TRUE MANLINESS.—One [illegible] we found the steps covered with [illegible] and saw that old Mother Rogers [illegible] with difficulty keep from falling. Thinking to be of a little help, I was about to offer my help, when a lad in the crowd sprang forward and, gently taking her arm, led the dear old lady down the Queen's steps. He could not have shown more respectful care. Everyone who saw it loved him for it; and as I thought of the mother, whose gentle eyes had been closed for many a month, I was sure that no honest son she was proud of her boy that night.

Years have passed, and the youth has become a man, a strong, helpful, loving man, to whom little children look for sympathy, and on whom the old lean for strength; and whenever I hear his name, I remember that gentle act which, I think, will sometime be found recorded in the angel's book.

THE WORLD OWES EVERY MAN A LIVING.—This like many other popular sayings, is utterly false. The divine arrangement is that every man shall provide first for his own living, and next for that of those most closely connected with him—as wife, children, parents, &c. "If any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." "If any man will not work, neither shall he eat." The world owes a lazy, improvident man nothing but a rod. The sick, the lame, and the imbecile should be provided for, as a matter of charity, not of debt.

Noiseless smoking—A burly Teuton, whose taste for beer could not be disputed, entered an omnibus one day with a huge meerschaum in his mouth, and taking the only vacant seat, proceeded to roll forth full volumes of smoke.—The conductor seeing this violation of rules, stepped up to him, and said, "No smoking allowed." The Dutchman, taking his pipe from his mouth with an air of astonishment, thus replied to the polite conductor: "I don't make no noise ven I schmokes."

TRIAL OF FAITH.—The trial of faith is the greatest and heaviest of all trials. For faith it is which must conquer in all trials. Therefore, if faith gives way then the smallest and most trifling temptations can overcome a man. But when faith is sound and true, then all other temptations must yield, and be overcome.

—What is it that nobody want's, yet nobody likes to lose?—A lawsuit.

—Why is a pig with a twisted tail like the ghost in Hamlet?—Because it could a tail unfold.

—In pocket picking, as in almost everything else, a man never succeeds until he gets his hand in.

— A baldheaded man may always expect to find a friend and sympathizer in a manufacturer of wigs — Mythological Festivity—Hercules going to dine with his club.

— How did the bull look on emerging from the china shop? A little the worse for ware.

— In a game of cards a good deal depends on good playing, and good playing on a good deal.

An old toper being requested to define hard drinking, said "It was setting on a rock and sipping cold water."

— Withering retort—A little boy asking a companion who Good Friday was, received the withering reply:—'Well, you go home and read your Robinson Crusoe.'"

—No Buts.—"Pa," said a lad to his father, "I have often read of people poor but honest; why don't they sometimes say rich but honest?" "Tut, tut my son, nobody would believe them," answered the father.

—Another ingenious cause of baldness—A gentleman who is ashamed of his intensely bald head, explains the absence of his hair by saying that he was born poor, and was compelled to scratch his way through life.

—A Chicago paper, referring to the "Another Lie Nailed" catch phrase at about election times, calls it "another fragrant fiction impaled upon the nefarious fork of fact." This ought to suit the most fastidious.

— God's Word is like God's world—varied, very rich, very beautiful. You never know when you have exhausted all its secrets. The Bible, like nature, has something for every class of mind. Look at the Bible in a new light, and straightway you see some new charm.

— Nothing is more easy than to get rich: It is only to trust nobody, befriend no one, to destroy all the finer feeling of nature, and be rendered mean, miserable and despised for selfishness twenty years, and riches will come as sure as disease, disappointment, and miserable death.

— Like a morning dream, life becomes more and more bright the longer we live, and the reason of everything becomes more clear. What has puzzled us before seems less mysterious, and the crooked paths look straighter as we approach the end.
