A Battle Raging

ALEXANDRIA, August 19.—Egypt is now convinced that although on the Mahmoudieh canal the rebels were defeated, the battle is not ended. Arabi Pasha is at Mahmoudieh and will probably attack Alexandria on Sunday. The firing still continues.

Getting Ready to Fight.

ALEXANDRIA, August 19.—Six [illegible] left Friday night to take position near the harbor to [illegible] the Suez Canal.

[illegible] 19.—The troops and fleet are now steaming eastward. The ships have their topmasts lowered and are cleared, with everything [illegible] ready for action.

Egyptian News.

ALEXANDRIA, August 19.—The Khedive decided to entrust Cherif Pasha with the presidency of the new ministry, but the ministry will not be constituted until the arrival of Riaz Pasha. Information from headquarters states that a prominent person has been discovered to be in constant communication with the rebels. He will be arrested and confined on board an Egyptian man-of-war. It is reported that the person referred to is Hasnaun Pasha, Chief minister of war.

The American Consul Assaulted.

ALEXANDRIA, August 19.—The arrest of the person mentioned as having been in constant communication with the rebels, was made this morning. Long, the American consul, was attacked yesterday inside of the gates of the Gabarri, by about forty natives. Soldiers arrived and dispersed the crowd. The ringleaders of the assaulting party were arrested. It appears the natives had attempted to stop Long when he was driving, he became annoyed, and urged his horses, inflicting injuries on some of the party.

Casualties by Fire.

NEW YORK, August 19.—Later estimates place the loss by fire at $25,000; insured $15,000. Plans in process of manufacture. 400 men are out of work. Two men were badly scalded and four others received injuries that may prove fatal, by the breaking of the boiler of the Steamer Kate Skull this morning. The walking beam broke and jammed the piston rod into the boiler. Two passengers were all badly scared.

A From the Apache Country.

TUCSON, Arizona, August 19.—The Star's special advices of the 16th from Hermosillo Sonora says, in the fight with the Apaches in the Saharipa district the Mexican troops lost forty-five men and the Indians left thirty-eight dead on the field. Eighteen women and twelve children were killed on the road between Saharipa and the Trinidad mine. There are 1,000 National troops expected shortly—600 coming by steamer. The Indian prisoners are still in Hermosillo.

Reduced Railroad Rates.

CHICAGO, August 19.—The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad have announced the following reduced rates to Iowa points, to go into effect September 1st: Iowa City, $6.80; Grinnell, $8.80; Des Moines, $10.45; Griswold, $13.35; Oskaloosa, $8.75; Pacific Junction, $14.40; Omaha, $14.00, and other corresponding reductions will be made to all points on the Pacific Coast. All the points named compete with the Rock Island road and war may be the result.

Burned to Death.

CHICAGO, August 19.—About 2 o'clock this morning a fire broke out in the Walton House, 32 West Washington street, a not too respectable locality, and from No. 45 where the smoke was thickest agonized screams of a woman were heard. The firemen broke into the room and extinguished the flames and found Mrs. Frank Flynn lying on a bed burned out of resemblance to human form and barely alive. She appeared to have upset the kerosene lamp in a frenzy of drunken frenzy. She was taken to the county hospital to die. Her flesh was burned to a crisp.

The Republicans of Missouri.

ST. LOUIS, August 19.—C. Borch, editor of the State Journal at Jefferson City, publishes a card to the Republican State Central Committee to prevent the calling of the State Convention, asks Republicans who favor one to send him their names and he will call the Convention if at their meeting on the 24th the State Committee do not. B. Gratz Brown is out in a letter in favor of submitting a prohibition amendment to a vote of the people, and saying prohibition has in it every element of right and justice and common sense.

The Tariff Commission.

LONG BRANCH, August 19.—The Tariff Commission will sit at Cleveland August 31st; Detroit, September 1st; Indianapolis, 2d; Cincinnati, 4th and 5th, Louisville, 6th, and Chicago, 7th to 9th.

Nicholson's Denial.

WASHINGTON, August 19.—In a private letter Rear Admiral Nicholson at Alexandria denies that he threatened to return the fire if the Egyptians fired on his vessels, also that he cheered on the English.

Miscellaneous

WILKESBARRE, August 19.—It is stated the striking driver boys will return on their own terms.

QUEBEC, August 19.—A fire in St. Rochas this morning burned Rochas' soap and candle factory, also a factory belonging to Richards, manufacturer of leather and kip packing cases and three private residences. Loss $50,000.

LONDON, August 19.—A dispatch from Alexandria states that General Willis and Graham and the Duke of Connaught have gone to Aboukir. Of the whole fleet of ironclads the Invincible and the Inconstant alone remain. The 48th, 75th, and 79th regiments at Ramleh will probably support the movement at Aboukir by an attack on the left flank of the enemy.

NEW YORK, August 19.—A fire this morning destroyed the seame factory of Hartman, Dowling & Peck, 10th Avenue and 5th street. Loss is estimated at $75,000, insured partially. The fourth floor of the factory, occupied by Oakly, dealing in and manufacturing Washing machines, stock and machinery was destroyed. Loss $30,000. Partially insured.

Baneful Litigation.

One of our Butte exchanges has a long list of twenty odd suits which have been recently instituted for the recovery of property in the town of Butte, Montana, now occupied by many of the best and most valuable buildings on that place—property estimated to be worth $2,000,000 at present. Parties maintain in these suits, as we understand it, are persons who claim to have received patents to the ground claimed, as mines, while those sued and in possession hold the property under a patent issued to the same ground as a town site. In other words, the General Land Office has issued two patents to the same property, and hence this unfortunate litigation. In this connection we reproduce a decision made somewhat more than a year ago by the General Land Office, in regard to the Tombstone town site, as follows:

GEORGE R. WILLIAMS, Esq., Tombstone, Arizona:

Sir—I am in receipt of your communication dated the 7th instant in which you state a client of yours, while sinking or excavating on a town lot owned by him in the town of Tombstone, discovered a ledge bearing silver ore, and you request to be informed in his behalf how he may obtain a title to the same.

Patent issued for the townsite of Tombstone, September 22, 1880, and contained the following clauses, to wit:

"Provided That no title shall be acquired to any mine of gold, silver, cinnabar or copper, or to any valid mining claim or possession held under existing laws.

"And provided further, That the grant hereto made is held and declared to be subject to all the conditions, limitations and restrictions contained in Section 2,336 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, so far as the same are applicable thereto."

The effect of this exception—which is, in terms, almost in the exact language of the law authorizing it—is to exclude from the grant, first, all valid mining claims prior to the entry of the town site and held in accordance with existing laws when the townsite patent issued; also, second, all "mines of gold, silver, cinnabar or copper."

No definition to be placed upon the terms "mines of gold, silver, cinnabar or copper," is somewhat doubtful, and I am inclined to think the laws relative to lode mines discovered prior to the issuance of patent.

Practically, however, under existing legislation, it is immaterial whether veins not known at the date of patent are excluded from the grant. Conceding that the title thereto remains in the United States, they would not be that case be subject to occupation and purchase under the provisions of the mining act, for the reason that said act permits locations of mineral deposits only when they are situated in the United States. Even if the title to such veins remains in the United States, the land on which they are situated belongs to the grantees under the townsite patent, hence such veins would not constitute "valuable mineral deposits in lands belonging to the United States," which alone are subject to location.

I am, therefore, of the opinion that, under existing legislation, your client cannot obtain a patent for the mine discovered by him.

Very respectfully,
C. W. HOLCOMB,
Acting Commissioner.

By this decision it would appear, as might rationally be expected, that a prospector cannot locate a claim on land already patented as a town site, and on the other hand that a patent cannot be legally issued to include any ground already located and occupied as a mining claim previously to the claim as a town site. If it can be shown that the property in question was covered by patents to mineral claims prior to the issuance of the town site patent, we cannot see how any one can hope to hold under the junior patent. Furthermore: Is not the system a somewhat loose, immethodical one in the General Land Office which admits of the issuance of two sets of patents to the same ground. A systematic, careful administration of the duties of that office, assuredly, would know how to guard against any such casualties. And yet double sets of patents are by no means rare.—*N. Y. ENTOMBED.

Details of the Search, Finding and Burial of De Long and Party.

Engineer Melville's Long and Sad Journey on the Coast of Siberia.

Mournful Sepulture of the Jeannette Explorers—Records of the Dead.

Sad Presumption that Lieutenant Chipp's Boat Swamped and all Perished.

From the New York Herald.

BOOKOFF, LENA DELTA, April 24, 1882.—On the 16th of March, all preliminaries having been arranged, Chief Engineer Melville's search party started from the temporary depot he had established at Cas Carta to make a thorough and exhaustive search for Captain De Long and his unfortunate companions. The search party as organized consisted of Chief Engineer G. W. Melville, commanding; James H. Bartlett, assistant engineer of the Jeannette, and William Nindorman, who was one of the two who was sent ahead by Captain De Long to seek the aid they could not reach in a body, and thus escaped the tragic fate that awaited those left behind. Besides those named the search party comprised Messrs. Greenbek and Bolonkoff, interpreters; Kolinkin, a Cossack, and a Russian exile, Yafeem Kapella, general assistant and Superviseur of the Yakoot dog drivers and helpers, who were Tomat Constantin, Georgia Nicholai, "Captain" Innukkonty Shimuloff, Story Nicholai, Vasegill Koalgank and Simeon Ilink, with Ivan Portnyagin and his wife, cook and helper.

THE SEARCH.

The search was first from Usterday, following the track of the retreat until arriving at Matvey. This search resulted in finding nothing new concerning the lost ones, and then Chief Engineer Melville decided to work back upon Nindermann's line of retreat. They started on the 23rd of March from Matvey, and soon found the wreck of a screw for which they had been looking, for Nindermann felt it would be a surer guide than any other to the remains of the former shipmates. He had passed this wreck when in company with Noros the first day they separated from the main body, and was convinced, judging from the condition in which he had left his companions and the rate of travel they were able to maintain, that they had not advanced far beyond this conspicuous object. And so it proved, for after they had found the wreck they had not hunted along the bank more than about five hundred yards when they came upon the barrel of a rifle, which, with the ends of four poles lashed together upon which it hung, was protruding from the snowdrift. The poles had been lashed together to support one end of the ridgepole of the tent, while the other extended back and rested upon the bank.

A MOURNFUL DISCOVERY.

The natives were at once set to work digging out the snow on either side of the poles, which here was about eight feet deep, and soon each came up as a body at the same time. Thus Boyd and Gortz were found, and Chief Melville, after directing them to clear away the snow toward the east, as ended the bank, here twenty feet above the level of the ice, to find a place from which he could take a round of angles with his compass. While proceeding in a westerly direction his attention was drawn to a camp-kettle about a thousand yards from the tent place, and, approaching, he nearly stumbled over a bare hand protruding out of the snow. Stooping down and removing the snow, which was not over a foot in depth, he found the remains of the unfortunate commander of the expedition, Captain De Long, and within three feet of him lay Dr. Ambler, while "Sam," the Chinese cook, was stretched at their feet. All were partly covered by the half tent which they had brought up with them when their companions no longer needed it, and some pieces of blanket had also been used to secure a little warmth. Near by were the remains of a fire and in the camp kettle some pieces of Arctic willow of which they had made tea.

RECORDS OF THE DEAD

On the ground near him lay Captain De Long's pocket journal, a few extracts from which in courtesy record I have already sent you. It seemed apparent that he, with the surgeon and "Sam," had died the day of the last entry of this journal, and probably the book had not been returned to his pocket after making that entry, for his pencil was also on the ground near the book. He had ever been particular to make some entry in his book each day, and when nothing transpired he desired to mention he merely wrote the date and the number of days since the vessel sank and the retreat commenced. Before leaving the tent place to drag their weary and shoeless feet to their last rest they had respectfully covered the face of Mr. Collins, their brother officer, with a cloth. The tent had been pitched in a deep gorge in the river bank. The two boxes of records were found at the tent place, below the bank, and a little further toward the east were the medicine chest and the flag still upon its staff.

THE OTHER VICTIMS.

The bodies of Iverson and Dressler were lying side by side just outside of where the half tent shelter had hung from the ridge pole, and that of Mr. Collins was further in rear on the inside of the tent. Lee and Knack were not discovered for some time, but on referring to the Captain's journal the searcher found the statement that after they had died their bodies were carried "around the corner out of sight" by the three officers, who, with the cook, were now the only survivors, and too weak to bury their fallen comrades. By snow drifting through the snow toward the west the missing bodies were found in a cleft in a bank near by. None of those found had boots on their feet, but instead had wrapped rags around and tied them on to protect them somewhat from the cold. In their pockets, however, were found the remains of burned skin boots, which showed but too plainly to what strait they had been reduced for food. The hands and clothing of all were burned, and it seemed in their last despairing effort to gather some warmth they had actually crawled into the fire. Boyd was found lying directly upon the remains of a fire, and his clothing was burned through to the skin, but his body was not scorched.

RECORDS AND BOOKS.

When the records and books were found they were immediately closed and no one permitted to examine their content, with the exception of Captain De Long's pocket journal, and of that only the month of October, in order to serve as a guide in prosecuting their further search. The articles of value and such things as would be of interest to the friends of the deceased were also boxed up, and together with the records and the flag, were at once sent to Yakoutsk in charge of Mr. Bolonkoff and the Cossack to be placed in the care of the Governor of the district until the arrival of Chief Melville or instructions from the Navy Department concerning the disposition to be made of them. In the meantime diligent search has been made for the remains of Alexia, whom the Captain's journal says was carried out upon the ice abreast of the scow and covered with slabs of ice, but as yet they have not been found.

DISPOSITION OF THE BODIES.

It was Chief Melville's intention to bury the remains upon the bank where they were found, but the natives assured him that in all probability any tomb could be washed away, as, when the river broke up in the spring there would be about four feet of water over the entire delta. He therefore had them all removed to the top of a hill of solid rock about 300 feet high, about 40 versts southwest, and there constructed a mausoleum of wood from the wreck of the scow near where they were found. First, a gigantic cross was hewn out of a solid piece of driftwood and erected on the crest of the hill, and around it was built a box six feet wide, two feet deep and twenty-two feet long, placed exactly in the magnetic meridian. After the bodies had been placed therein the box was covered with timbers laldside by side and a ridge pole sixteen feet long framed into the cross five feet above the lid of the coffin, the ends supported by timbers having the same inward slant. Against this ridge pole were placed timbers side by side until the whole formed a true pyramid, and then stones were heaped upon the structure, so that it looks like a pyramidal mound of stones surmounted by a cross. The cross itself is twenty-two feet high from the surface of the rock, one foot square, and the crossbeam is twelve feet long by one foot square.

THE DESCRIPTION.

On the cross is engraved the following inscription, cut in by the search party at their house at night:

In MEMORY of 12 of the OFFICERS and MEN of the ARCTIC STEAMER "JEANNETTE," WHO DIED OF STARVATION IN LENA DELTA, OCTOBER, 1881.

Lieutenant G. W. DeLONG.
Dr. J. E. Ambler
J. J. COLLINS.
W. LEE,
A. GORTZ
A. DRESSLER,
H. ERICHSEN,
G. W. BOYD.
N. IVERSON,
H. KNACK,
ALEXIA,
AH SAM.

Chief Melville has made arrangements to have the pyramid sealed this spring, under the direction of the commander at Bulun, in case he has finished his search in time, to escape before the breaking up of the rivers. The structure is a very creditable affair and conspicuous from the river a distance of twenty versts.

IN SEARCH OF CHIPP.

As soon as the entombment had been completed the search party started, on the 19th of April, to look for any trace of Lieutenant Chipp's party having reached the delta or adjacent coasts. It would be impossible to make a complete search of the delta for that is merely an immense sand bank, cut in every direction by thousands of large and small rivers, many of them navigable, but most of them changing their direction from year to year. A search at this time by so small a party could necessarily only cover the coast line before the sledding season is over, and after that all traces would be removed by the breaking up and overflow of the river. In this last search Chief Melville was to take a westerly course as far as the Olenek river and return by the northwest coast to Cas Carta, while Bartlett and Nindorman started together from Cas Carta and went in company as far to the northwest as Barkin. Here they were to separate, Bartlett taking the eastern coast, while Nindorman returned to Cas Carta by the northern shore.

NO TRACES.

Neither Bartlett nor Nindorman found any trace of those they were seeking, and at this date Chief Melville has not returned. He was unfortunately delayed three days after the others in starting by circumstances over which he had no control, and may have found it a serious inconvenience when the time for sledging was drawing so rapidly to a close. After his return to Cas Carta the entire party will join Bartlett, who is at Yermaylook, and from there a search will be made to Cape Borehoya and the bay of that name. If nothing should transpire from these last searches the sad presumption must prevail that Lieutenant Chipp's boat swamped in the gale of September 12 and all on board of her perished.

THE JEANNETTE'S CAPTAIN.

NEW YORK, August 11.—The engrossed resolutions recently adopted by the graduates of the school-ship St. Mary's of the class of 1876, in memory of Lieutenant Commander George W. DeLong, the commander of the Jeannette, and formerly an instructor on the school-ship, were presented last evening to Capt. Jas. A. Wotton, father of Mrs DeLong, who received them on her behalf.

The proceedings were held last evening in the office of Messrs. Stratton & Storm, No. 206 East twenty-seventh street. Some twenty-five or thirty members of the class were present.

About 9 o'clock Mr. Wetmore called the meeting to order and introduced Lieutenant Jaques as the gentleman selected to make the presentation. He and Captain Wotton stood up together. Mr. Jaques briefly thanked the graduates for making him their representative.

A LETTER OF CONDOLENCE.

Lieutenant Jaques then read a letter addressed personally to Mrs. DeLong, and to be forwarded to her after receiving the signature of each member of the class. The text of the letter was as follows:

NEW YORK, August 10, 1881.

DEAR MADAME.—The young men whom your husband trained as lads to be good men and good citizens present to you a little memorial setting forth their love and admiration for the gallant gentleman you mourn in common with them. Our sorrow for his taking off is not as a widow's grief; but, as his pupils in the school of duty and self-forgetfulness, we unite in lamenting the death of our beloved instructor. To you, as to us, perhaps, there is a consolation in the knowledge that his end was glorious, that he died like a hero, thinking not of himself, but of those around him, and in death proved himself to be all that he pointed out to us of ideal manhood. In his life, as we knew him, he taught us to be obedient, kindly and chivalrous, in his death he taught the world how hopes can perish.

This great Republic has not wanted for brave men to carry its flag to the uttermost parts of the earth, but it never owned, parted with and lost a greater man or better servant than our beloved instructor. He was for a greater or less length of time our pattern and authority, and we pray that God, who in his infinite wisdom removed him from this life in the prime of his glorious manhood, will be the protector of his orphans and widow. Yours, very sincerely,

THE GRADUATES OF THE NEW YORK NAUTICAL SCHOOL, CLASS OF 1876.

CAPTAIN WOTTON'S REPLY.

On formally accepting the memorial which consists of a series of resolutions, engrossed, and surrounded with illustrations of the perils of Arctic life and framed in ebony with gold mouldings, as heretofore described in detail in the Herald, Captain Wotton, showing the white evidences of deep emotion, spoke briefly as follows:—

Gentlemen:—I receive this testimonial with sincere thanks in the name of my daughter, Mrs. DeLong. I am quite sure she will receive it gratefully and value it highly as a tribute of regard and esteem for her beloved husband. It is her only consolation to receive testimonials such as this from those who have served under him and above him alike, all representing him in one and the same light, as a sincere gentleman and an honest man. Gentlemen, once again receive the expression of my thanks and those of Mrs. DeLong.

Lieutenant Danenhower was next called upon, and as he rose he was greeted with a hearty round of applause. He said it gave him great satisfaction to be present on an occasion when a tribute was paid to the memory of Lieutenant Commander De Long. The testimonial prepared by the young pupils of that gentleman met his hearty concurrence. He had known him intimately for four years, and had always found him an honorable, a courageous gentleman.
