ELECTION TIME.

The Virtuous Grover Knew All About the Lavish Use of Money.

Exchange.

Mr. Cleveland knew, or was privy to the fact, that vast sums of money were used in this State to elect him President in 1884 and to re-elect him in 1888, and Mr. Cleveland himself personally exhorted in 1884, while Governor, the rich men of the party, such men as the Hon. Roswell P. Flower, William C. Whitney, Frank Jones, the brewer, of New Hampshire, William L. Scott, of Pennsylvania, and George Ehret, the brewer, of New York, to come here, and through his persuasive influences these men did come and to him personally pledged large sums—for what? Not for legitimate campaign expenses, for those in part had already been assumed by the officeholders and by subscriptions from Democrats who had the success of the party at heart. The sum raised by the above named gentlemen was vast and probably never will be known unless they choose voluntarily to tell it.

Mr. Cleveland knew the great exigencies which demanded his summoning these men to Albany in 1884, and had they not come to the rescue in the nick of time this State would have been lost to Cleveland that year. The inference is plain enough as to how the money was used. Mr. Cleveland was in the fight to win in 1884, and probably he did not hold such convictions then as to the use of money as he professes to hold now as he did in 1888. He may not have dispensed the money with his own hands, but he knew the political hands which that money went into, knew how it was to be used, and winked at its use. Ancient history is not altogether a pleasant retrospection, but in this case it is applicable as a sort of delightful comparison of Mr. Cleveland in 1884 and Mr. Cleveland in 1189.—Albany Times.

Of course, Cleveland knew all about the money. He knew that the Democrats in New York raised $5 in 1884 to $1 of Republican money, and that Blaine carried New York, and was elected after all, until the Ben Butler vote was turned over to Cleveland. And the virtuous Cleveland knows of the deficiency in the Cal. Brice campaign fund in 1888, and how it was made up. Congress ought to investigate the contracts of the express companies with the Government, and ascertain just how the pressure was brought upon Secretary Fairchild in his last days.

One Fact

is worth a column of rhetoric, said an American statesman. It is a fact, established by the testimony of thousands of people, that Hood's Sarsaparilla does cure scrofula, salt rheum and other diseases or affections arising from impure state or low condition of the blood. It also overcomes that tired feeling, creates a good appetite, and gives strength to every part of the system. Try it. 3

The professional wrestler has a good many turning points in his career.

Epoch.

The transition from long, lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks and epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is gratefully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of the Great Alternative and Tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of kidneys, liver or stomach, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c and $1 per bottle at Logan Drug Co.'s drug store. 3

VALUABLE HINTS

To those who require a stimulant: Buy the purest and the oldest and avoid the cheapest, for the latter will indeed be the most expensive in the end. If you give it a thought you will agree with me. The tax to the government and the ageing of whiskies and other liquors naturally changes the price of first cost, yet I have on hand, and will sell as cheap as the cheapest, all kinds. But be advised by me to buy Silver Age at $1 50 per bottle. Six-year-old Finch, Gibson, Overholt and Guckenheimer at $1 each or six quarts for $5. I have the following old rye whiskies now in stock and for sale: 1869-1873 Overholt, 1873-1875 Gibson, 1879 Guckenheimer and Finch. These goods are scarce and valuable. Secure them while you can. Brandies, gins, Jamaica and New England rums, cordials of all flavors, wines, both sparkling and still, and all principal brands, can be had at my place. Also a full line of malt liquors. The old maxim that "Goods well bought are half sold," is eminently true of Books and Fancy Goods.
We have been unusually careful and think we have skimmed the cream from the Book Lists of Harper's, Scribner's, Lippincotts, Stokes & Bro., Lee & Shepard, White & Allen, Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Little, Brown & Co., Crowell & Co., and other leading publishers. We have neglected no age or condition, either mental or financial. Prices and Literature to suit all. Those who have not received a copy of our Christmas Number of "The Literary News," can get one on application.
In our other Departments, we have taken care to buy only "sure sellers." Already our judgment has been approved by the public in the sale of some of our highest priced goods.
We will gladly give a copy of our "Christmas Catalogue" of Stationery and Fancy Goods, as newspaper space is too expensive to attempt to name them here. We have anticipated an unusually large trade, and in consequence our space is somewhat crowded, and the appearance of goods must suffer somewhat.
