The Church Preparing the Way for Disunion.

The fact cannot be disguised, that the folly of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in dissolving the union of the Church North and South, at the memorable session in Baltimore, in 1844, has had much to do in weakening the fraternal ties which bind the North and South together in a common brotherhood. That "fatal step" was the entering wedge to the unhappy discussions which have since followed in Church and State, and has done more than all other influences beside, (if we may except the Presbyterian Church schism,) to prepare the public mind for a dissolution of the Union. The membership of the church had little or nothing to do with that unfortunate move; the onus of the act lies at the door of the ministry, who [illegible] dom and religion, opened [illegible] strife and sorrow [illegible].

We felt [illegible] that had the laity of the church [illegible] in the deliberations and acts of the General Conference at Baltimore, on the occasion referred to, the "articles of separation" would never have passed that body. We are the more confident of this from the fact that a change in the "slavery clause" in the General Rules of the Church was not a mooted question among the membership; little or nothing was said about it in the free States.—A few "wild men" in the ministry, here and there, were "thorns in the side" of Zion, and managed to counteract all the good they might otherwise have accomplished, by eternally harping about negroes. In the South there was no discussion about the General Rules.—Long established usage in society and the Church had taught the Southern membership to believe that the Methodist Church did not seek to create a disturbance among them by interfering with the best state of things possible under the circumstances. As slavery was among them, and likely to remain, they could only make the best of it, serve God, and try to get to heaven when they died.

No charge was made by the ministry in the North that the Southern membership were cruel to their slaves, or that they did not try to teach them gospel truths; on the contrary, it was acknowledged on all hands that the slaves were humanely treated, and the "annual minutes" showed that a large number of them were members of the Church, and living pious lives; but in the face of this, a series of persecutions were instituted against them, and their domestic relations were interfered with. The Church South of the Mason and Dixon line was sought to be degraded, and after they had submitted for years to petty annoyances in the shape of snuffling resolutions denunciatory of them and of a system they could not change, but which they endeavored in the fear of the Lord to ameliorate, the matter culminated at Baltimore, and the separation ensued.

If the Church—which has the care of God's work here—cannot compromise mere differences [illegible] and its membership cannot bear and [illegible] one another, what can be expected [illegible] What can be expected of Congress? It was not declared that the emancipation of their slaves was essential to the final salvation of Southern Methodists; the Church North simply demanded of the Church South that she must so conduct herself, with regard to slavery, as to gratify the ultra abolition Pharisees who held that a slaveholder would be damned. And on this simple, wicked issue, they separated—the North and South of Methodism; separated in anger; separated on a difference of opinion which, had the spirit of Christ been permitted to bear upon their counsels, would have been reconciled in half an hour!

We repeat the belief that had the Baltimore General Conference of the M. E. Church been composed of about an equal proportion of laymen and clergy, no separation of the North and South sections of the Church would have occurred! The laity had no bitter feeling in the matter; no desire to do injustice to their Southern brethren; no distinguished positions to sustain; no reputations for oratory to make; no notoriety to establish; nothing but the good of the Church and the glory of God to subserve; and they would have been a successful check upon the gentlemen who initiated the present condition of things in this Government.

Congressmen now propose to do for the General Government what the Baltimore Conference did for the Church several years ago.—The deplorable folly of the Conference may not be amended, but its pernicious example may be avoided by Congress. Where we expected to find "most heaven we have found most earth;" may we not hope that in the matter of love for the Union the world will be an example to the Church!

The State Military Convention.

The State Military Convention, which met at Cincinnati last week, in its proceedings adopted a "memorial" which is to be presented to the Legislature by Gen. Bates, Gen. Jones, and Col. King, the committee appointed for the purpose. The memorial treats of the use of thorough military organizations, that through them the property, life and happiness of every citizen of the State, however remote from populous centries, is rendered more certain and secure by the existence of such organizations, and involves a consequent obligation to aid and cherish them. They bear none of their immediate burdens—they reap their extended and unquestionable fruits.

"At present the pressure upon the organization is that of accumulated duty and expense. More than $100,000 have been expended to uniform and equip the present force. The law requires the observance of certain days as seasons of military drills and exercise. The law compels the hire of armories and the care and repair of the public arms, which involves an annual outlay of many thousand dollars.

"This service and this care of the public arms is also obligatory, for the term of five years upon all who once enter upon the service

"The time and outlay thus expended add value to the organization, but increase the burden to which the citizen soldier is subjected.

"The Ohio volunteer militia, in this memorial, disclaim all ambition for a large or expensive military establishment. They propose but a nucleus which shall be large enough for the practical ends in view, but small enough neither to be a burthen to the public, nor objectionable in a law abiding or peace preserving State. They except as self-evident, however, the proposition, that with the growth of cities, the accumulation of capital and the advancement of the State in physical power, there are new and ever recurring occasions when the very existence of a well-disciplined volunteer militia props up the arm of the civil power, and gives to every household a fresh consciousness of security and a renewed pledge of abiding peace.

"They ask the appropriation of a sum equal at least to the annual loss of arms incurred by the State through want of such a system, to meet the expense incident to the hire of armories and the care of the property of the State. They would surround the enactment with such limitations that only the zealous, faithful and proficiency may enjoy this recognition by the State of the services done and money expended in their behalf. Not compensation with, but practical encouragement, is the claim which it is hoped the State will frankly and cordially recognise. Then may Ohio be the peer of her sister States in this respect, as well as in all the elements of material and civic greatness."

The following resolution, offered by Col. E. A. King, of this city, is a tribute to two very worthy gentlemen:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Association are hereby tendered to Adjutant General Carrington, and Quarter Master General D. L. Wood, for the prompt and faithful discharge of the duties of their departments, and their active and efficient exertions to improve the organization and further the prosperity of the Ohio Volunteer Militia, with the earnest hope that our military organization may continue to have the benefit of their services, in their respective positions.

The convention was officered by Maj. General Wm. H. Lytle as President, and Capt. C. C. Walcutt, as Secretary.

The adjournment was until September, 1860—the convention to meet in this city.

AN ITEM.—For some days past a twain (one of the twain a man, the other a woman) have been [illegible] at a public house in town, "doin' as other folks do." But their hands had never been joined by a person; no bridal hour had they known, their love was an unholy love, for one of the twain had a wife in the city of Springfield. On Thursday evening, 1st instant, the wife being apprised by telegraph of the peculiar state of affairs in Decatur, took the first train from our sister city to this place. She arrived in due time, was conducted to the house by there in waiting, confronted her sh-Adonis-like husband, who was then in the arms of Morpheus, or somebody else, and—confusion and a scene ensued. The matter has been amicably settled without the aid of pistols.—Decatur (Ill.) Gazette.

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY.
SIR JAMES CLARKE'S
Celebrated Female Pills.

Graduated Lands.

THE undersigned is prepared to obtain Patents for all persons holding duplicates for Graduated Lands, on which Patents have not been received.

The recent statement of the Department that all entries on which patents are not delivered will be cancelled, renders it of the utmost importance that parties should secure their titles by obtaining patents, or they will inevitably lose their land.

Parties leaving their duplicates with me for that purpose, will be charged nothing unless I succeed in obtaining their patents.
