FRIDAY MORNING.....OCTOBER 30, 1864

OFFICIAL PAPER,

THE LETTER LIST

BEING THE LARGEST CIRCULATION!!

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1864,

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

ANDREW JOHNSON,

OF TENNESSEE.

The Drafted Ones.

The Terre Haute Journal of yesterday morning publishes an article from the La-Crosse (Wis.) Democrat, howling with lamentation and despair over the position of the "unfortunate victims" of the Draft. As a specimen of the article we copy the following paragraph:

"Hurrah for the tyrant who robs your family of their support—who makes widows of your wives—prostitutes of your daughters, and sickening bone heaps of your new living temples of manhood!"

Read it soldiers! Read it drafted men, no matter what party you belong to, that Democrats say because you are a soldier in the army of your country, your daughters become "prostitutes." Such is the Democratic idea of female purity in the soldiers family when he takes up arms to fight rebels.—The Cincinnati Enquirer said the same thing some time ago about soldiers wives, and now the innocent maiden, the virtuous young woman, the soldiers daughter, is stigmatized as a prostitute by Democrats who hate her father because he goes to the field to beat back rebel's. Soldiers and friends of soldiers! What do you think of it? How many votes can you cast for such traducers and villifiers?

The following is the official majorities for members of Congress in this District with the exception of the vote of Vermillion county.

VOORHEES' MAJORITIES.

Clay	317
Greene	204
Owen	458
Putnam	36
Sullivan	1431
	2446

WASHBURN'S MAJORITIES.

Parke	903
Vigo	641
Vermillion (estimated)	370
	1914
Voorhees	2446
Washburn	1914
Voorhees' majority	532

The most comical letter ever written, is Gen. McClellan's letter of acceptance. None of Old Abe's jokes can compare with it. Every clown in a circus should quote it for the merriment of the crowd. It is pompous, gorgeous, highfalutin, grand, grotesque, owlish, supercilious, haughty, bombastic, effervescent, terrific, docile, huge, preponderous, elephantine, lillipution, sycophantic, parasitical, truckling, effusent, submissive, subterfluens, conglomerated, obtuscated, obscurated, divergent, concentrated and consolidated to—humbug! People like to be humbugged, and in McClellan's letter they have humbug to perfection. If any man can say from McClellan's letter where he stands on the issues of the day, he can penetrate a mist that is impenetrable to us. We cannot come any nearer to it than Fernando Wood, one of the Copperhead leaders of the Chicago Convention, who said: "McClellan is our agent—he will be the creator of our voice."

After the Mexican war the Democracy nominated Franklin Pierce for President and amused the country through one campaign with elaborate endeavors to magnify Pierce into a great General. But people outside of the Democratic party could not forget that Franklin's great force was in fainting when a battle was to take place. So much was this a habit at such particular times that it became a mooted question whether he was ever in any battle at all. Now, Democracy has put up another man for President, McClellan, who has lost a wonderful faculty of mystifying his presence whenabouts during battle. We are told that on one occasion he was asked where he was when a fight was raging, and he said he did not know where he was—A brilliant answer truly, for a great General. It is pretty well settled that he was remarkable skillful in taking care of himself in time of danger, having a strong proclivity for gunboats, where he could enjoy his liquor and cigars in safety, while brave Generals and gallant soldiers were in the heat of bloody warfare, within hearing. Calm and undisturbed was he, while patriots were pouring out their blood and laying down their lives for their country, except in the mediation of the surrender of his army, and the positive prohibition of a noble General's entering the capital of the enemy.—Such a man may do as a candidate for the Democracy, but he will not suit the people.—He has commended himself to the Democracy by his manifest disinclination to injure the rebels, but the gunboat candidate can never sail into the White House.

Gen. McClellan in his letter of acceptance says: "I am happy to know that when the nomination was made the record of my public life was kept in view." We believe when Gen. McClellan said that, he told an incontrovertible truth, for we believe that the "record" of the "public life" of no man so well suited the Copperhead Democracy of the Chicago Convention as the "record" of the "public life" of Gen. McClellan. He may well say he was "happy to know" that the "record" of his "public life" was kept in view. The "record" of the "public life" of no General was so favorable to the rebels as that of Gen. McClellan. The history of the war shows that he was on ways anxious to hurt the rebels, and thereby made him the choice of rebel sympathizers in the Chicago Convention. For many months he allowed the rebels with 40,000 men and wooden guns to flaunt the rebel flag within sight of Washington, while he lay along the banks of the Potomac with 200,000 fighting men under his command, doing nothing but building bridges across the river to retreat upon. On the Peninsula with 120,000 men he drew up intrenchments and called for siege guns to dislodge an army of 9,000 rebels, preparatory to flanking Richmond. Finally when the battle of Malvern Hill was coming off he withdrew with his staff on board a gunboat and there remained till the fight was over. Of course this shows him a patriot and commends him to the Peace Democracy. They have him up for President and should he be elected we may expect peace according to the terms of Jeff Davis.

We publish this morning, from the Cincinnati Gazette, a report of the recent speech of George Francis Train, delivered in Philadelphia. He was a delegate to the Chicago Convention, and was knowing to all its movements, and to the corruption which animated and controlled the action of its leaders. It appears that the George H. Pendleton announced his purpose, during the earlier part of the Convention, of opposing Gen. McClellan with all the influence he possessed.—But his opinion underwent a radical change, when he was offered the nomination for the Vice Presidency, and he he suddenly became a supporter of McClellan. The speech is certainly worth reading. It exposes the corruption of the leaders of that party in a very effective and interesting style.

Cadet Engineers in the Navy.

The Navy department has issued regulations under which cadet engineers for the navy may be appointed. The number of those cadets is limited by law to fifty. Each application must be made to the Secretary of the navy. The candidate must be under 18 years of age, furnish evidence that he possesses a good character and mechanical aptitude and that he has been employed two years in fabrication of steam engines. Before appointment he must be examined as to mental qualifications and physical fitness. The course of study will comprise two academic years.

California went Union in 1863 by a majority of 10,936. A letter from Senator Conness, upon the prospect in his State, says: "I have no fears for the result in California. The value of peace and Union is too well known to the patriotic hearts of our people for them to falter now. The people are too courageous to take a backward step. The name of California stands too high, she cannot afford to lower her crest, to let the ensign down."

The venerable Captain Stanton Sheles, of Columbus, Ohio, ninety-three years of age, now nearly helpless, "but still clothed in his right mind," insisted on being taken to the polls at the State election that he might deposit another ballot for the Union cause so near his heart. He expresses the hope, if it is "the Lord's will, he may live to put in his vote in November for Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Johnson."

The Nations Death.

An exchange says it is a sad thought that so many brave men have fallen in this cruel war waged by traitors against the life of this nation. It is certainly a mournful sacrifice, but its victims are not without their reward, nor have they fallen in vain. Their glorious deeds of patriotic devotion will be held in everlasting remembrance by a grateful posterity. The necessary sacrifice has been held in deep veneration by the loyal in all ages. "Tis sweet and glorious to die for one's country," is an ancient maxim. But sad and mournful as is the thought of the cruel sacrifice, there is one still more sad—the contemplation of the death of the nation. The sublimest and saddest conception ever transferred to canvass in living colors by the hand of genius, or rendered immortal by the inspiration of poetry, is the picture of Marius amid the ruins of Carthage—the desolation of an extinct empire. Its study is full of instruction and warning. She fell a prey to a foreign power by her international dissensions. If we would avoid the mournful catastrophe which marks her end we must stand firm and united by the Government of the Union. If by cowardice or from other fatal impulse we yield to our foes, we jeopardize the integrity of the Union, and will bring on the death of our nationality. The first step in a course disastrous will be to vote for those who favor an armistice with traitors. Don't vote the democratic ticket if you would save the nation.

TRAIN ON THE TRACK.

Speech in Philadelphia—The Democratic Leaders in Distress—Experience of George Francis Train at Chicago and Elsewhere.

George Francis Train made a speech at Philadelphia on Saturday evening, to an audience of about 4,000, which was all that could be crowded into the Hall. Train was a delegate to the Chicago Convention, and has been on intimate terms with the Democratic leaders, but having concluded that the whole Democratic concern was against the country, he is now bombarding the gunboat party. We make the following extracts:

HOW THE CHICAGO CONVENTION COME TO BE POSTPONED.

I went to Chicago, you know. I think my sentiments are pretty well known by this time. I went to Washington to get the Convention postponed, and succeeded. They had packed the cards around McClellan, and I went to New York, and there they said "no." I went to Washington and got Cox and forty-four of these Democrats to open a paper in favor of a postponement of the Convention. Belmont refused. I then went to Thomas B. Florence, who was really the Chairman of the Committee, as Belmont was simply one of the bolters at Baltimore. The "writing was on the wall" now, and the Convention was postponed.

LINCOLN AND MCCLELLAN.

I went to Nebraska and was appointed a delegate from that territory to the Convention. I then saw Saunders and Clay and Tucker. I wanted to know what their terms were, and then I went to Chicago. The delegates were for McClellan, but I could see no difference between Lincoln and McClellan. I did not see where McClellan had the advantage of Lincoln, as he had advised him to do what he was censured for. I take the stump speeches of the Democrats, at Chicago, against Lincoln, and will apply every one of them to McClellan. [Cheers.]—They talk about illegal arrests. Who introduced them, if it was not McClellan in Maryland?

They talk about the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus. I ask who ordered the suspension of the writ in the case of Judge Carmichael? You talk about a draft! Who recommended it? Look at McClellan's letter of the 7th of July, when he was for conscription as a military necessity.

You know I saw that the "Democratic" party was simply after the public plunder. [Laughter and cheers.] I saw that the cohesive power of public plunder" would be too much for them. In those Republicans, with their limited knowledge of the affairs of State, could manage to steal so much in so short a time, for God's sake what could we do who have had so much more experience. [Laughter and cheers.]

ABOUT THE CONVENTION—A GREAT MANY WHALE BATS IN ONE BOX.

I will tell you who were my candidates. My candidates were the army and the navy. [Cheers.] My platform was to drive the French out of Mexico and England off the sea. [Cheers.] I said that my candidate was the man who had, at the commencement of the war, telegraphed to New Orleans, "If any man hauls down the American flag shoot him down." [Cheers.] My Vice President was the navy. I want no better man than that "Old Salamander," who chained himself to the masthead as he went into Mobile Bay. [Cheers.] This, these Democrats said, we won't do. Then it was that I saw treason. George B. McClellan is simply the chattel of August Belmont, and Belmont is the agent of the Confederate Government in Europe. [Cheers.] They are going on sending money through these agencies, to try to carry the State of Pennsylvania in November. [Cries, "They can't do it."] When I saw this, I thought it was time for me to leave. They saw I was out for McClellan, and then it was they said, "You can't go with the Convention." I knew that the rules of Congress governed the Convention, and that a delegate for a territory could be admitted without the privilege of speaking. But it was quite amusing to see the political maggots moving around in that Convention. [Laughter.] They did not want a man there with an audience of 150,000 men back of him. Long went in, and found there was no "freedom of speech" in that Convention. It was the rule of the New York rowdies. I said, God bless Manhattan. I told them it was time to think of the Union and the country, and that you couldn't do it on that platform. I found the Regency and the Rothschilds ruled the entire destiny of that Convention. I knew no more pitiful sight than to see the Pennsylvania delegation, cringing before these New York men. When New York took snuff, all Pennsylvania sneezed. [Laughter.] When New York laid an egg, all Pennsylvania cackled.

I had one hundred delegates to go for Dix in the morning. Pendleton told me that, "So help me God, I will do all I can to beat McClellan," and I think he has. [Laughter.] At ten o'clock they offered him the Vice Presidency, and he went over! I saw Vallandigham at the breakfast table, and I said to him, "You have sold out the Union, and if I can find it out I'll burst the whole thing." Vallandigham said, "Train, you talk too loud!" The next morning it was all closed out. Under the idea of "pap," they supposed there was nothing but what they could carry. I saw their platform. It was the most singular amalgamation of men and things I ever saw. Soon after, I wrote my opinion of it. It was:

Resolved, In order to please the Trimmer War candidates, we have War.

Resolved, In order to please the Trimmer Peace candidate, we have peace.

Resolved, In order to please all, that the war goes on until we get in. [Laughter.]

At the same time it reminded me of a little story, wherein it is related that it was

Resolved, That we have a new jail.

Resolved, That the new jail stands where the old jail stood.

Resolved, That the old jail be not removed until the new jail be built. [Laughter.]

They nominated McClellan. They then came to me and said: "You'll join us?" I told them not much. They had got them all. It was a big cheese and had been four years toasting, and it is seldom you get so many wharf rats in one box as they did at this Convention. [Laughter.] I came back to New York, and the only noise along the route I heard was the rattle of the cars, which seemed to say, "McClellan!" "McClellan!" and they tortured that into cheers for their candidate. [Laughter.]

I came to New York, and the Regency offered me a seat in the Cabinet. I told them I knew of forty-one appointments already. I told them that I recollected that upon another occasion an individual offered vast possessions, when the devil did not own a potato patch. [Laughter.] And when they gave cheers for McClellan, it reminded me of whistling at a funeral. When Mr. Hall, the chairman of the Philadelphia committee to write to Mr. Train to stump the State, wrote to me, I said:

"Chicago Nomination—Positive, Bolt.
"October Elections—Comparative, Boiler.
"November Elections—Superlative, Burst.

I also said:

DIED,
November 8th, 1864,
The Democratic Party
Disease—Party on the Brain.

MCCLELLAN'S CHANCES, 000

I told these men they could not carry a State, and I sincerely believe that McClellan will not get one electoral vote. [Cheers.] I came here and was surprised to find that you had a distinction in your vote—a soldiers' vote and a home vote. That idea is fatal to success. Who started the idea? Are the soldiers nobodies that they should not be included in the "home" vote? When you sent your dispatches over the country, why didn't you say, "we have given 15,000 or 20,000 against McClellan?" [Cheers.] I believe this distinction is nothing but a matter of betting between you men. But you have no right to bet when the country may be dying. [Cheers.]

WHAT THE DEMOCRATS PROPOSED TO DO IF THEY LOST INDIANA AND OHIO.

You must be in earnest. I have never seen such a position as that occupied by the Democratic party to-day. Once the Democratic party had principles. If there was a war in Hungary, the party decided which side they were on. If there was a war anywhere over the world, the Democratic party had opinions; but for once they don't know, when there is a great rebellion in our own country, which side they are on! I would like to know where McClellan is, and where the Democratic party is. McClellan is nothing but a political trickster. His letter is neither war nor peace. It is neither white nor black. It is neither male nor female! It is a political eunuch, and there is nothing more of it.

I don't know what these men meant, but I went to them, and they promised me that if Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania went against them they would withdraw McClellan for Dix. I knew the loyal people would have gone for a loyal man, and that Mr. Lincoln himself would have gone for him, in order to save the country. [Cheers.] Mr. Ward (Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee of Pennsylvania) telegraphed that the Democrats had carried Pennsylvania by thirty thousand majority. [Laughter.] I afterward went to Mr. Ward and told him to call the Pennsylvania delegation together, in order to have the Convention reassemble.—"What can I do?" says he. I said, "Call the Convention." He said, "It is too late—there is no time." Then I said, "If you don't do it I will stump the State of Pennsylvania against you." [Cheers.] Ward told me to go to some one else, and also that they were going to have a meeting at Harrisburg. I went to Drexel, and he sent me to Mr. Childs, the publisher, but they could not move.—They were afraid of the Rothschilds! There is an individuality among any of these men. They simpir whenever Belmont takes a pinch of snuff. I went to New York and saw Belmont. He said, "We have got Pennsylvania. I have got letters from all parts of the State." And yet I could see far enough in the future to know that he could not carry Pennsylvania by 50,000 shot.—[Cheers.] I don't believe it.

ABOUT STATE RIGHTS.

Mr. Train drew an amusing caricature of the two candidates, represented by trains of cars—the Lincoln train carrying everything, while the two horse team of McClellan is left at Jersey.

I think there ought to be a large majority in the country. It is our safety. Now there don't seem to be a minority in the Union! I think McClellan should be satisfied with Indiana, Pennsylvania and Ohio, but he seems determined to carry all his friends with him. He is like the Irishman who was asked to buy a trunk. "And what for?" "To put your clothes in," said the storekeeper, "what, and go naked?" [Laughter.] I recommend Mr. McClellan to buy a trunk.

Mr. Train desired to say a few words on the subject of State rights or State sovereignty. Of all things this doctrine, as laid down by the leaders of what has assumed the name of Democratic party, is the most absurd. Individuals make families, families make up the town, towns make up the counties, counties make States, and States make up the Union, and the Union has a flag, and a concern called a Constitution, which delegated their State sovereignty and rights to that Constitution and that flag. No State has a right to coin money, no State has a right to pass laws, to lay taxes on imports, no State has a right to do any thing that is not consistent with the great Constitution of the country; that document is the supreme law of the land. [Great applause.] No State has under that Constitution any right to alter that Constitution except by a convention of two thirds of the people, and yet the South when Fort Sumter was fired upon, dispensed with that little formality. Yet there are men in the North who are blind enough to follow the leader, August Belmont, the agent of Rothschild, and say they were right.

BUT TWO PARTIES AND HOW YOU CAN DESTROY THEM.

There are two parties—one that rejoices when our army captures forty three pieces of artillery—[cheers]—the other droop their heads in despondency, or swear it is a lie.—[Laughter and applause.] These are the parties—one puts up gold, when up goes the price of every thing else; and the other is a party that believes success in our army will bring down the price of gold. [Applause.] There are men constantly hoping for reverses to our armies, that they may put up the price of gold in order to elect McClellan.—Yet these men ask the poor men to vote for them. He would not say that the Democratic party was composed of traitors, but he well knew the leaders of that party are traitors to it, and are selling it out as sheep are sold in the shambles. [Applause.] He stood here as the representative of the people, not of a party or part of a party, and we say down with the politicians and up with the people. [Tremendous applause from all parts of the room.] We will never save the country by letting such politicians rule as Belmont, the agent of the Rothschilds of England. [applause.] He had said that in the case of the riot in New York, the voice of the people there was the of voice the devil. [Laughter and applause.]

A TALK WITH SEYMOUR.

In a conversation with Governor Seymour in presence of Sanford Church, he told him that their party would be defeated in that State, by 40,000. [Cheers.] "Oh! it is not the election, Mr. Train," said Governor Seymour, "It is not in the election." "What is it?" The Governor dodged about as much as McClellan in writing letters. [Laughter and great applause.] "Do you mean revolution? Why sir, there is no fight in you. [Applause] There are in this world two bodies, positive and negative, and when revolution comes you will find that the absence of your bodies will be much better and more wholesome than your presence of mind. [Uproarious laughter.] You will be, Mr. Seymour, like an Irish friend of mine, who saved his life by putting his brass plate on behind." [Roars of laughter.]

He, the speaker did not know what to make of such men. He told Barlow if the nomination of McClellan was not withdrawn, he would stump the State against him. [Applause.] He did not belong to any party; he was an independent man above all party; he was for the Union, and it is well that in times such as these we have a few independent men for the Union. [Tremendous applause.] He had telegraphed to night to Governor Morton, who has just been re-elected Governor of Indiana, that in Pennsylvania we will swamp the gunboat by 50,000 majority. [Great applause.] That the crew might be saved, but that the leaders would be drowned, for none of them know how to swim.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY IN ENGLAND.

What he desired to say, and what he wished to impress upon the minds of all, is this fact, that the present organization of the Democratic party was perfected in England, and thus the country is to be sold out to the Rothschilds if this party is successful. He had said at Chicago, that the money that was used in building the wigwam at that place was paid by the agent of the Rothschilds. Every paper in England except the Star and Daily News is in favor of McClellan.

What we do we must do in earnest. He charged England with making this war, with nominating McClellan, and that Belmont, the Agent of Rothschild, is now sending money into Pennsylvania in order that England, by force of circumstances, may escape paying one hundred millions of dollars to America.

Piano Repairing
AND Tuning.

HAVING JUST RECEIVED A full assortment of all kinds of material in Piano making and repairing, I am now prepared to overhaul Pianos and Melodeons, and warrant all work to give satisfaction. As it has been reported by some persons that there was no one here to do repairing, I would state that I have served a full apprenticeship in a Piano manufactory, I am also fully prepared to repair all other kinds of Musical Instruments in the most approved manner.

As the only workman in Terre Haute, all those having instruments needing repairs will do well to call.

Pianos tuned on short notice, also engagements made by the year.

Remember an instrument placed in the care of a workman can be preserved for many years longer, as the action of an instrument requires equally as much attention as the tuning.

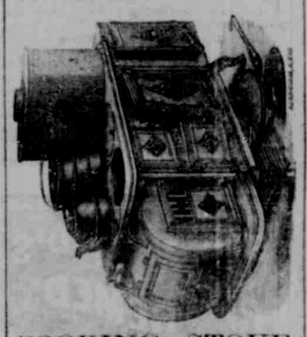
This maxim will be fully demonstrated by buying an

American Hot Air



COOKING STOVE.

As it will bake, broil and roast better than any other stove, with a saving of 25 per cent. in fuel, and a very large percentage in convenience. They have the following advantages:

1st. They are constructed with a view of great durability, all the plates directly exposed to the fire are made double with air passages between; this not only makes the stove very durable, but prevents any danger of cracking from the heat; this is a recent and valuable improvement.

2d. The flues are lined with non-conducting cement, thereby applying the heat directly to the oven, and the oven can be heated and kept in baking order with less fuel than any other stove.

3d. They have a hot air draft, which not only makes the fuel burn freely, and last longer, but adds to the heating and baking facilities.

4th. They consume all the gas from the fuel, thereby adding largely to the amount of heat obtained from the quantity of the fuel.

5th. The stove is made, mounted and finished in the most superior manner.—The oven is large and well ventilated.—The Stove is convenient in form, and made for use; to adopt the language of some who have used this Stove, "it will do more work with less fuel than any other Stove."

For description, pamphlets of the above and references to them now using them in this city, call at Scott & Valentine's, 144 & 146 Main street.

DIXON'S AROMATIC

BLACKBERRY CARMINATIVE

Is the only safe and sure cure. It contains no opium or deleterious drugs, no mineral or other injurious compounds common to remedies generally sold for this class of disease. It is so efficacious that Physicians very generally use it in their practice in all chronic and dangerous cases.

☞ Use no Cholera mixtures or doubtful compositions, (many of which undermine and ruin the constitution,) when you can obtain an unfailing remedy as simple and safe as Blackberries themselves.

Ask for DIXON'S BLACKBERRY CARMINATIVE, and see that the proprietor's name is written on the outside wrapper of each bottle. Prepared only by
