Fatal Result of an Old Feud in Iowa.

Raid on Illicit Distillers in Middle Tennessee.

Judge Orth Nominated for Governor in Indiana.

INDIANOLA, IOWA, Feb. 22.—While returning from church two families got into a quarrel. Two brothers, their father and a friend were killed. The attacking party, six in number, are in jail. The disturbance was the result of an old feud.

BOSTON, Feb. 22.—The two hundredth anniversary of the burning of Meadfield by the Indians under King Philip was celebrated to-day. The overturning of a wagon killed two persons.

NASHVILLE, Feb. 22.—The Deputy Revenue Collector, with fifteen soldiers, arrived to day from a raid in Lawrence and Wayne counties, bringing in eight prisoners. They broke up six home stills, with an aggregate total capacity of three barrels per day.

DETROIT, Feb. 22.—An earthquake was felt here last Sunday.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 22.—Godlove S. Orth was nominated for Governor by the Republican Convention.

PROVIDENCE, Feb. 22.—The Prohibitionists nominated till the State ticket.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Feb. 22.—About two hundred persons were present at the Greenback Men's Convention.

BALTIMORE, MD., Feb. 22.—Prof. D. C. Gilman was inaugurated President of the John Hopkins University to-day. Gov. John Lee Carroll presided. Among those present was Prof. Gildersleeve, of the University of Virginia. The University opens in October.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 22.—A Committee of Nine has been appointed to draft the report of the Advisory Council. It is understood that nearly all the positions of Plymouth Church will be sustained.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—George Cameron shot Fred. Schneider to-day and then shot himself. Both are dead. It occurred so quietly in a drinking saloon that it is supposed to have been a pre-arranged affair.

WASHINGTON.

National Democratic Committee in Session.

Mexican War Veterans in Council.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The National Democratic Committee met to-day at twelve past 12 o'clock. There was a large attendance of members and a few proxies. But little business was transacted up to the time of closing.

The committees did nothing to-day.

Retrenchment reaches the Executive Department. The Pordon Clerk will be dispensed with and the Marshalships in North Carolina and elsewhere where expenses have been enormous will be consolidated.

The National Democratic Executive Committee met to-day for the purpose of nominating a place for holding the National Convention, which meets on the 27th of June. The delegates were all present, Mr. Schell in the chair. One speech was allowed by the delegation from each city claiming the convention. Charles D. Jacobs, Mayor of Louisville, read a paper, drawn by the Kentucky delegation, in favor of holding the Convention in that city. Louisville is the Democratic metropolis of a Democratic State that gives forty thousand majority. A State so uniformly Democratic should meet with some reward for her adherance to truth, right and justice.

Kentucky is central and has no sympathy with the ultraism of any section. Louisville has a Hall capable of seating 2,500, but if necessary for more room the Exposition Building could be secured, and all the incidental expenses paid. The hotels had agreed to charge only the usual rates, and many citizens, if the hotels should be overcrowded would open their houses to guests. Kentucky had no son to present for nomination, and therefore the deliberations would be free from improper influences. Kentucky would cheerfully acquiesce in whatever the Convention might decide.

Mr. Jacobs in conclusion, as Mayor of Louisville, promised that should the Convention meet in that city, the hospitalities would be such that every delegate on his return would feel as if he had never left home.

The Annual Meeting of the National Association of Veterans of the Mexican War convened to-day. Gen. Denver presided. Gen. Geo. E. Pugh, of Ohio, Gen. Albert Pike, of Arkansas, and H. S. Lane, of Indiana, were selected as centennial orators. A committee was appointed to arrange for the centennial celebration.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Wm. A. Darling and Spencer N. Green, President and Secretary of the Savings Bank, were arrested today for swearing to a false exhibit in 1871.

Wellington, Kidder & Co., rectifiers and distillers, have failed. Liabilities $200,000.

Frederick Schuchardt and Lawrence Wells, comprising the firm of Frederick Schuchardt & Sons, bankers, have failed. Liabilities $150,000.

Mr. Charles O'Conor's Recovery.

The New York Tribune of Saturday says:

"Our citizens will be surprised to hear that on Thursday evening next they will have the pleasure of welcoming Mr. Charles O'Conor back again to his active duties in the metropolis. For many days Mr. O'Conor's life hung upon a thread, and the value in which that life was held was strikingly shown by the morning and evening bulletins of his condition which were issued by the daily journals of this city for several weeks. His coming among us again after all hope of his recovery had been abandoned seems almost like a return from the dead."

FOREIGN NEWS.

Disastrous Floods in the Austrian Provinces.

The Cause of the Carlists Hopelessly Lost.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The Daily News' special from Vienna announces the occurrence of disastrous floods in the Provinces of Upper Austria and Morovia, 120 houses having been destroyed.

In the Suez debate Lowe and Gladstone criticised the transaction. Gladstone pointed out the great risk England ran by abandoning her position as a champion of the interests of Europe to become the champion of her own selfish interests. Mr. Disraeli said he thought the discussion showed unmistakably that if Mr. Gladstone had been in office the shares would not have been purchased. He (Disraeli) did not recommend the purchase as a financial investment, but as a political measure calculated to strengthen the Empire. The vote was agreed to.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—The Bien Public announces that Dufour will form a new Ministry.

It is estimated that when all the elections are held the Chambers of Deputies will stand about as follows: Republicans 280, Bonapartists 100, and the remainder will be of various Monarchist and Constitutional shades.

The Carlist General Dorregary has taken refuge on French soil. The Carlist cause is now considered here as hopelessly lost.

It is not yet known to whom President MacMahon will entrust the formation of the new Cabinet for the Republique Francaise. Gambetta's organ, of to-day, says that the Buffet Cabinet will have to render an account to the country of its administration of the public affairs, and declares that any revision of the Constitution except in a Republican sense is now impossible. The Republican papers comment upon the calm and tranquil manner in which the country associated itself with Republican ideas.

MADRID, Feb. 22.—The Senate passed a vote of thanks to the army. Estella has been captured.

Dispatches received yesterday announced that Don Carlos was in the Baztan Valley. Gen. Martinez Campos' army is marching upon Hernani. King Alfonso entered Tolouse yesterday afternoon. The Royalists had previously carried all the heights near town.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—In the House of Commons the Government stated that negotiations were progressing with the South American States for extradition treaties. Also, that the Government was not recognizing the exclusive right of France to fish at Newfoundland.

Sensible Suggestions.

A correspondent writing from Greeneville makes the following sensible remarks, which we commend to our Republican friends everywhere. After speaking of the failure to elect a Republican Member from this District in 1874, he says:

We are determined to do better in the coming contest. We intend to have a fair Convention—not a Convention gotten up in the interest of any one man, or set of men, but in the interest solely of the party. We want every true Republican to attend the county conventions, called to nominate delegates to the Congressional Convention, and then we want good and true men appointed as delegates, who will go to the Convention untrammeled in every way—not as delegates for this man or that man, but as honest and true men, seeking to put forward a standard bearer, who can lead them to victory. If a Convention called in that way and in that spirit, should meet and nominate a man, whether he be the choice of all or not, he will receive the entire Republican strength and will be elected by one thousand majority. On the contrary, if a Convention shall be called by the intrigue and chicanery of some particular aspirants and a candidate be put on the track by such means, we will again split up into factions, and fall an easy prey to our enemies as we did before. LENOX.

Greeneville, Feb. 22, 1876.

FROM SEVIER COUNTY.

Some Facts About the County's Financial Condition.

SEVIERVILLE, TENN., Feb. 19, 1876.

To the Editors of the Chronicle:

I propose giving a brief report of our county finances. And from the politeness of our County Court Clerk, Mr. Wm. Fowler, gather the following figures. On the first of January, we find about nine thousand dollars of warrants out in the hands of the people. Therefore, this is our indebtedness. Then the total taxable property for 1875 amounts to $1,484,040. The county tax for county purposes for 1875, is $5,936.16. For bridge purposes, $1,484.04. The total tax for the county, $7,420.20. Therefore we will find a deficiency of $1,579.80. There is no money in the treasury, and county warrants have been received for county taxes, without regard to date or number. There are many persons who hold claims, issued as far back as 1869, who lay out of the use of their money and hold on to their old warrants upon our treasury. This ought to be remedied and our warrants taken up according to their date and number. We hope our Trustee will take such action that persons holding those old claims may be able to get the money or otherwise be compensated for their claims the present year. The County Court should always levy a sufficient tax to have a surplus of from $5,000 to $10,000 in the County Treasury to meet any emergency at a moments warning. The State tax for 1875, is 40 cents on the $100. The county tax is 40 cents, school tax 20 cents, bridges 10 cents. We find the number of acres of land in the county tax book amounting to 1,667,112 acres. Dog tax $2,118.00. SEVIER.

EX-SPEAKER BLAINE.

Washington Correspondence of the Chicago Tribune.

Almost as common as "What's the news?" is becoming the query, "What is Blaine at now?" or "What will he do next?" The Democratic caucus, of late so assiduously kept up, is, more than to any other cause, due to what Blaine did in routing the entire Democratic majority in the amnesty debate. They are yet busy accounting for the disaster that befell them from his attack single-handed; and from their discomforted theorizing over it, perhaps down to the latest generation, they will still be explaining it, as the worshippers of the First Napoleon do in recounting for Waterloo, by solemnly declaring that it was the hand of Destiny that did it. In all their caucusing, too, the object seems quite as much to guard against what Blaine may do as it is to discover the long-lost principles of the Democratic party. He is the awful warning of the Democratic statesmen, the leaders among whom are believed to quiet the raw untamed in the Democratic infant class by reminding them what Blaine did and what Blaine may do.

On the Republican side there is scarce a less eager expectancy as to what Blaine is going to do. He makes no confidants, but forms his own plans; and these, it is felt, are liable to prove quite as much a surprise to the Republicans as to the Democrats. Not, however, because of any apprehension that he may blunder. Instead, since the awakening of the country by the amnesty debate, there is an almost unbounded confidence in his political sagacity—so much so that, as a prominent Republican, committed to another candidate for the Presidency, remarked: "If Blaine merely rose in his seat and moved an adjournment, everybody would detect something occult in it, and declare it was the most brilliant thing ever done upon the floor." So they wait for him to take the initiative, prepared to follow, not so much from enthusiasm for him as from an innate conviction that, with quicker, keener foresight than anybody else, he will be first to perceive what to do and the time for doing it. "He does not lead," said the oldest and shrewdest politicians here, "as did Thad. Stevens, by whipping in his following. They follow Blaine, not because they are afraid of him, but because, somehow or other, they feel that they would perpetrate an almost irretrievable blunder if they didn't follow him." His position if it does not make him master of the situation, is full of opportunity. If, as some of his critics assert, he is only smart, it is full of peril; while, if he half equals the expectations of his admirers, he will distance all competitors in the race for the Presidency. So it is that he is now the centre of observation here in anticipation of the nomination at Cincinnati—which is what engages the working hours of every able-bodied male citizen of the District, and what he dreams about of nights—everybody makes his calculations subject to the contingencies of what Blaine may do—tacitly admitting, the while, that Blaine is very liable to smash all the slates.

He looks surcharged with tremendous nervous energy, so irresistibly impelling him that the steambrakes couldn't slow him down to 300 revolutions per minute. When there is nothing to work it off it seems to effervesce in boyish exuberance of spirits, or he darts hither and thither across the hall, up and down the aisles, or through the lobby with incessant activity. His habitual air is that of a man intent upon overtaking to-morrow, and driving ahead at such tremendous speed that nobody would be surprised if he did it. Physically he is a splendid type of manhood; of commanding stature, straight as a Maine pine, broad-shouldered and of stalwart, muscular frame, a trifle stout, but with step quick as a boy's, and every movement as free and suple as that of a trained athlete. He has a full, high forehead; large, keen, observant eyes; nose slightly aquiline, and of the sort that adds to the the look of a push-aheadativeness that is imprinted on his every feature. His short cropped beard, which half conceals his lower face, gives him an air of military precision. In speech he is rapid, but distinct in utterance and clear cut in expression; makes no apparent attempt at rhetorical graces, but is forcible, pungent, and at times stirringly eloquent, while always terse and pointed and marvelously quick at repartees, and when most intense is most master of himself and thoroughly self-poised. He does not seek occasion to speak, but as often as he takes the floor letter-writing and conversation cease, and everybody listens, for it is expected he will say something, which expectation he has thus far been very far from disappointing at this session. He is bending every energy to race for the Presidency: and such are the great strides he is making that it is tacitly admitted here generally that if he holds out as he began he must succeed.

PERSONAL.

Mark Twain is writing another play. The plot is located in San Francisco and the silver mines of Nevada.

Ulysses S. Grant, Jr., is a graduate of Harvard University, in the class of 1874. Jesse R. Grant, the President's third son, is now a student at Cornell University.

Henry Clay Dean, the statue of real estate, says that immersion is frog-pond religion, and adds that he lately talked religion with a Modoc widow, and found her as wise as the profoundest philosopher.

Phil Sheridan is getting fat. Lincoln once said to Welles that Sheridan was "a brown, chunky little chap, with a long body, short legs, not enough neck to hang him, and such long arms that, if his ankles itch, he can scratch them without stooping."

If James Parton, who has married his step-daughter, had had a son by his first wife, there would have been some queer relationships in the family. While he is son-in-law to his late wife, he would have been brother-in-law to his own son, who would have been the son of his own sister, and—but he didn't have a son.

The other night a seedy, care-worn individual seated himself on a horse-block in front of this establishment, and, burying his face in his red hands, moaned: "Money air tight—m-i-g-h-t-y tight. Dogged ef money hain't been tight right along for nigh onto three years. She's makin' a mernoperly of the business, shore. Now ef I could ketch up with money I'd go on a tight with her, but, as Spokeshiresays, 'aye, thar's the rubification.' The difference between me and money air these: When I get tight they lock me up—when they lock money up she gets tight. That's the way it stands, shore."—Franklin (Ky.) Patriot.
