There is a gate on a certain street in the city that swings out over the sidewalk, and is the cause of a man to have said something that is not often seen in print. The other night the darkness was so intense that the gate could not be seen as usual, so the consequence was that the man and gate came together with a crash No bones were broken, however, but one of the Ten Commandments was. This is the evil of gates swinging on the outside over the pavement It would be a fit subject for the preachers.

Mr James L Reid died at the home of his brother-in law, Mr. S O Jackson, in the Storeville section, last Friday night aged about 53 years. He was ill only a few hours, and the announcement of his death was a great shock to his friends. Mr Reid was a resident of Anderson up to a few months ago, being employed at the Southern Railway depot. He leaves one daughter to cherish his memory. He was a native of Abbeville County, and spent most of his life there His remains were interred at Little Mountain Church, in Abbeville County.

The Columbia correspondent of the Sunday News, under date of 8th inst., says: "While out driving this afternoon Miss Mamie Neal and three small sisters, children of Col W A Neal, were violently thrown from a carriage. Miss Neal was driving the horse, which became unmanageable in Main street, near the city Opera House and ran off down the street Miss Neal did her best to check the animal, but when the vehicle got in front of Mr. A. Stork's grocery the horse made a dash, throwing the occupants to the ground. The young ladies were picked up and were placed in a carriage and carried home. A physician was summoned, but found that they were only slightly hurt."

The Elberton (Ga.) Star of the 7th inst. says: "On the night of the 24th of July the immortal spirit of Mr Aaron Welborn took its flight homeward to rest with God. Mr Welborn, at the time of his death, was about seventy years of age. He was born and reared in South Carolina, where he lived a most useful and exemplary Christian life. About two years since Mr. Welborn left his native State and came to Elberton and at once gained the highest place in the confidence and esteem of our very best people. For many long years Mr Welborn was a great sufferer from that dread disease, cancer, and for several months prior to his death he was confined to his room, and yet amid all his pains not a murmur escaped his lips. His was the most beautiful Christian life—perfectly resigned to the will of his God. He was a devout and consistent Christian. Was a member of the Baptist Church, in which, as far as his health would admit, he took an active and leading part The sympathies of our entire people are with his devoted wife and his affectionate daughter and son, Mrs. C B. Owens and Mr. W H Welborn, whose constant care and unlimited devotions were unsurpassed. His remains were carried to Williamston, S C, and were laid to rest beneath the soil of his native State."

Prof. A. F. McKissick, of the Polytechnical Institute, Auburn, Ala., delivered a very interesting lecture in the Opera House last Friday evening on the X rays He was assisted by Prof. Riggs, of Clemson College, and Mr. R M Lewis, a former pupil, of this city By means of the ray a buckshot was located near the ankle of Mr R. L Keys' right leg, where he was wounded in the battle of Seven Pines during the war A photograph was also taken of Mr. J. B. Lewis' hand, which was developed by Photographer Collins and shown to the audience. Prof. McKissick is a native of Orangeburg, S C. His lecture was both instructive and interesting, and we regret that he was not greeted by a large audience.

After a brief but painful illness Mr. Wm. M Osborne died at his home in this city last Saturday at 12 30 o'clock. He was stricken down about two weeks ago with a kidney disease and suffered intense pain until death came to his relief, as no human aid could give him relief. Mr. Osborne was in the 68 h year of his age and was born in Fairfield County, S. C. In his boyhood he moved to Newberry, where he lived till 1851, when he moved to Anderson and engaged in merchandising, which he continued until the war, when he entered the Confederate service to battle for his country Since the war he merchandised for awhile, but for the past twenty years has been engaged in farming In 1852 he married Miss Jane Clinkscales, the eldest daughter of Mr. John Clinkscales, of this County. From this union thirteen children were born, ten of whom are now living. The deceased was a most clever, upright citizen, and was most highly esteemed by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. In his young manhood he joined the Methodist Church, and throughout his life was a devoted and faithful member. As a husband, a father and a citizen he performed his duties well, and has gone to his grave with an untarnished name, which is a sweet legacy left to the loved ones who mourn his death On Sunday afternoon the funeral services were held in the Methodist Church, being conducted by Rev. W. T Capers, in the absence of the pastor, in the presence of a large congregation. At the conclusion of the services at the Church, the remains were escorted by the members of Hiram Lodge, A. F. M., to Silver Brook Cemetery, where they were laid to rest under the beautiful and impressive ceremony of that ancient organization. The sympathies of our entire people are with the saddened household in their sore bereavement.

John McGrath Swallows Laudanum and Dies.

Mr. John McGrath, eldest son of late Capt. John McGrath, committed suicide in Atlanta, Ga, last Friday evening. The Atlanta Constitution of last Saturday gives the following account of the sad ending of the young man's life:

"John McGrath, a white man 38 years of age, committed suicide in a Decatur street boarding house by drinking two ounces of laudanum yesterday afternoon.

"The cause that prompted the rash deed is supposed to have been despondency from financial troubles He left no farewell message and died in a short while after taking the deadly drug.

"McGrath came to this city about five weeks ago from Charleston, S. C., where he has been a member of the police force for seven years. Political issues caused his discharge, however, and he finally drifted to Atlanta, where he secured employment as a bar tender at the Midway saloon on Decatur street. He has a wife and one child who are in Asheville, N. C., spending the summer. Mrs. McGrath was notified by wire yesterday afternoon of her husband's death.

"Coroner Paden summoned a jury and held an inquest over the body at Patterson's undertaking establishment on Peachtree street last night at 8 o'clock. Several witnesses were introduced and the evidence was conclusive that the deceased had suicided by taking two ounces of laudanum, and the jury returned a verdict to that effect.

"McGrath has apparently been in bad health for several days. He has remained nearly all the time in his room and seemed very morbid and despondent.

"Early yesterday morning he went over to the saloon and opened up for the day's business. He was paid his wages and went immediately back across the street and settled his board bill with Mrs. Lanier, his landlady. He then went to his room and refused to go to the dining room for dinner.

"About 2 o'clock in the afternoon Mrs. Lanier was sitting in the hall when she noticed McGrath emerge from his room half nude He was very pale, and judging from his incoherent speech, his mind was affected. He walked up and down the hall in a very excited condition, and was finally approached by Mr. M S. Chatman, who works near by. Mr. Chatman attempted to soothe the dying man, but without avail.

"Dr. Lampkin was quickly sent for and he arrived in a short while. The physician did everything possible for the dying man, but McGrath died eight minutes after the drug had been taken.

"A careful examination of the room disclosed a two ounce bottle sitting on the dresser not far from the bed. It was empty, but the odor proved only too well that it had contained laudanum.

"The body was taken to the undertakers, where it will be prepared for burial The family of the deceased live in Anderson, S. C., where the remains will probably be taken for interment sometime today.

"It is thought that McGrath killed himself on account of his inability to provide for his family. It is known that he has been very despondent for some time for this reason, and his best friends are of the opinion that this is the cause He was not drinking at the time of his death."

The remains reached Anderson Saturday evening on the Savannah Valley train and were carried to his mother's home. On Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock they were laid to rest in the Catholic churchyard, Father McKenna conducting the funeral services. Mr. McGrath was an upright, generous hearted man, and the announcement of his death was a great shock to his family and friends. He leaves a wife and two children, he leaves a mother, two sisters and one brother to mourn his death, and in their sore bereavement they have the sympathies of all their friends and acquaintances.

Since the above was put in type the family of the deceased have received a letter from a friend in Atlanta who says that Mr. McGrath did not commit suicide; that he was suffering intense pain and took the laudanum to get relief, and accidentally took too much of the fatal drug.
