CHEERING WORDS GIVEN SOLDIERS BY COMMANDERS

Letters of Encouragement Are Written French Army by Joffre, Poincare and Haig on Anniversary of War.

[BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEASED WIRE]

Paris, Aug. 1, 11:10 p. m.—The Havas, the Agence Havas, the official mouthpiece of the authority of the French army, will publish tomorrow copies of letters written to President Poincare, David Lloyd-George, British secretary for war and General Sir Douglas Haig, commander of the British troops in France, together with an order of the day issued by General Joffre to the French army on the occasion of the second anniversary of the outbreak of the war. The order of General Joffre follows:

"Soldiers of the Republic: Your third year of fighting has begun. For two years past you have been supporting with unfailing strength the assaults of an implacable conflict. You have proved all the qualities of our champions in old. You remember them on the Marne, you checked them on the Yser and you took them in the Artois and in the Champagne at a time when they were rapidly seizing certain of the plains of Picardy. Their powerful reinforcements during the last six or five months delayed broke the German effort in front of Verdun.

"Thanks to your stubborn courage the armies of our allies have been enriched by magnificent arms, the results of which our enemies today are experiencing over their entire front.

"The moment is approaching when, under the strength of our united efforts, the military power of Germany will crumble.

"Soldiers of France, you may be proud of the work you already have accomplished.

"I am here determined to act as I demand of the end. Victory is certain.

"(Signed) "JOFFRE."

Letter From President.

President Poincare wrote:

"For the second time our friends and allies celebrate together a world-shaking anniversary. Two years ago we lived hours that are now to be forever. Since then, two centuries of mankind have been grappling with one another and are forcing upon adversity of blood. The nations who have all know that irreparable calamities have not prematurely exhausted their aim. The future is on the way.

"The president recalls the growth which produced the declaration of war. He recalls how the German troops violated French territory and massacred.

"Two years have passed but amid the tribulations and perils these troubles have not trouble, have remained firm in your ardor. Do not let them become discouraged, because it is they which gave to this war its cruel complications which bring to them the liberty of our lands.

"Continuously conditioned, France, which during forty-four years had succeeded always in her peaceful endeavor to live that the life which was attacking her treated by pride and fatalistic to herself, and no prince is should be right to defend the opinion to wage war. It is to save this liberty the agreements are concluded in Tuileries Palace.

Kindness and Courage.

"Two years of time have exacted and more courage when they delivered themselves of weeping in the trenches amazed in their clothing for supplies of paper. Which moment there, from the unequaled the impossibility of these cities.

"The French people had not, in spite of the shock was unknown to them, and a rise of humiliation, an unknown communication that method which is the main cause of a country and which found in the immeasurable sitting of the parties and on the fields of August, 1914, an amazing transmission.

"The war became immediately the whole force of the nation, a national war. There is not a Frenchman who remained near or far the age of the country. When you were called upon protect your mother land were and mutilated and you were put out of action. You know that your sacrifices were not in vain. You know that the land of which constitutes France's patrimony, which your fathers and forefathers, and which you have inherited, and which you must transmit to your children, is safe and free.

Separation in Sorrow.

"Among those beside one of the children and their long-cherished in the [illegible] of country. The endless grief of the mothers and the mourners of loss which have inflicted on the hearts of your parents, and [illegible] of your parents, and [illegible] which resulted in the formation. The [illegible] that the power of which you had against the aggressor and [illegible] that France would not be [illegible] in vain. [illegible] that [illegible] restored to its territories
