LAS CRUCES IS EXPECTED TO GET SYNOD NEXT YEAR

Presbyterians Adjourn Without Naming Place of Next Meeting; Officers Will Probably Name Mesilla Valley Town.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO MORNING JOURNAL)

Santa Fe, Sept. 25.—Las Cruces will probably be the place for the Presbyterian synod of New Mexico next year although the synod adjourned yesterday without selecting a place of meeting leaving it to the officers. Most of the ministers and delegates will leave for home today or tomorrow. The sessions of the Rio Grande Presbytery of Albuquerque, Rev. J. W. Winder, just re-elected superintendent of Sunday school work and Rev. R. R. Mullins re-elected stated clerk and treasurer, will go to Las Cruces shortly for a religious conference with Rev. Ralph E. Hall of Roswell, the "Cowboy Preacher."

Yesterday was a busy day for the visitors and local Presbyterians. With sermons and talks at the First Presbyterian, Indian, Christian Endeavor and the municipality and other places, Rev. J. W. Winder of Albuquerque made several addresses as did Rev. James H. Nicol of Tripoda, Sonora, who with fine simplicity and persuasion told of the work in the foreign mission field with such interest as to hold the breathless attention of the hearers. It was only recently that he succeeded in return to Ado Mine when taken from his cabin by a British petroleum on suspicion of being a German. When arraigned before the court martial at Gibraltar, he replied the first question to defendant where he was born, with such a Irish-Scotch accent that no further questions were asked and he was discharged forthwith, but returned to the United States because the British ports were closed.

Young Peoples' Rally.

At the young peoples' rally in the evening Rev. Arthur Baker of Las Cruces made a splendid inspiring address and Rev. Ralph E. Hall told of his experiences on the cinder plains in Texas and in eastern New Mexico. That these experiences do not always have to do with the church work is chosen from a recent happening when he fought at night time with a bald eagle. He was riding over the White mountains on his horse when just ahead of him he saw a huge bird with its head under the wings and asleep. The bird suddenly rose to with quickness of mind and deftness born of experience as a cowboy, swung a lariat he had with him over the bird's head, the noose also catching the bird under one wing. The eagle became more furious and with terrible screeching that reechoed through the mountains struck its claws into the haunches of the horse as with wings and beak he struck at Mr. Hall. The horse plunged and reared and with the eagle clinging to it raced down the mountain side. Hall drew the noose tighter and tighter, until the bird finally relaxed its hold and dropped to the ground stunned. The eagle was easily killed then, Hall cutting off its head. The wings measured nine feet from tip to tip.

Rev. W. A. Erwin of Socorro experienced a thrilling adventure recently in driving with a wagon from Socorro to Roswell, over an old trail. He came to New Mexico several years ago, broken in health, but regained strength and robustness despite the adjustment years of remarkably short time. Mrs. Erwin was with him. After a hard day's journey, and after dark, while crossing a deep arroyo, a wall of water rushed down upon them. Mr. Erwin had just time to unharness and turn the heads of the horses up stream holding them thus. When the water had passed, he found that the wagon had been swept clean, not one of the bed boards and other belongings left, so of Mrs. Erwin who was carried down stream for some rods. A mile stream for some rods. A mile further on they had been drawn out of the water by the time she regained him on her feet. Her leg drawn by snapped the tongue of a spring wagon, she clung with pain of spring where she clung, her legs and the water had passed. The night was bitter cold, they were frightened and bruised, all of their goods had gone, and dead tired, they worked all night to keep from freezing. When morning dawned, they found a house close by, where they secured food and a change of clothes. The next day they rested for a time, then borrowed fresh horses, drove three miles to Lucero, and then proceeded to Los Lunas and then proceeded to Roswell. The horses died from the hardship, the bedding the bedding of the bedding of the next day and Mrs. Erwin suffered any illness or serious after-effects from their adventure.

It is stories like these that often accompanied, that assist to sell to the life in New Mexico and the development of the state. The success of immigration is the result of a success of ministers, a political campaign and it is at such statewide gatherings as the synod of Presbyterians that many of them are held.

SOLDIERS AGE GREATLY WHILE SERVING IN WAR

Physicians and Scientists Speculate as to What Effect Nerve-shattering Shock May Have on Later Generations.

(Associated Press Correspondence.)

London, Sept. 17.—What will be the effect upon future generations of the premature aging of millions of men now at the battle fronts? Army physicians and men of science generally are beginning to discuss the problem. It is said that soldiers ten months in the trenches, exposed to the nerve shattering shock of shell fire, often come out with the appearance of ten years having been added to their life. A shorter period than this often suffices to turn iron gray the hair of a man of 25.

This premature aging is peculiar to no one nationality. It is noticeably alike among the English and French troops and among the prisoners from Germany, Austria and Russia. It is said to be perhaps a little more pronounced along the eastern fronts where the vast amount of territory involved frequently makes neglect of the wounded inevitable. There men have gone for days without medical attention and when finally admitted to hospital have given their ages as 40 to 45, cases when ordinarily they would have been classed as 30 to 35.

"We attribute the gray locks now so noticeable everywhere at the front to subconscious worry," said a Canadian army surgeon in discussing the subject with a correspondent of the Associated Press. "A man will not be conscious of any worry at all, whereas his comrades will daily comment upon the whitening of his hair. I have never known of hair actually growing white overnight, as the novelists love to do, but it often happens within the space of a week or ten days.

"The theory of subconscious worry was borne out strikingly a short time ago in the case of a surgeon in charge of a base hospital. This hospital was miles back of the firing line and there could have been no actual worry as to personal safety of anything of that sort. The doctor could not recall any worries officially or personally, but all the time his sub-conscious mind must have been worrying about the folks at home or about matters to which he gave not the slightest conscious consideration.

"The gray hairs come quicker to the officers than to the "Tommies," which is again a corroboration of the subconscious theory. The strain of the fighting naturally is greater with the officer, although he may outwardly have the same joyous spirit of the man with the gun who goes over the parapet with a delighted yell when the command is given to advance.

"Our nurses, too, frequently go gray without apparent reason for, mostly they are women of long training and the scenes and suffering of hospital life."

CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS ARE CHOSEN CARRIERS

(Associated Press Correspondence.)

Manila, Sept. 5.—What is considered by insular health officials as a most important discovery, has been disclosed by Dr. Schold of the government bureau of science who has been experimenting with guinea pigs. His experiments have shown that guinea pigs are intermittent cholera carriers in that they can be inoculated with the cholera germ and later will throw off the germ. Then without further inoculation, a feeding of milk brings back the cholera germ.

These experiments say local health officials explain remarkable conditions which have been found to prevail at Bilibid prison, the big insular prison in Manila. During the slight epidemic of cholera which has been in the several provinces of the islands, inspections at Bilibid have discovered cholera carriers among prisoners who on previous examinations were found to be negative. Cholera infection appeared afterwards when there had been no possibility of their exposure to the disease.

Cholera carriers are a big problem in the Philippines and through Dr. Schold's discovery, local health officials hope to be able to solve the problem of effectually killing the immunity of certain individuals to harbor the deadly germs.
