AROUND WALKERVILLE

Not Much Leasing Being Done in That Section.

THE LARGE PRODUCERS

Summary of Operations of the "Hill"—Personal and General—Reports From the New Libby District.

BUTTE, Jan. 12.—A visit to the "hill," or what is termed about town the Walkerville mines, presented the fact that silver mining is not in as flourishing a condition as in the times past. There is hardly a lease in operation less it be in some place where it was absolutely known that wages could be made. On the old Oroy Plata, just south and adjoining the Lexington there are a few men employed stoping at the 130 foot level of the old shaft, taking out some fine ore, some of it going as high as 150 ounces per ton. This is one of the Butte & Boston properties.

The old reliable Lexington continues to pound away in its customary style. The usual force is employed and its regular quantity of ore hoisted with perfect regularity from all the levels above the 600. Below that point there is little being done of consequence. With the ore from the mine to keep every stamp in the large mill dropping the company purchases much ore from leasers and other properties, chiefly among the number being the Vulcan. This mine has a complete machine shop in connection with the plant in which most all the work is done. The depth of the shaft is 1,445 feet from the collar to the cap in the station of what is called the 1,450. There the shaft was continued four sets below the station for a sump which brings the depth to very near 1,500 feet.

A company of leasers composed of K. Raff, John Williams and others are trying to make wages out of the Amadore. The last shipment, after paying all expenses, netted them $27, and that, too, after having read in one of the Butte papers that they had uncovered a bonanza equal only to the Comstock in Nevada. This month they expect to have a larger dividend, even if the white metal does persist in hanging in the vicinity of the 80 cent mark.

Just a little west of the Amadore, Harry Eads, John Basher and James Loney have a lease and have just started in.

The Magna Charta is employing the usual number of men, though the first question that greets a stranger on entering the hoist is, "What's the price of silver?" All are anxious, as many fear that if the price would decrease much their positions would be exceedingly short lived. The Magna Charta is down 700 feet and is one of the chief sources of supply for the Alice mill. Just west there is a large cut about 30 feet in width where the lead has been stoped through to the surface.

In the Alice hoist there is nothing of importance to chronicle. The engine pulls up the necessary number of cars of ore per day, while in the pump and compressor room John R. Richardson, one of Walkerville's city councilmen, glides back and forth looking after the different pieces of massive machinery in operation. In the machine shop, which is complete in every detail, the boys are finishing a small engine to be put in the Boston, one of the company's mines, which they intend to open as soon as the machinery is in condition. Of late the Alice company are purchasing ores, an unusual thing for this company, they never having purchased ore but once before. This mine has the deepest shaft in the whole district, being down 1,500 feet; and different from some of the others, the Alice company have a fine showing in its deepest levels.

In the Moulton everything seems to be exceedingly quiet, though the usual amount of work is being done. One of the improvements in this hoist is the erection of a shed over the engine, to give the engineer protection from the cold. The mill purchases all the ores it can induce the leasers to sell.

Mike Holland, the police magistrate and general all-around good fellow, is about to stake his reputation as a miner on the old Pollock. Three men are now at work and preparations are being made to start up in a small way.

The Missoula is being started up by the Butte & Boston company. It is situated in the creek northwest of town. This mine yielded some very rich ore under its former leasers, and some say they divided a large sum of money. The hoist is a small one and the building is so small as to be uncomfortable to carry on work.

There is a party of leasers adjoining on the west, and between the two hoists they have carried their stopes up to the surface.

M. A. Munan is leasing just east of the Little St. Lawrence and is using an "Armstrong" windlass with which to do the hoisting. There has been one shipment to the mill, which yielded him 49 ounces in silver and $7.85 in gold. This is perfectly satisfactory, but there seems to be a disposition on the part of the owners to dispossess them, but with the showing above stated they will not let loose.

The Ore of Butte has not cut the lead matter which was hourly expected to be encountered some time past.

A neat, clean and parlor-like hoist, with as handsome a piece of machinery as can be found in the camp, is the Mountain View. The shaft is down to the 1,000, from which cross-cuts are run intercepting both leads, the north one proving the most extensive from the top down. There is but little water to interfere with the work of this mine, owing to the shafts of the St. Lawrence and Anaconda being so close which drain nearly all the hill. A fine new ore chute for loading into the Montana Central cars has been completed. The boys have the consolation of knowing that work is more regular, owing to the chutes being empty. Most all the rope sewing is done at these works for the other mines of the Boston & Montana. This mine as also the Pensilvania and Moose is under the personal supervision of R. H. Dawe.

The Moose, another of the Boston and Montana properties, is down 300 feet and employing 30 men on a shift. This is the only exclusive silver mine operated by this company. W. H. Dawe, a brother of the superintendent, is the foreman.

The Speculator, the property of P. H. Largey and others, is at present being worked in a small way. The shaft is 435 feet and stoping is conducted on the bottom level only. It is under lease to Frank Case & Co. This is the mine that adjoins the High Ore on the west.

In the northern part of this district there is much less leasing this year than at any time in the past.

Sam Harris, the former deputy sheriff of Walkerville, is now the pumpman at the Mountain View.

The same activity displayed at the Syndicate mines is noticeable at the Anaconda mine. There are in the employ of this mine including top hands, more than 100 men. The shaft is being retimbered from the 800 to the surface, which work requires six men on a shift of eight hours or eighteen men all told on that particular work alone. At the present rate they are completing about 140 feet a week. Seven carpenters are kept busy framing timbers. The hands in the machine shop are busy boreing out the cylinders of the large compressor and repairing other portions of the machinery. The engines at the hoist are the largest in the district, being what are called two-man engines; that is the engineer does the hoisting while and experienced hand has charge of the breaks and lowers the cages. About the same condition of affairs exists at the St. Lawrence. These works are under the immediate supervision of Patrick Kane and are among the best managed properties in the state.

The Parrot company to-day are putting one a new rope while all the hoisting is being done on one side. The engine on this mine is claimed by most of the engineers to be the most perfect one-man piece of machinery in the district. The company hoists daily from 350 to 400 tons, which is coming mostly from the 500. This property has a very bright future before it. The ore from this mine is conveyed to the smelter by small cars of what is called the Summit Valley railroad company, owned and controlled by a separate corporation. The cars are propelled to the mines by horses up a steep grade. The same cars convey the ores from the Virginius, which is under lease to Dave Bricker and adjoins the Parrot on the west. This property to-day produces much ore and greatly assists in keeping the Parrot smelter amply supplied with ores.

The Boston & Montana have the Nora under bond that lies directly south of the Harris and Lloyd, and in which they have James Cassiday employed keeping the water out of the shaft. The Missoula, northeast of town, is sinking and being opened up for the immediate production of ore.

The Belmont, in the vicinity of the Northern Pacific track southeast of town, was yesterday putting in an ore chute. This mine has been developed for the past year satisfactorily.

The West Elber continues to take out rich ore.

There is some talk on the streets of the Blue Bird starting up in 30 days.

Bells in the Alice and other properties of this company gives signals of the near approach of the cage to the surface.

No more washing tailings from the silver mills on the hill. All the creeks have frozen up.

Car men at the Pennsylvania work eight hours, and those at the Mountain View, who are working 10, are desirous of working the same hours.

Less leasing is going on north of Walkerville than ever before in the history of the camp.

More attention will be paid to placer mining this summer than for years past.

Charlie Brant made a good clean-up from the tailings of the old Centennial mill last fall.

The slum from the old Lexington paid well for reworking.

W. R. Young, the under sheriff, continues to work at the High Ore.

Charlie Shoemaker, the newly appointed mining inspector, has had much experience among the mines of Silver Bow county.

Jim Kelley and others are developing the Odin in Dublin gulch. The ore assays 10 per cent. in copper and eight ounces in silver.

Have Enough to Eat.

In Spokane it is confidently stated that the people of Kaslo are starving and that provisions are almost unattainable. This is not perhaps absolutely true, as it is still possible to obtain a meal at the no doubt famine price of the familiar four bits, says the Kaslo correspondent of the Nelson, B. C., Miner. We have to do without the luxuries of the table and to be content with beef, ham, eggs, pork, vegetables, pie, etc., but no doubt this will be remedied when communication is once more open, and we shall then have our usual delicacies, such as canvass-back duck, strawberries and cream, whitstable oysters and other things. In the meantime we have to grin and bear it.

The Nelson, B. C., Tribune seems to think that some American miners in that city and district are entitled to a "dose of British justice." It says: "The bane of the mining industry in many of the camps in the United States has been litigation over grub-stake interests, and if our courts do not promptly sit down on grub-stake claimants, the industry will get a black eye in this province. Already work on a valuable property in Slocan district has been stopped because of an injunction issued by Judge Walkem in the interest of a man who, it is said, claims a half interest in the mine because he furnished one of the several original locators with $16 worth of grub. The injunction was issued in Victoria, hundreds of miles distant from the mine, and, it is said, on ex parte evidence. The lawless element that drifts over to our camps from the United States stands in fear of our courts. Would it not be well for the courts to give the mine litigant element so strong a dose of British justice that they would only be too glad to return to the country from whence they came?"

Sad Fate of a Prospector.

The body of John Harrison, a prospector, was found six miles from Troy on the trail to the Big Eight mining camp, near Calahan creek, in Libby district last Sunday. He left for the camp with a load of 60 pounds of provisions, and within a short distance of his destination fatigue conquered him and he expired in a snow storm. He was highly esteemed by his many associates. His parents are said to be very wealthy, but he preferred the excitement attending a prospector's life to the luxuries of a comfortable home. His body was sent to Golden, Colo., his former home, for burial.

The Silver Crown, one of the best known and most developed mining claims in the Montana Kootenai, is about 10 miles from Libby, says the Miner of that town. It is two miles southwest of Shaughnessy hill, lying on the south side of Granite creek. This claim was located in 1887 by George Blackwell, Tom Shearer and others. In March, 1892, the Consolidated Silver Crown Mining company was formed under the laws of the state of Washington with headquarters in Spokane. A portion of the shares are disposed of each year for the development of the property. Last spring $900 was expended. A crew of six men have been at work the past three months. Two tunnels have been run. The work at this time is in a tunnel lower down and the last reports show that 80 feet have been run, calculating to strike the vein in the next 20 feet. A favorable showing in the tunnel is that the vein gets wider the deeper the tunnel is run. The rock is of a good concentrating character. The company are making plans to put up reduction works in the near future. Assays from the croppings give 170 ounces of silver and two in gold. What the recent assays are is not generally given out, but an interested party said they far exceeded the above. From 50 to 75 tons of sorted ore are now on the dump taken from the upper tunnel.

By long odds the finest tonsorial and bathing establishment in Butte is that of H. M. Cushing, No. 19 West Park street, in the Curtis Music hall. The general entrance is on Park street, but the ladies are especially provided for by a private entrance way at the east side of the building. The barber shop is large, handsomely draped, light and made cheerful by singing birds and growing plants. The furniture is the best. The establishment contains six chairs, presided over by expert men, thus insuring prompt attention to all patrons. The rear of the building is fitted up with bath rooms, which are supplied with porcelain tubs, hot and cold water, showers, in fact every convenience mentionable for a luxurious bath. A new feature, sure to be appreciated, is the introduction of the Turkish bath, with the massage rubbings by skilled attendants, and cosy rooms, elegantly furnished, where the patron can enjoy a rest and a "drying out" before leaving. You will be very hard to please if you are not perfectly satisfied with everything connected with this handsome place.
