Nihilist Meeting in New York

A meeting of those in sympathy with the Russian nihilists was held in New York Tuesday night. The following extracts from the proceedings are taken from yesterday's New York Herald:

Mr. William Drury said: Fellow citizens, I think we can confidently see that unless we are careful and keep an open eye, a lynx eye, upon those who call themselves to day the representatives of the people, we are likely soon to be in a condition as far removed from liberty as are those who oppose despotism in Russia. The efforts of some of our legislators to prohibit this meeting of congratulation of socialists reads like a ukase from the Emperor of Russia—it was an attempt to crush out liberty of speech in the United States. What greater opportunity has the Secretary of State—Blaine—to know the feelings of the people than we who are among them? [Cheers.] A few weeks ago Wendell Phillips said, "Only that government which makes the people happy and contented is entitled to existence. [Applause.] The moment it becomes necessary to punish its own people a government is not fit to live." [Cheers.] We say with him that when a burden is laid upon the people if nobody will lift it off then welcome the dagger. [Great cheering.] I say that when we accuse Secretary Blaine of not expressing the feelings of the people, other minds greater than his are on our side. Again, when such men as the Secretary of State and those who pass their lives in the filthy pieces of politics shall have passed away from the face of the earth the name of William Cullen Bryant shall stand out bright forever, and he was one of those who honored the uncovering of the statue of Joseph Mazzini in the Central Park. [Cheers.] Instead of condoling with the imperial family we condole with the people and thank the men who assassinated the the Czar. [Great enthusiasm.] The speaker then went on to trace the progress of murder, beginning with the killing of Abel by Cain, and said that as the world grew older killing was placed in the category of crime. As the French had killed off nearly the last of the Napoleons, so would the Russians kill of the Romanoffs—it was only a question of time. They say we are cold-blooded in going behind a policeman to stab him, but they send armies of 60,000 and 70,000 men into the battlefield to cut each other's throats. When we would shed the blood of a czar they think it too sacred to shed, but when a czar sheds the blood of 50,000 men in one day on the battlefield such blood is not deemed sacred. [Cheers.] For two years the press of the nations of the world have been lulling this autocrat into a stupid kind of "rock me to sleep, mother," security, and now they are surprised to find that he was warned years ago. I rejoice in the death of the Czar because there are thousands of hearts in Poland palpitating in sympathy with mine and burning to burst their bonds asunder. I rejoice in the death of the Czar because there in Russia died Sobieski. I rejoice because there the noble Kosciusko fell. Let us rejoice that, though some have perished beneath the tyrant, enough of those generous men who have given their lives for their fellows still remain, and should we here have to do the same, let us remember the words of Byron—"They never fail who die in a great cause." [Immense cheering.]

At the conclusion of Mr. Drury's address Secretary McGregor read the following, which was unanimously adopted:—

IN THE NAME OF HUMANITY.

We congratulate the world upon the overthrow of the absolutism of feudal autocracy in Russia.

We congratulate the people of Europe upon the removal of the greatest obstacle to the establishment of the Western Republic or the United States of Europe.

We congratulate our fellow socialists that the great prop of monarchical institutions, which has supported kingcraft throughout the world, has been shaken to its base by the fall of the Czar, and that the way is being cleared for the foundation of the social republic.

We call upon the liberty loving people of the United States of America to rejoice in the overthrow of the Czar equally as they rejoiced at the overthrow of Maximilian, whose existence endangered republican institutions.

Resolved, That the following address be forwarded to our fellow workingmen in Russia to our best friends and most active partisans, the nihilists:—

Fellow Workingmen of Russia—Between the aristocracy and the proletariat there can be no compromise. Between the parasites and the producers there can be no peace. While louts and loafers live in luxury upon the products of our labor we must suffer and starve.

Brothers! Your cause is that of the oppressed against the oppressor. That cause is a holy cause; the cause not only of Russia, but of all countries. It is universal.

Brothers! We approve your actions; we approve your methods. Between you and your oppressors there can be no truce.

Kill, destroy, assassinate, annihilate, even to the very germ, your aristocracy. Have for them no feeling of love, for they are incapable of that noble emotion. THE COMMITTEE.
