Wynkoop's Iceland Pectoral.

Diseases of the throat, chested pulmonary organs are ever prevalent, insidious and dangerous. The properties of a medicine to alleviate, cure and prevent these complaints, must be expectorant, anodyne and invigorating, loosening the mucus of the throat, and imparting tone to the nervous system. No discovery in medical science ever mastered this class of diseases like Dr. Wynkoop's Iceland Pectoral. It cured with the most astonishing results all cases of bronchitis, influenza, whooping cough, diphtheria or button sore throat, asthma, croup, coughs, colds, nervous irritability, &c.

The Rev. J. J. Potter certifies that, "I have used Dr. Wynkoops Pectoral for several years, myself and in my family, for severe pulmonary complaints, and have recommended it to many others, and have never seen its equal." Rev. J. J. Potter, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Hundreds and thousands of important testimonials could be produced, showing its remarkable cures and that it never fails.

It is the opinion of cure Iceland Moss, Balm of Gilead, Peruvian Balsam, Wintergreen, mullein, Burdock, and other invaluable expectorant medicinal ingredients. It is harmless, prompt and lasting in its effect, and parents cannot afford to neglect a trial. Every family should have it. It is remarkable for Croup. Full directions, recommendations and testimonies accompany each bottle.

"If he (Lee) is marching to meet Grant, the main object of the latter will be accomplished—a fight in a fair field, which the rebels never have given us without being beaten, save when McClellan was in command."—Journal.

The Journal seems that a lie told upon McClellan is a splendid achievement, and there is nothing too mean in that line to stagger it for a moment. Its marvelous power of stupid condescension, as evinced in the above paragraph, amounts almost to sublimity. What an exalted opinion it must have of the intelligence and virtue of those to whom it addresses itself, to inform them on this beautiful May morning, that the rebels have always been beaten in fair field fights, except when McClellan was in command.

According to our recollection of the matter, the first battle of the war, Bull Run, was fought upon a fair open field, and resulted in the discomfiture of Gen. McDowel, the Federal commander. The rebels, on that occasion, waived the advantage of their fortifications. The second Bull Run battle, where the vaporous Pope saw the sun of his glory turn to mud at mid-day, was also fought upon a fair field, and no favors asked. But the lie of the Journal will appear to best advantage when observed through the "soft silver light," of the Virginia campaign of fighting Joseph Hooker, esq. Has the Journal forgotten how that illustrious black republican chieftain lighted up the somber gloom of the "Wilderness" with his gaseous genius? Didn't he flank Lee's fortified position, and compel that unfortunate military snob to meet him upon ground of his own choosing? Certainly he did. Hooker, commanded the "best army on the planet," and the army was commanded by the best General on the planet. In other words, the relation between this army and its "Major General Commanding," was not unlike that which formerly marked the felicity of John Thompson and his Daddy, and which has been immortalized in verse:

"John Thompson he knew that his daddy lived well,
And his daddy he knew that John Thompson lived well."

When fighting Joe contemplated the situation, and considered the still undeveloped resources of his strategy, he involuntarily exclaimed: "The rebel army is now the legitimate property of the army of the Potomac." He seized this favorable moment to advise the Secretary of War that that the rebel army was reduced to the dire necessity of choosing between annihilation and ignominious retreat. The rebels preferred the former alternative, and Hooker availed himself of the latter, deeply impressed, no doubt, with the propriety of obedience to the scriptural injunction, "Let him that putteth on the harness boast not as him that taketh it off."

And yet, the Journal informed our citizens this morning, before breakfast, that no officer but McClellan, had ever been defeated by the rebels on an open field. Banks was defeated thus, and so was Sigel.

From the 12th Ohio—A letter from Capt. Ashley Brown, of the Twelth Ohio, dated Alderson's Ferry, Greenbrier county, Virginia, says they are in Camp, awaiting orders. In their late march to Dublin Depot they took 500 prisoners, and brought away five pieces of artillery. Loss on each side was about equal. So confident were the rebs of whipping us that they invited the citizens out to their fortifications to see the thing done; but they were mistaken, as General Crook never disposes of his forces so that they can be whipped in detail. Captain Channel and Adjutant Palmer were mortally wounded. H. P. Tibbals is a prisoner in the hands of the enemy. Archer is well. The Twelfth Ohio, thus far, has lost one hundred men. The enemy fought hard, but were soundly threshed.—Journal.

Who Proclaimed War?

The New York Times, an accredited leading Republican paper, and the especial organ in New York of the administration, in its issue of the 6th of March, 1864, in an editorial taking issue with Thaddeus Stevens for stating that the rebel States are belligerents and "they that are no longer in the Union," writes this down as fact:

"The Confederacy wanted peace, and sent Commissioners to Washington to receive it. We would not receive them, and proclaimed war. The question who fired the first gun is nothing."
