THE BLACKSMITH.

BY S. ROBERTS.

Of a mighty man is the blacksmith,
With his sinewy arm and strong;
And as the world have termed him wright,
He will not write him wrong.
He'd blow and strike, and hammer and pound,
Though a man of peace is he;
He's often given to forging,
But never to forgery.
He'll screw and twist, and wrench and turn,
Though honest in his dealing;
And while he often takes the steel,
He never takes to stealing.
His stock is seldom less than par,
And often takes a rise;
No matter what his virtues are,
He's much to do with vice.
His temper is always good,
Though hard things form his lot;
He's often in a "melting mood,"
And strikes while the iron's hot.
He sometimes sways an iron rod,
Although a foe to tyranny;
His figures are not these of speech,
Though oft he uses irony.
And ere his great work is complete,
And he shall close his books;
Our swords he'll into plowshares beat,
Our spears to pruning-hooks.

NED GREEN'S MISTAKE.

Ned Green was remarkably fond of ladies' society, and especially that of a fair maiden, for whom he had formed a very strong attachment. He called frequently to see his lady-love, but could never find her alone; her mother, being one of the old-school mothers, did not see the propriety of leaving Susee for one moment with her devoted Ned. Lovers will "meet by moonlight," in spite of anxious mothers, and so thought Ned and Susee; consequently, they appointed a meeting in the most romantic spot they could select—a corner of the garden where twined a luxuriant vine over a latticed arbor. Ned was so elated with the expectation of seeing his dear Susee, and folding her to his heart, that he hastened, as soon as twilight had melted into darkness, to the garden. He crept quietly along the path that led to the arbor, until he reached the entrance, and there he beheld a form reposing among the vines, which, with the darkness, concealed the face from his view. He stood for a moment enraptured with the scene, then rushed to the maiden, clasped her in his arms, and covered her with kisses.

"Och, ye murtherein baste, to come here at night insulting a poor honest gal—outwid ye, or I'll be afther disturbing those tallered ocks of yez."

Mag's screams brought to the garden the mamma and her lovely daughter (whom she had detained for some cause,) to see who was the disturber of the peace; when Mag told them she had gone to the garden for a little fresh air, and had fallen asleep—when the scene above related, occurred.

It is needless to say that Ned did not stop for garden gates, and he never was known to engage to meet a young lady by moonlight, again.

WHAT IS OUR LATITUDE?

Judging from the weather for the autumn thus far passed, it is the same as Wiggletown, the place where "Widow Bedott" spent the "heft" of her life. The widow remarks that she thinks Scrabble Hill "apparently considerable cooler'n Wiggletown." Her nephew remarks:

"Why, no, aunty—there can't be any difference in the climate; the latitude's just the same."

"I guess not Jeff—what is the latitude of Scrabble hill?"

"Oh, it's about forty two."

"Lawful sakes! our'n in Wiggletown's as much as fifty, and sometimes in the summer time it gets up as high as sixty or seventy!"

LET HER BE.

A Detroit mercantile gentleman, who was traveling eastward a short time since, went to the clerk of one of the Ontario boats to be shown his room. The clerk handed the applicant a key, at the same time pointing to a door at some little distance, marked B.

Our friend went in the direction indicated, but opened the next door to his own marked A, where he discovered a lady passenger making her toilet, who, upon the strangers appearance, uttered a low scream.

"Go away—go away!" screamed the lady.

"Letter B!" yelled the clerk.

"I am not touching her at all!" shouted the indignant merchant.

A LUCKY ESCAPE.—The Memphis Appeal, says a physician of that place paid a morning visit recently to one of his patients in the upper end of town, and on entering the room of the sick man the following dialogue took place:

"Say, doctor, I've got you cheated this load of poles."

"How?"

Raising on his elbow and looking across the room—"Look there, doctor, at that feller lying there; I got him to take that pill you left me, and it killed him in an hour."

The doctor nizzled.

ODD DIRECTIONS.—Letters sometimes find their way into Uncle Sam's mail bag bearing fantastic superscriptions. One of this description was lately received at Fulton, Ohio, probably from a lover to a sweetheart:

My loving message, may you through
The mail bags safely go,
Until you find Miss Sally Drew,
At Fulton, Ohio.

"What is that dog barking at?" asked a fop whose boots were more polished than his ideas.

"Why," said the bystanders, "he sees another puppy in your boots."

The Lowell Advertiser says that the Rev. Mr. Gates recently married Mr. Joseph Post to Miss Martha Rails.

If that trio don't make a good Fence, we should like to know what will!

Why is Queen Victoria like a dog's tail? Because the Queen keeps a carriage, and the dog keeps a——wagin.

A Yankee doctor has recently got up a remedy for hard times. It consists of ten hom's 1½ ——well worked in.

WINTERING MILCH COWS.

The subject of wintering milch cows is one in which a large majority of our readers are interested, for probably most people who own but a single domestic animal keep a cow, and those who are not thus limited, generally include more or less of those faithful creatures among their stock. And the milch cow is worthy of this distinction. She produces one of the most wholesome and nutritious articles of food which we possess—one always in demand and which there is no other means of supplying. Good cows always command a good price, for they pay a good profit. But this profit depends largely on the attention they receive from their owners—whether they are so fed and cared for that they are thrifty, and yield largely of milk at all seasons of the year.

It is poor economy to winter cows upon dry food alone. They need something succulent and nutritious. A full flow of milk requires a generous supply of the right kind of fodder. Carrots, beets, parsnips, or turnips, in addition to hay and an occasional feed of meal or shorts—a judicious use of hay, roots and meal—will keep the animals in good flow of milk even in winter. In England cows are fed principally on turnips and coarse fodder, and are stabled through the winter. They have a slight feed of straw or hay in the morning, and sliced turnips in the morning, noon and evening, with an occasional supply of good straw to their mangers. Their stables are kept clean but well littered, and are also well ventilated; avoiding as far as may be currents of air, from which cattle as well as human beings will take cold. The proper ventilation of stables, both for horses and cows, is often neglected.

But all have not and cannot procure the proper supply of roots. * * * In this case hay and the coarser grains must be used, and those properly prepared, answer very well the desired purpose. Good well-cured hay is far from being despised, even by the most aristocratic of Fill Pail breed, though if first passed through a good cutting machine, it will be more readily and more economically consumed. Give cows what they will fully dispose of, and a peck or so per day of bran, shorts or provender, wet to a proper consistency, and seasoned with a little salt, and they will continue in milk almost as long and give nearly as much as when supplied with roots. Oats and barley, or oats and corn, ground together, from a good mixture of provender for this purpose. If corn meal alone is used, it should be mixed with cut straw or hay, and slightly moistened—but a large quantity of this grain has a tendency to dry off the milk. It is better adapted to fattening than to milk making purposes.—For purely milk no grain preparation excells shorts. Both potatoes and apples are excellent food for cows, but do not produce as rich milk as either beets or carrots. These roots are probably among the best items of food that can be provided—to be used in connection with other kinds of fodder. No single food will succeed as well as a proper variety.

The thrift and health of all kinds of stock requires a supply of water, either frequently and statedly, or always within their reach. It should be brought into the barn-yard, that cattle need not be compelled to wander off to a distant stream or pond through the storm and cold.—Such a journey they will not undertake unless quite thirsty, when, were the water within their reach, they would drink much more frequently, but less at a time, not injuring themselves by abstinence at one time and over supply at another.—Their comfort in this respect as well as in shelter and cleanliness is the best economy, as an animal well cared for and kept warm and clean, requires less food to keep it in thrifty condition. The best management is generally the cheapest in the end, and is always the most satisfactory to those giving farmer. We shall be glad if these hints call out some such an improvement or modification of the course we have indicated, drawn from a wider experience than our own.—Rural New Yorker.

WHO WOULD NOT BE A FARMER?

If a young man wants to engage in a business that will insure him, in the middle of life, the greatest amount of leisure time, there is nothing more sure than farming. If he has an independent turn of mind, let him be a farmer. If he wants to engage in a healthy occupation, let him till the soil. In short, if he would be independent, let him get a spot of earth, keep within his means, shun the lawyer, be temperate to avoid the doctor, be honest that he may have a clear conscience, improve the soil so as to leave the world better than he found it, and then if he cannot live happy and die contented, there is no hope for him.

STORING POTATOES.—For several years we have found the following, says the Country Gentleman, to be effectual in preserving potatoes from decay throughout the entire winter, and so far from injuring them for table use, it makes them more palatable:—Put them in a cellar as dry as possible, and before putting them in the bin, sprinkle the bottom well with slacked lime, and give the potatoes a slight sprinkling as they are deposited.—Care should be taken not to use enough to generate heat sufficiently to cause them to vegetate.

MAMMOTH TURNIP.—Mr. Alonzo H. Adams, of this township brought to our office a turnip, which measured two feet 8 inches in circumference, two feet in length from the end of the root, to the top, exclusive of the stalk, and weighs sixteen and three fourths pounds. Can any one beat that?—Eds.

The Springfield (Ill.) Journal says that contracts for new corn have been made in that vicinity at 12 cents in the ear, and 25 to 25½ shelled and sacked.

TO THE LADIES.

DR. THRALL'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF Cohosh, Pond Lily and Nunquach. A sure remedy for the following Diseases of Females, viz: Amenorrhea, or Retention of the Menses; Suppression of the Menses; Menorrhia s, or Excessive Menstruation; Fluor Albus, or Whites; Turn of Life; Flatulence; Constipation; Eruptions of the Skin; Hysterics, Convulsions; Prolapsus Uteri, or Bearing Down; Irritable Womb; Chlorosis, or Green Sickness; Dysmenorrhea, or Painful Menstruation; Pregnancy; Sterility, &c. &c. &c.
In coming before the public, I do not profess to cure all the diseases that flesh is heir to; only those to which I have paid the most particular attention, during an extensive practice of 20 years, often prescribing for 20 to 30 patients in a day, and that the suffering Females of the United States may be benefited and saved from a premature grave, to which thousands fall victims annually for the want of proper and timely Remedies to regulate the functions of the Womb and its secreting organs. With this view, I have incurred great expense in making a Compound Extract, put up in pint bottles, prepared with strict reference to vegetable chemistry, from 12 Balsamic Herbs and Barks, which have long been known to the aborigines of this country and many Physicians to have a Specific Tonic and Alterative action upon the Female Womb and its appendages. Put the Compound Extract of Cohosh, Pond Lily and Nunquach, I claim for myself and my country to be the only preparation of the kind ever prepared, and the only one that is adapted to the different diseases of Females of this climate, to which hundreds can attest.
Dose, from one to two tea-spoonfuls in one or two table-spoonfuls of water three times a day before meals.—It should act upon the bowels once a week.
None genuine without my name and the name of the medicine blown on the bottle, with my written signature on each label; also a pamphlet of Female Diseases accompanying each bottle. Price, $1,00.

RECOMMENDATORY.
From Chief Justice Nelson.—I have been acquainted with Dr. Thrall several years, and have much pleasure in bear testimony to his good private character, and high professional attainments, and can confidently recommend him to the public, as a gentleman, in every way entitled to their respect and confidence. I trust he may succeed in this change of his professional labors; and am sure that he cannot fail, if integrity and enterprise, together with a high professional standing, receive their due and proper rewards.
SAM'L NELSON.
Hall Cooperstown, Nov. 3d, 1855.
DR. THRALL: Dear Sir—I have just heard that you leave the village in the morning; I should be very sorry that you should depart, without my good wishes and thanks for your professional services in my family; the very serious indisposition of Mrs. Cooper, is passing the turn of life, some 2 or 3 years since, was the worst affliction she ever had; and I impute under Providence her recovery to your medical skill.
Wherever you go, I wish you success.
Believe me, Dear Sir, very truly Yours,
J. PENNIMORE COOPER

MAKE HAY WHILE THE SUN SHINES!—FARM FOR SALE!—The subscriber, wishing to go west, would say to those desiring to buy a farm, that he will sell his well-known old homestead. It contains two hundred acres of cleared land, has upon it almost every kind of good fruit, for one hundred years, a house almost new, that cost to build twelve hundred, and out-buildings plenty and convenient. It is located in Howland, on the North and South Centre road, and about one hundred rods south of the Vienna Township and Warren road. It cannot fail to please any one wishing a residence in the country.
Howland, May 2, 1855. JOHN W. SKELY.

STRIKE NOW, WHILE THE IRON IS HOT!—A RARE CHANCE FOR A BARGAIN can be had by applying immediately, as I wish to go West by the middle of Sept. inter, to stry a few months. I want to sell my building on the corner of Main st., all my Groceries now on hand, and some Guns and Gun Fixtures, together with Gunsmith Tools, and will offer them at a bargain for the sake of closing out. Also, a Building Lot on the West side of Main street, 60 feet front by 70 feet deep—a good location for business. Call soon, and look at said property, if you wish to purchase.
Warren, August 8, 1855. JOHN DAY.

MOWING MACHINES.—The subscribers have now on trial, one of Ketchum's combined Mowing and Reaping Machines. Those interested can see how it works, almost any time during the present harvest, by calling. We would like to have farmers call and see for themselves, and should they wish to buy a machine, or almost any implement a farmer needs, we would like to sell, as we have the agency of the Albany Agricultural Works of Albany, N.Y., one of the most extensive establishments of the kind, in the state. They keep on hand all kinds of farming implements, Threshing Machines, Mowing and Reaping Machines, &c. Among their Mowing and Reaping Machines, may be found McCormick's, Hussey's, Burdick's, Manny's and Kirby's, which is called the New York Reaper, which is said to be the best Rea
