FRIDAY EVENING, DEC. 30.

Funeral Poetry

The following specimens of funeral poetry were recited at a lecture on the subject recently:

"'Willie had a purple monkey climbing on a yellow stick,
And when he sucked the paint all off it made him sick and sick;
And in his latest hours he clasped that monkey in his hand,
And bade good bye to earth and went into a better land.

"'Oh! no more he'll shoot his sister with his little wooden gun;
And no more he'll twist the pussy's tail and make her howl for fun.
The pussy cat now stands out straight; the wire is laid aside;
The monkey doesn't jump around since little Willie died.'

"'The deceased uncle Alexander McGlue,
And gave him protracted repose;
He wore a checked shirt and a Number Nine shoe,
And he had a pink wart on his nose.
No doubt he is happier dwelling in space
Over there on the evergreen shore.
His friends are informed that his funeral takes place
Precisely at quarter past four.'

"'Mrs. McFadden has gone from this life;
She has left all its sorrows and cares;
She caught the rheumatics in both of her legs
While scrubbing the cellar and stairs
They put mustard plasters upon her to vain;
They tanked her with whisky and rum;
But Thursday her spirit departed, and left
Her body entirely mum.'"
