THE DAILY EXPRESS.

TERRE-HAUTE:

THURSDAY.....NOVEMBER 7, 1861

THE removal of FREMONT was received with profound regret in all parts of the country. Whatever may have been the merits of the case, the public is unanimous in the belief that it was exceedingly impolitic to supercede him just as he was about to attack the rebel army. The curses against the BLAIR family are both loud and deep.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Cincinnati Commercial, from Camp Crittenden, Ky., represents the intense hate existing between the loyal and rebel Kentuckians. He gives the instance of JOHN S. WILLIAMS, commanding the rebel forces, who gained distinction at the battle of Cero Gordo, in the Mexican war. His brother is at Camp Crittenden with the Union forces, carrying the sword of his brother, the rebel General, that was used by him on the heights of Cero Gordo. The loyal WILLIAMS has instructions from his venerable and patriotic father, who was a gallant soldier in the war against Great Britain, to use that sword on his rebel son if he can; and the correspondent has no doubt that he will, if the opportunity offers. Such is civil war. Duty impels the patriotic heart to sustain the Government against the crime of treason, that liberty may be preserved, and the highest hopes of mankind protected, let the cost be what it may of treasure and blood. Nor is it to be considered of what kindred the blood may be, when it becomes corrupted by treason against a nation of freemen.

Gossip at Camp Nolin.

We copy the following from a recent letter of the Nolin correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette:

On his memorable journey home from Washington, shortly before his death, Senator Douglas remarked to a distinguished Kentuckian whom he chanced to meet at Indianapolis, "I know your man Breckinridge better than you do yourselves. Mark my words, sir; within a year from this time John C. Breckinridge will be a General in the rebel army!" The result shows how thoroughly Mr. Douglas did know his former friend.—The year has but half passed since the prediction was made, and to-day Mr. Breckinridge holds a commission as Brigadier General in the rebel army under Buckner, at Bowling Green.

Those who have watched the phases of the contest in Kentucky will remember how unquietus the ex-Vice President, and ex-Honorable appeared to be a few weeks since. First he was reported shot, then he had been heard of near Mt. Sterling; then he was collecting the troops at Prestonsburg and on the Big Sandy, which General Nelson will have dispersed, it is hoped, before this can appear in type; then he had gone across the border into Virginia for arms. Almost before the last report had been received, presto, Mr. Breckinridge appears at Bowling Green. I first heard of his arrival there at Hardesburg, from a hot secessionist, who had just returned from a visit to Buckner's army.—On getting out to railroad routes again, I found that a similar report had reached Louisville; and in a letter at that time I suggested what has since proved to be the true explanation. Mr. Breckinridge had gone into Virginia to secure arms for his ragged recruits at Prestonsburg; then having performed his work he went (by rail from Lewisburg to Nashville and thence up) to his own place to receive his reward—the Brigadier Generalship he had been promised months before.

On authority which would only need to be named to command implicit credit, I am also enabled to state that, besides Generals Breckinridge and Hardee (the arrival of the latter was announced some time ago,) General Pillow, of ditch digging, and Johnson, of Utah fame, are both in the rebel army at Bowling Green.

It is known, I believe, that General Bishop Polk and General Pillow found it impossible to co-operate in the same division—Pillow regarding Polk as an ignorant civilian, and Polk regarding Pillow as (something worse) an ignorant military man. It has not heretofore been known that they united in a request to Davis that both should be superseded, and that a new man should be assigned to the command of their division. Davis did not comply with the request, but he relieved Pillow from duty there and ordered him to report to Buckner at Bowling Green. He could do but one thing that would suit the national troops better, viz:—relieve Buckner and assign Pillow to the chief command.

The rebel strength on this column has been augmented little, if any, within the last two weeks. Parties who have been in their camps, and have had the best facilities for judging, do not estimate their force at more than from eighteen to twenty thousand.—They have among them some of the famous "Texan Rangers"—a body of nondescripts who have, of late, been endowed with almost as mythical qualities as Bull Run conferred upon the "Black Horse Cavalry." Most of the troops are from Southern Kentucky and Tennessee, though they have at least one Mississippi regiment that of Col. Alcorn.—Small arms are scarce, but they have abundance of artillery.

For some time past they have been engaged improving their naturally strong position at Bowling Green, by throwing up fortifications on the range of hills southeast of the village. In front they are defended by the Big Barren river, which makes almost a semi-circle around the town, and which an advance in front would have to cross under their fire.

They observe the utmost strictness in guarding their camp; and while with us almost any one can pass and repass at pleasure, with them no man who has once entered their camp is allowed to go out again, unless he is known to be an unquestioned and active secessionist. So, too, they are guarding every ford on the Green river, to prevent the possibility of our scouts entering their lines; and are dredging the river at Mundfordsville, in the hope of deepening the channel so much as to render it impossible for our troops to ford it.

Eight brass 6-pounder cannon have been received at the State Armory within the past few days, from the establishment of Miles Greenwood, Cincinnati. The majority of these are rifled. Of this number Captain Bash's company, from Michigan City, use two to practice with, and Capt. Simonson's company use one. Both of these companies are drilling daily and accustoming their horses to the smell and sound of exploding gunpowder.

Capt. Thomas Fryer, of Laporte, is recruiting a company for the 1st Irish regiment, (5th Indiana,) Col. Walker. The Herald says he has nearly forty men already enrolled. These recruits were obtained in two days. The Herald says:

Tom Fryer, as he is commonly called, will make a brave and daring officer, and much more than ordinarily popular. Boys that did not begin to think of going into the war last week enlisted under Fryer with a "hurrah," and are all "O. K." for the present. Col. Walker's regiment will soon be full and on the march against the enemies of our Government. We shall expect to hear a good account of them on the bloody field.

Rev. Isaac W. Monfort has been appointed Chaplain of the 52d regiment, Col. McReynolds, at Rushville.

War Items.

The United States Commissary for Indiana has advertised for subsistence stores for the 62d regiment to be rendezvoused at Rockport. The Commandant of the camp has issued the following circular:

The Governor has authorized this regiment to be raised at Rockport. A fine camping ground has been selected near town, and the citizens of Spencer county have generously contributed for the erection of new, comfortable and spacious quarters for the several companies, and every arrangement is made for the health, convenience and comfort of the men.

A Qgartermaster has been appointed, and military instruction will be at once commenced under a competent officer.

Transportation by steamer will be provided, and recruiting officers are now actively engaged in raising companies for this regiment in this and adjoining counties. Commanders of companies are requested to report at once to the undersigned, at Headquarters at Rockport.

WILLIAM JONES, Commandant.

Edward Mace, of Lafayette, has been appointed 2d Lieutenant in the regular infantry and ordered to report at Fort Leavenworth.

James Burk, a private in Capt. Gillespie's company in the 16th regiment, was killed by a comrade, through mistake, while on picket reconnoitering expedition on the 23d of October. The mishap occurred in the neighborhood of Edward's Ferry, on the Virginia side of the Potomac.

John B. Coverdale, 1st Lieutenant in company I of the 13th regiment, has been appointed Adjutant of the 59th regiment, Col. Dunham.

Gen. Lane will review the Spencer county regiment of the Indiana Legion at Rockport on Saturday.

The Louisville Democrat of recent date says Indiana is raising, and nearly full, her fifteth regiment. Indiana has taken a contract to fight the war. She has had a regiment in every battle that has taken place since the commencement of hostililities, except Bull Run and Leesburg.

A man named Strait, who states that he has recently returned from Texas, says that Col. W. S. Tyson, of Texas, is on his way to the mountains of Kentucky, with twenty-two hundred cavalrymen, who are armed with knives and pistols. Tyson, he says, is the best drilled officer he ever saw. The same correspondent informs the Cincinnati Enquirer that Texas now has 75,000 men in the field.

Gen. John Mansfield of Jefferson county, we understand, will probably be tendered the Coloneley of the Second German regiment.

AN EXCHANGED PRISONER.—The editor of the Louisville Journal, has had an interview with Mr. P. H. Lippert, of the 24th Illinois Regiment, who was taken prisoner some months ago, about twenty miles from Centerville, Mo., while acting as a messenger bearing despatches. He was arrested by rebel Missourians and placed under charge of Gen. Hardee's command in the south eastern part of the State where he was exposed to great privations and sufferings. In company with twenty other Union prisoners, he was lodged in a horse-thief jail at Bloomfield, for nearly a month. This place was an apartment sixteen by eighteen feet in dimensions, and seven feet high, with two air holes on two sides. In this cage the twenty were cooped during the hottest weather, without any effort being made to remove their excrement, which of course produced the foulest stench. Their food was dough and water and even that in insufficient quantities, and they were never once taken into the fresh air, which produced great sickness. While there three Union men were hung and five shot because they refused to take the oath. These villainies were committed by Captain White and his Texan rangers. From Bloomfield, Mr. Lippert was taken to New Madrid for a few days, during which he received no food at all and was nearly starved; thence he was transferred to Columbus, with seven prisoners from Cape Girardeau, and placed at work on the fortifications, and they were so engaged, being driven to the works in gangs like slaves, at the time of the engagement between the batteries and the Union gunboats, exposed to all the fire and bursting shells, but providentially none were injured. They were by this time greatly in need of clothes and blankets, and their wants were contumeliously neglected by Gen. Polk after his attention had been called to them. Mr. Lippert was finally exchanged when Col. Buford went down under a flag of truce, and he soon reached Paducah.—There he was most hospitably received by the boys of the 11th Indiana, and he desires to return thanks to them all, and particularly to Captain Rugg, for their soldierly attention to a comrade in distress. From Paducah he was forwarded to Louisville by Gen. Smith, and will start immediately to join his regiment, which is Col. Hecker's.

Change of Tone of the British Press.

Late dispatches from England show that a marked change has taken place in the tone of the British press on American affairs.—The declaration of the London Times that England will rather undergo much suffering than break the plain rules of international law, is a significant feature. The London Post (PALMERSTON'S organ) has also become aware that British interference in American affairs, instead of procuring a supply of cotton would postpone it indefinitely; and that recognition of the rebel Government would merely complicate the difficulties. The Times says that for England to break our blockade would stain her reputation; and "she will not do such an act even to save her greatest manufactures.

The remark of the Times, that "it is not unlikely that the moment the drain of specie commences, the financial community of America will have its Bull Run," is made without due consideration of the state of trade between this country and Europe.—The conditions must change greatly before any drain of specie will begin. So long as our exports exceed our imports, it is more likely that we shall draw specie from abroad than that we shall be subject to any depletion. The idea of the Times is founded on an exceptional and temporary state of affairs, which has passed away. When the Government made a mistake, or "modification" in the Confiscation Act, and began to seize Southern deposits in the Eastern banks, the bankers began to remit to Europe. This created a sudden demand for exchange, that raised the rate to 109, which is near the specie point. The Times anticipated that this advance would continue, and the shipment of specie begin. On the contrary, another "modification" on the part of the Government ordered the exemption of Southern deposits, and the rate of exchange has declined considerably below the specie shipping point. There is no probability of any change against us until some great change in the conditions of trade takes place.—Cincinnati Gazette.

We still hear the cry of "peace." Under the circumstances that now exist, it is a cry of infamy. The argument of peace in the presence of embattled hosts, when the invaders are approaching upon us, means, as a distinguished statesman says, nothing but humiliation, the end of the Republic, the beginning of the scorn and contempt of the world, the sneering of the laxly hopeful the oppressed people of the earth.

Who dares stand forth and declare himself the advocate of such a peace?—Lou. Jour.

A SPY ARRESTED.—A young man named Smith was arrested at Falmouth, Pendleton county, Ky., on Saturday, as a rebel spy, and taken to Cincinnati.

Our Duty.

"What is our duty under the present existing affairs?" 'Tis a question often asked, but seldom answered. Many are the men, who, though true and loyal at heart, stand afloat, swayed as it were by conflicting sentiments, as to what the best mode for adjusting our present difficulties may be

We are in the midst of a deep set rebellion, not the work of an hour, but the deep set purpose of years, the offspring of deadly intentions.

When our country calls; that country which has protected us, whose beautiful flag has led us to victory so often; when that country, laboring under enormous difficulties, call upon her sons to rally to her support, can any hesitate, or be uncertain as to what is his duty, can any man stand and consider whether or not, he shall defend that flag, under whose folds he was brought into existence, that country for which our fathers fought and bled? We hope not! The plain duty of every American citizen, is to rally to the support of that old flag and see her safe through her troubles.

That flag has been insulted, torn down and trampled upon; shall we stand by and see it insulted with impunity? No! no man with a true American heart in him, would countenance for a moment such thoughts. But, does a difference of opinion from us justify the charge of "traitor," "coward," &c; we think not, there are men who have differences of opinion, and honest differences, too, in relation to the best mode of adjusting our troubles; men, who never by word or action, gave room for the charges, and to them they are as untruthful as they are unkind.—The country is in imminent danger, and it requires the united exertion of all, to maintain the Government; and let us endeavor to make this unity perfect, rather by sensible reasoning than untruthful charges.

Our flag is drooping, but she cannot fall! the God of nations will protect us from such a fate. The glorious flag, crowned with honor, the pride of the world, that banner which has given protection to the homes of exiles from oppression; let us rally around her in this her darker hour, and with unity and good will, we will place her once more, with all her beauty and glory, in every position from which she has been ruthlessly torn; and the nation will arise from the ordeal of fire, brighter and more glorious, the model of nations and the pride of every true American.—Crawford Co. Ill. Bulleton. (Democrat.)

SCENE IN DIXIE—Sympathizing Husband—What's the matter, dear, you look quite forlorn?"

Wife.—"Matter, George! matter enough to make any woman look forlorn. Your stupid Secession has kept me away from Newport and Saratoga. I haven't a dress that I haven't worn at least six times. I have only half an ounce of cologne left, and only one pair of shoes left, and—and (bursting into tears,) I know the fall bonnets are out in New York—and—and I can't even get to see one."

SEEING IF BRIGHT WOULD SCARE.—It is said that some of the Hoosier Home Guards made a descent upon Jesse D. Bright's house, near Warsaw, during the recent skirmish at that place, and Jesse made good time across the fields. They wanted to see if he would scare, and did not mis-use him.

BUCKNER FALLING BACK.—A friend writes to us from Cambellsville stating that an intelligent young gentleman who reached there from Munfordsville, says the rebels have certainly left the vicinity of the Green river bridge and fallen back to Gowling Green.—They have also left Burksville and gone down the river.—*Lou.
