TOWNS IN THE NORTH

Some of the Most Important Happenings of Recent Date.

COMMENT AND PURE FACTS

There Is Some Item of Interest From Nearly Every Settlement, City, Ranch or Coulee in That Section.

Great Falls, April 25.—E. B. Norell, the defaulting treasurer of Havre, who was sent to Deer Lodge for a term, is said to be conducting a school among the inmates of the penitentiary. He is comparatively a young man, possessed of a good business education and is eminently fitted for the work to which he has been assigned. Notwithstanding the bad record he made at Havre on two occasions, Norell has friends in Northern Montana who will be glad to see him make an effort to redeem his reputation after the expiration of his sentence. Mrs. Norell, a heartbroken woman, has returned to her relatives in the East to await the freedom of her husband.

As soon as Lewistown cools down nicely from the effects of the recent election, another effort will be made to incorporate the town, and the second attempt is expected to result in a victory for those favoring a municipal form of government. One vote killed the proposition at the late election and it is alleged that three illegal votes were cast against incorporation. Friends of the step towards advancement are by no means discouraged and if pluck, energy and hard work means success their efforts are likely to be covered with victory in the near future.

Neihart is in the throes of an aldermanic contest, protests having been made in the council against Aldermen Parry and Bonner holding seats in that body. The questions at issue will be settled at a meeting of the council to be held on the evening of May 1. The annual salary of the city marshal has been fixed at $900; street commissioner, $100; clerk, $100, and treasurer, $180. These salaries are reasonable enough to suit the most conservative citizen and indicates an economiaci administration.

The Gilt Edge mine and mill is closed down temporarily on account of the impassable condition of the ore road from the mine. Those operating the property are said to be making a success of the undertaking, and if there is anything left after the claims are paid off Mr. Ammon will come out from New York to claim the residue.

The Judith Round-Up association will hold a meeting at Lewistown Saturday, May 2, to arrange for the spring work. Cattle in that section of the state are reported in excellent condition.

The sporting fraternity of Montana will doubtless be pleased to learn that Senator Chandler of Fergus county, and of anti-gambling law renown, has just recoverd from rather a serious illness and is enjoying better health than ever.

Commissioner Bower of Fergus county has been called to New York by a telegram announcing the serious illness of Mrs. Bower, who has been East for several months undergoing medical treatment.

The Lewistown Argus says that Sheriff Waite received subpoenas Monday for the summoning to appear at Helena of S. E. Suitor, Paul Guilet, Pete Welsh, Tom Welsh, Dr. J. H. Williard and J. Henry Stuart. They were wanted to appear as witnesses before the grand jury in the case of the United States vs. H. W. Chase charged with cutting timber without a permit. The witnesses were duly summoned, but as all but Dr. Williard were unable to pay their expenses they did not start until Wednesday morning, in the meantime Sheriff Waite having secured an order from the United States authorities for the advancing of their fees. Witnesses in the United States courts are allowed 5 cents a mile on the railroad, 15 cents by private conveyance and $1.50 per diem.

Moses Walding, a sheep herder, died at Lewistown last Wednesday of lockjaw. He was taken there from the Bowen sheep ranch near Oka on Tuesday with a frozen foot, having been caught out in a storm. He was to have had an operation performed on his foot, but died before the surgeons were ready.

The merchandise stock of the defunct Ammon-Stivers Mining company was sold at Lewistown during the past week and the money derived therefrom will go to the creditors of the company. It will be but a drop in the bucket towards paying the claims against the concern.

C. E. Rogers, a well-known and highly respected resident of Fergus county, died at Glenwood Springs, Colorado, last Sunday. He was afflicted with cancer and under treatment of a specialist when death relieved him from suffering.

The Lewistown Argus says that the worse storm of the season continued unabated until Friday, and with less severity until Monday morning. Probably 16 inches of snow fell, but as the ground was warm thawing continued underneath and the snow did not pile up as it otherwise would have done. The moisture is worth thousands of dollars to the farmers and stockmen, and though such a storm seemed unseasonable and very disagreeable to the traveler and pedestrian, few complaints were heard. All mails were more or less delayed and did not entirely make up their lost time until Monday noon.

It is alleged by those supposed to be familiar with the subject that the populists of Cascade county consider their party so strong that they will not entertain any proposition to fuse this fall unless they are given the lion's share of offices—or rather nominations for offices. Those who claim to know assert that the republican leaders are doing all in their power to encourage the populists in their demands, with a view of having three separate and distinct tickets in the field. With three tickets the republicans will stand a good show of carrying every precinct in the county.

BIG TIMBER.

A Man Arrested for Horse Stealing—More or Less Building.

Special Correspondence of the Standard.

Big Timber, April 24.—William Hanks, who hails from near Nye City, was arrested Wednesday by Under Sheriff Jackson on a warrant sworn out by James Slattery, who charged Hanks with stealing a horse belonging to him. Slattery had seen Hanks driving the horse near Greycliff the night before, but did not ask him how he obtained the animal. Hanks passed through here Wednesday morning and was half way to Springdale when arrested. He was arraigned before Justice Lanphear, who at the request of the defendant's counsel, John E. Barbour, set the preliminary examination, Hanks giving bonds for his appearance in the sum of $100.

Though comparatively early in the season, Big Timber is having something of a building boom. There are already a half dozen substantial buildings in course of erection and there are more to follow. Some of the buildings are to be of the famous stone which abounds in this locality. The buildings now going up are the electric light, Budd's livery stable, Pound's blacksmith and several dwelling houses. The material is on the ground for the new wool house, and its erection will be commenced in a few days.

A Small Sealing Catch.

From present indications this year's sealing catch off the Pacific coast will be the smallest on record and will practically be a dismal failure. Coast sealing is prohibited after April 30. The reports brought to Victoria up to the end of March show that the schooners of the sealing fleet had, up to that time, taken fewer seals than in any previous season, and there are fewer seals in the coast waters than in many years.

ADVENTISTS IN JERUSALEM.

Americans Have Formed a Religious Community in the Holy City.

From the New York Journal.

Seventy-seven Adventists sailed from Philadelphia recently to join Jerusalem's queerest colony, the members of which believe the ascension to heaven, upon which their belief is based, will take place not far from the city's gates. All Adventists who adhere to the old idea of going to heaven from any other place are to them misguided persons. They are firmly convinced that the spot near Jerusalem where the colony is located that they are going to join is the heaven-chosen location. The members of the party that embarked from Philadelphia are from the West, where all the converts to this particular Adventist theory have come from. They gathered at Chicago, which has always been their headquarters in this country, and from there the pilgrimage that will have its ending in the Holy Land was begun.

The history of the far-away colony is especially interesting to people of this country, because here the plan was conceived, and those still living of its projectors are American citizens. Fifteen years ago Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Spafford were residents of Chicago. Mr. Spafford was a lawyer who had amassed a comfortable fortune and stood well at the bar. Always interested in theology, he became a student of the beliefs of the Seventh Day Adventists, whose headquarters in the United States are at Battle Creek, Mich., a comparatively short distance from Chicago. The more Mr. Spafford investigated their ideas the more faith he placed in them, except that he believed that the place of ascension was to be near Jerusalem. Finally both he and Mrs. Spafford became so thoroughly imbued with this idea that they determined to found an Adventist colony near Jerusalem if it could be done. So they sold all that they had, and with a few friends departed for the east, and at Jerusalem built three houses for themselves near the Damascus gate. So admirable was the conduct of the founders and those whom they gathered about them that they won general regard, and "the Americans," as they were and are called, received the respect of all classes.

The colony waxed apace, until Mr. Spafford was seized by an illness that ended in death. This was about three years ago, and shortly afterward Mrs. Spafford returned to the United States, accompanied by William H. Rudy, one of the leading men of the colony, and practically Mr. Spafford's successor. They went to Chicago, making their headquarters there, and from there conducted a campaign of conversion. The result was the party that has just sailed from Philadelphia and 20 other converts resident in Chicago and several Kansas towns. These latter were unable to leave their homes just now, but will all go to Jerusalem in about three months. The converts to this belief are confined to no race or sect. There are no sects in heaven, they say, so there really should be none on earth. The party that is now on the ocean, for instance, is principally composed of Scandinavians, a race that seems peculiarly susceptible to conversion to unusual religious beliefs.

The Jerusalem colony is purely cooperative. It is divided into two parts. One is located within the city, the other on the summit of a high hill. On this hill is an enormous structure, the home of 100 Adventists, and it is here the members busy themselves in the trades in which they happen to be proficient. All the products of this hive of industry not needed for community use are disposed of for cash, and the proceeds turned over to Mr. Rudy, who, with Mrs. Spafford, has charge of the finances.

The addition to the colony that is now on its way has necessitated the erection of four houses for the accommodation of the new members, which, it is expected, will be completed by the time they are needed. The belief of these exiles is according to the original ideas of Dr. Spafford, the basic principles of the colony's foundation. They have no rules for government and their manner of living is like that of one great family. "The one unsectarian and undenominational," said Mr. Rudy, in discussing the colony, just before he sailed. "We simply pin our faith upon the Bible and its teachings as we understand them."

MAKER OF POPULAR PUZZLES

What Sam Loyd Has Done for the Public Entertainment.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

Sam Loyd is a remarkable man in more ways than one. He is known the whole world over as a mathematical genius, and to try to tell just when he was not doing something extraordinary would be a difficult task. At 9 years of age he was champion of the New York Chess club, and for the past 40 years he has been recognized as the leading problemist, his problems reaching into the thousands. For many years he was editorially associated with Paul Morphy, the latter being the player, and Sam the problemist.

The latest puzzle that has come from a head that has devised thousands of them is a circle of thirteen "Chinks," or Chinamen, each having a red jacket, blue trousers, pig-tail, sword and wooden-soled shoes, and by simply giving the wheel a one-eighth turn one of the Chinamen, sword, pig-tail and all disappears, and the question is, where did he go? for with the same turn back he appears again in all his gorgeous array. In his boyhood days Sam was a sleight-of-hand performer and disturbed somewhat the staid residents of Philadelphia, where he was born on Jan. 20, 1841, by his precocious genius on the lines named, adding thereto an unusual gift of mimicry. Mr. Loyd now resides at 153 Hasley street, he having been a resident of this city for twelve years, and he told the reporter who sought him out that his puzzle making, no doubt, grew out of his mechanical bent and his love of chess, although he does not remember the time when he was not making something, but he is desirous of having it understood that puzzle work is only a sort of diversion. He is considered in many quarters, judging by testimonials, as one of the best mechanics living. He is an inventor, has been granted many patents, including among them those for steam engines. Mr. Loyd has in his possession a Jorgensen repeating watch which is worth $1,000, and no one is allowed to touch it when it needs repairing but himself. He is also the inventor of a bicycle, has traveled all over the world, speaks fluently a number of languages, has been an artist and engraver all his life, and a newspaper writer for 25 years, having been connected with most of the New York dailies.

Mr. Loyd owns up to the great sin of having invented the "15-block puzzle," and to which he solemnly avows there is no answer. It was freely stated at the time it was playing havoc with the brains of the country that he made $1,000,000 out of it. He says nobody made a cent. One large dry goods firm in New York sold 100,000 at 3 cents a piece, and it cost more than that to make them. Millions of them were sold, however. Mr. Loyd says he served on the grand jury shortly after the "15 puzzle" became the rage, and it was necessary to visit the jails, almshouses and insane asylums, and on a day when he was at one of the latter institutions the doctors gravely told him, having been previously informed that he was the inventor, that there were 1,500 persons there who had become violently and hopelessly insane through trying to solve that awful puzzle.

By the "pony puzzle," Mr. Loyd says, he made more money than all of the other puzzles put together. More than a thousand million of them were disposed of for advertising purposes. He is also the inventor of "parcheesi," which has been a source of great comfort to country people an long winter evenings, and with which many city people kill time. Twenty-eight years ago he invented "La Petit Bagatelle," which later was brought out by another man as "Pigs in Clover," and which also had a paretic influence. To sum it all up, Mr. Loyd is a remarkable man, and puzzle concocting is only incidental to a mind possessed of a wonderful mechanical bent.

Cannot Swallow Food or Drink.

The town of Alexandria, Ind., has a case that is very peculiar and which has attracted attention for some time. Four weeks ago William Thornburg was stricken with paralysis of the muscles of deglutation and he had not swallowed one drop of water nor a morsel of food until yesterday, when a few morsels of semi-liquid food was, with great difficulty, passed into his stomach. He has been kept in fairly good condition by other means of alimentation for 28 days, and, although cases of this character are nearly always fatal, his physicians have some hope that he can be kept alive until the injury, which lies at the base of the brain, can be removed. The case is a very rare one and is exciting no small amount of attention, especially from the medical fraternity.
