This prevalent disease is manifestly one of general and local debility, and requires for its alleviation the alterative and tonic virtues of iron. DAILY EMPIRE!

Spring Among the Hills.

We take the following beautiful lines from a volume of poems by Fields, recently printed "for a few friends." The lyric is just as fresh as the May air. One can hear the rustle of the foliage in it!

Sit and talk with the mountain streams,
In the beautiful spring of the the year,
When the violet gleams thro' the golden sunbeams
And whispers, "Come look for me here"—
In the beautiful spring of the year.

I will show you a glorious nook,
Where the censers of morning are swung;
Nature will lend you her bell and her book
Where the chimes of the forest are hung—
And the censers of morning are swung.

Come and breathe in this heaven sent air—
The breeze that the wild bird inhales.
Come and forget that life has a care,
In these exquisite mountain gales—
The breeze that the wild bird inhales.

O, wonders of God! O, Bounteous and Good!
We feel that thy presence is here—
That thy audible voice is abroad in this wood
In the beautiful spring of the year—
And we know that our Father is here.

THE CHARITABLE LADY.

FROM THE FRENCH.

She was a charitable lady, undoubtedly—the most charitable lady in France. There was none like her. Every body said so.

'In good truth,' she cried, 'as I entered the drawing room, 'you are here quite apropos. You are a lawyer, and must be a philanthropist, and being that, cannot refuse to be my cavalier to-day. This is Friday, and I invariably consecrate this day to the poor and unfortunate. It is the least a woman of my fortune and sympathetic turn of mind can do, and I always have so much to attend to on all other days. Come, you cannot refuse me?'

Mrs. de S. is still very handsome; she is not more than twenty-five, and her husband is near seventy. The lady has preserved all the freshness of complexion and beauty of form she possessed when eight years before, she married Mr. de S. an old councellor of the royal courts. Bravely had she met her fate—she has her poodles and her poor to attend to.

Is there any means of refusing to become a philanthropist when invoked by a pretty woman? I know of none, and so accepted the invitation.

It might have been twelve o'clock when we entered the carriage. Some may think this was beginning the day at a late hour; but let them remember it is always 'better late than never.'

'Where will madam first go to?'

'To St. Thomas D'Aquire.'

We soon arrived at the church and, leaving the coach, immediately entered its sacred precincts. Mrs. de S, after making the sign of the cross before each image, led me to the vestry-room; there leaving me, she entered a sanctuary, which appeared to be interdicted to the profane vulgar. After a short absence, my pretty companion rejoined me.

'I have just been to learn the exact hour at which the abbe will commence his charity sermon on Sunday next. As a sister of the holy order,' she said, 'I could not miss it on account; but, nevertheless I do not like to waste my precious moments by coming too soon; so now we will go to our pastry cook. I present the holy bread on the day after to-morrow, and would not have it said that the Baroness of D., who did so last Sunday, did things better than I do. So, you perceive I must go see my cook myself.'

To the cook then we went—it was an affair of twenty minuts.

'Francois, to my milliner.'

I was startled, and involuntarily observed.

'I thought the day was sacred to the poor.'

'To be sure it is; you do not understand. After the communion next Sunday I must collect for the poor, and for that I must get a new hat. Think you they would give me any thing were I dressed as an old dowager?—certainly not—I know them better; but, here we are, and so, instead of talking further, come, give me your opinion of my choice.'

'Madam!' and away we went.

'Well how like you this hat? Rather shabby, eh? the other is better, is it not? but it is almost too gay. That pink would become me! What think you of that slate—is it prettier, think you? I believe I'll try it.'

And now the hats fly, and the milliner fidgets. I foresaw that all the hats in the shop would be tried on.

Two hours had passed since we came there. I drew out my watch.

'Bless me madam, it is three o'clock. The Hotel Dieu will be closed, and you have I believe, a sick person to visit there'

'Most true,' she replied, 'how swiftly time passes. Yet a moment, until I examine this turban. I had better return to-morrow.—Now, sir, let us make haste.'

In a visit to an hospital you meet many a touching spectacle. Poor children crying—mothers who could, but will not do the same. Here are old friends, concealed their own wants, to minister to those of others—there skeleton-like convalescents flitting by like shadows. Here, a lame and infirm man going and coming; and there, some poor—the rich seldom enter this kingdom of suffering—unfortunate endeavoring to console his brother in affliction; and here, there, and everywhere, are the ever attentive Sisters of Charity—the faithful servants of this noble institution.

When we reached the Hotel Dieu the other visitors were already beginning to retire, and as I saw them parting from their suffering friends or fellow-servants, or perhaps, some member of their own family, I thought to myself, How many painful separations; how many deceitful hopes! how many eternal adieus, how many hands are now pressed for the last time; how many will be orphans and widows with the morrow?

[CONCLUDED IN OUR NEXT.]

Extraordinary Discovery.—Photographing Sound.

In another part of our columns will be found the details of a very singular discovery of M. L. Scott by means of which sounds may be made to record themselves, whether these sounds are those of musical instruments, or emitted by the voice in singing or speaking. Professor Wheatstone, during his recent visit to Paris, was invited by the Abbe Moigno to inspect the papers on which these sounds had written themselves, and is said to have been greatly surprised and pleased with what he saw. The mark produced on the paper by a particular note is invariably the same; so also, if a person speaks, the tone of voice in which he speaks is faithfully recorded. As yet no practical advantage has been obtained by this discovery, but Mr. Scott is sanguine that, in course of time, he will so far improve his apparatus that it will be capable of printing a speech (which may be written off "verbatim,") to the great saving of labor to Parliamentary reporters.—London Photographic News.

ACCIDENT AT A CIRCUS.—The Buffalo Advertiser says that on Monday afternoon a serious accident happened to one of the ring men in Dan Rice's circus, performing in that city. The horse "Excelsior," was being borne on a platform by a number of men, when he fell from the platform and several men were knocked down. One man had his head slightly peeled, and one, named Talmadge, had his ancle crushed in a frightful manner, the bone protruding for over an inch from the flesh. He was removed from the ring to the dressing-room, where he was attended by Dr. Whittaker, and finally removed to the Phœnix Hotel. One lady who saw him in the dressing room, and heard the wish expressed for cloths for bandages, promptly removed one of her skirts, with which the wounded limb was dressed for the time being.

It is a Chinese maxim, that for every man who does not work, and every woman who is idle, somebody must suffer cold or hunger. All loafers please notice.

FORSMAN'S Portable grinding & bolting FLOUR MILLS.

HAVING MADE AN ARRANGEMENT with the Patentee, we are now prepared to furnish to order the above Mills, of any size, burrs and bolts. The Mill is simple in its construction, having very little machinery occupying but little space, and warranted to do more work with the same amount of power, and make as good a quality of flour, as any Mill now manufactured. Proprietors of Saw Mills, especially those that use steam, would find it to their advantage to purchase one of these Mills, for the purpose of doing custom grinding—either wheat, corn or other grain. The Mill will be sold with or without the bolt. The principle of the Mill is one very applicable to the construction of large Merchant Mills, and persons about to build, would do well to call and examine.

We will also furnish with the Mills, Bolting Reels of any size and length, Smut Machines, Wheat Cleaners, Flour Packers, etc.

Orders respectfully solicited.

☞Composition and Cement for sale.

READ THE FOLLOWING:

CINCINNATI, O., February 18, 1857.

This is to certify that I have examined the samples of J. Beckley and Co.'s Cement and Composition Roof, and can say that I think them equal, if not superior to any Cement or Composition Roof now in use. I have one on my house, adjoining to where I was lately burned out, and must say that it stood the test admirably. D. A. POWELL.

CINCINNATI, June 29, 1858.

This is to certify that we have employed Messrs. J. Beckley and Co to put their Cement Roof on our foundry at the west end of Eighth street, and thus far it has given entire satisfaction, having been fully tested by severe rains, etc. The burning of a large frame ware-house adjoining, soon bringing our wood work and destroying our glass, produced no effect on our roof.
