A Frightful Fall.

Last Wednesday there occurred on Slate Mountain, near Ashcroft, one of those ghastly accidents that make men realize how terrible are the perils that environ the pathway of the fortune-hunter in these great mountains. A young man named J. M. Zeru, who has been prospecting and contracting around Ashcroft for some time past, had, in connection with another man, a contract to run in a tunnel on a claim very near the summit of Slate Mountain. The claim is known as the Shamokin lode. They had nearly completed the contract, and Zeru was making his preparations to get out of the country for the winter. The trail leading from the cabin occupied by the two contractors to the claim winds its sinuous and perilous way along the steep slope of Slate Mountain, frequently zigzagging to avoid the ledges and ease the grade. But there is one place far up toward the summit where the slope is almost perpendicular for quite a distance, and under the best conditions travel at that spot is perilous. The trail or path about 18 inches wide, is cut out of the mountain side, and it would make a tenderfoot's hair stand on end to look down. The chances are that he would "come it" along that particular spot. There has been a crust of snow several inches thick on and near the summit of Slate Mountain for a week or more past, and the cold nights have frozen this snow where it has been pressed down along the trail until it is as slippery as glass. Last Wednesday morning Zeru and his partner were proceeding along the trail to the Shamokin lode, and at the precipitous spot referred to Zeru missed his footing. The misstep carried his body off the trail, and in an instant the doomed miner was whirling down the snowy slope, wildly grasping at the air and attempting in vain to secure some foothold on the frozen ground. His horror stricken partner, utterly unable to render him any assistance, stood gazing at the terrible sight with emotions past description. Down, down the poor fellow went, and when his bruised and bloody frame reached the bottom it was 1 800 feet from where it started and bore but little semblance to its original self. Zeru's partner hastened down the trail for help, and when that had been secured the party were compelled to follow a long and toilsome course to reach the body. It was a ghastly looking corpse they found, crushed and beaten out of human shape, and strong men shuddered as they looked upon it. It was carried to Ascroft and there buried. Leadville, Col., Democrat.

Tried for Profanity.

The jury failed to agree in the case of Henry Southerwood, second mate of the ship Fanny Tucker, who was tried in the United States District Court recently upon a charge of wilful disobedience of the orders of the master of the vessel, Captain Greenleaf. The captain had ordered the mate not to use profane and obscene language in speaking to the crew. It was charged in the indictment that Southerwood, disregarding the captain's order, applied opprobrious epithets to the crew while on a voyage from Liverpool to this port. Judge Hoffman, in his charge to the jury, said he was shocked at the disgusting language used by the officers on shipboard to the men. A master has a right to make rules for the maintenance of discipline and order, any general disobedience of such orders, if willful, falls within the law. The persistent use of vulgar language constitutes insubordination. It is not necessary to employ vile epithets to enforce discipline. If the defendant has persistently disobeyed this wise and humane order he is guilty of an offence against the law. As this was the first case of the kind tried in the court it attracted considerable attention.—San Francisco Bulletin.

WHY THE WEDDING DID NOT TAKE PLACE—A number of people assembled one evening recently at the home of Mr. E. M. Ward, to witness the marriage of Mr. William Windsor, of Chicago, and Miss Minnie Camp, Mr. Ward's stepdaughter. All the guest had arrived, the clergyman was paesent, and everything was ready for the ceremony except that the bride was mysteriously absent. After waiting until 9 o'clock Dr. E. T. Gamber called and hurriedly whispered something in Mrs. Ward's ear, whereupon that lady announced to the assembled guests that no wedding would take place. The bride had married another man, Mr. James W. Bell, on Sunday. She left her home on that day, telling her mother she was going to see some friends, instead of which she went to Erie with Mr. Bell and married him there. A reporter, who called on the young wife the other day, was met by a pretty brunette, who blushingly made the following statement: "I was forced by my mother to engage myself to Mr. Windsor a year ago. I then thought I could learn to like him instead of which my aversion to him increased every day. In the meantime I made Mr. Bell's acquaintance, and we made up our minds to marry. I did not tell my people as I feared they might object, since I am only 17 years old, and under age, so we ran away and got married in Pennsylvania.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
