SUNDAY, MARCH 23, 1879.

AN ABORTIVE ACT.

It may be that some have thought the CHRONICLE vindictive when it has spoken of the Tennessee Legislature now in session. We beg leave to assure any such that we have no spite, or malice against a single member of either House of that august body. In speaking of them, it has been with reference to their official acts, and not in a personal sense. And when we say that there are fifty inmates of the Insane Asylum near Nashville who are just as capable of making laws for the Government of a great State (or small one either) a fifty men we might select from the two houses of our present General Assembly, we mean no injustice to the Legislature—and no insult to the inmates. We confess that after the adoption of the indefinite, two-faced platform by our Democratic friends last summer, knowing that the party had a majority in this State, we had very little hope of a Legislature that would settle the public debt question. But unwilling to prejudge, we still had a faint hope, that enough honest men with common sense might stumble into the Legislature to save the State from the disgrace of repudiation. It took but a few days after the Legislature met to show the delusive character of any such faint hope. The majority are dyed-in-the-wool repudiationists, hence we are not at all surprised at the action of the Senate on Friday, in which they insult the creditors of the State with a proposition for a compromise at forty per cent., with four and five per cent. interest. A great many of the members who favor repudiation to that extent, mean no harm. They are amiable, inoffensive men, but the most prominent trait in their character is their imbecility. The fools and knaves combined have a majority, and have things their own way. The former have conscience without brains, the latter a modicum of brains without the slightest trace of conscience. They care nothing about the honor of the State or the welfare of posterity—are as oblivious to the future as so many hogs. This imbecile and knavish majority have treated the minority with decent respect only when they were compelled to, and hence we have heard from the better class of men in that body only occasionally. And, when strong arguments have been made, as in the case of Senator Clapp and others, or when an honest measure has been presented, as by the Republicans in the bill offered by Mr. Wiltse of Chattanooga, it has been only casting pearls before swine.

The only thing that a majority of this Legislature is capable of doing that will benefit the State, is to adjourn sine die, or as Mr. Snodgrass did, resign. The minority in both houses, numbering men of both parties, who have stood up so manfully for honesty and honor, deserve a great deal of credit. They have discharged their duty nobly. But in the future, the majority will be only remembered for the part they took in casting a stigma upon Tennessee's fair fame. They will be anathematized and cursed while honesty is regarded as a virtue, and pointed to as the men who conspired to disgrace the home of Jackson, Grundy, Polk, Johnson and others, whose fame gave lustre to Tennessee's history. This Senate bill is the last abortive attempt of a Legislature that must go down in history as an abortion, to settle a question which called for wisdom, courage, statesmanship and patriotism.

WOULD-BE EDITORS.

There are some people who are never satisfied unless they are giving an editor instruction as to how to run his paper. They are found in all classes—lawyers, physicians, merchants, mechanics, divines, etc. These people think that to edit a newspaper is an easy thing; that their opinions on the subject are worth a great deal more than those of a man who makes every department of the profession a special study. No man likes to have another interfere with his business, and generally this is done with none except the poor editor. Hear what Rev. Mr. Rose, a Milwaukee preacher, says on the subject:

"I would dismiss the affectation of the editorial 'we' under which newspaper men with their habitual modesty are wont to conceal their individuality. I would break up the anonymous in print. I would give all these critics, alike those that cry truth and those that cry falsehood and slander, a body and a responsible personality. I would have printed at the head of every newspaper the name of every man responsible for its utterances. The political, religious, society editor, the critic of art and music, the correspondents, the reporters, should put forth their work over their own names."

Rev. Rose thinks this arrangement would do away with sensationalism, slander and falsehood—that the "personal" basis would affect a complete revolution in the mangagement of a daily newspaper. So far as we know there is but one place in the world where "personal" editorship is the system, and that is in Paris. Now if this reverend gentleman, or any other, will translate or have translated some Paris journal, he will see that he must search for another panacea for journalistic sensationalism.

VARIETIES.

Carlyle receives $4,000 from his books.

Gen. Hawley has severed his editorial connection with the Hartford Courant.

Wade Hampton has been presented with a pair of silver-mounted rosewood crutches.

One man was killed and several severely injured by an explosion in a Pottsville, Pa., mine.

Benson Van Vliet has been appointed Superintendent of Vassar College. Wonder how old he is?

Austria wants 100,000,000 florins to meet the current expenses of next year—it has to be borrowed.

In Mexico the most enterprising of the newspapers are printed in the afternoon and distributed or sold the following morning.

A Virginia man recently bought a Confederate cotton bond. It was No. 1, for $25,000 and promised eight per cent. interest.

A seven-year old boy of Connecticut caught legopobia or pedestrianism, as some people say, tried a two day's walk and died.

Doctor Hamilton, who is in charge of the Boston Marine Hospital, will probably succeed the late Surgeon-General Woodworth.

The New York Tribune thinks that the colossal Senator David Davis, of Illinois, has fed his Democratic side on it it weighs about a ton.

An English company is about to start at Flushing, Holland, for the importation of American meat, alive and dead, for the German market.

Senator Voorhees should introduce a great bill to pay off the National debt in greenbacks, and have it attached to the Appropriation bill.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Oil City Derrick—"A Chicago woman is going to try to keep her mouth shut three thousand quarter hours." Ten to one neither a Chicago or any other woman can do it.

Minister Stoughton has been grievously afflicted by the severity of the Russian winter. His physicians have advised him to go to Southern Italy, where he will stay for some time.

It is said that Senator Wallace and Speaker Randall will be summoned before the Pennsylvania delegation in Congress and informed that they must stop their quarreling.

The editor of the Philadelphia Times was married the other day to Miss Cora Gratz. Poor fellow! Is it this we newspaper men are coming to? "Times is not like they used to wuz."

It strikes the Cincinnati Commercial that "the Greenback party does not materialize well. The conditions are not favorable. General Cary, and Kelley, of Pennsylvania, should try a caucus in a dark room with padded windows, a cabinet and a music-box."

Even the Alaska Appeal has its paragraph. "A deputation of Esquimaux are on their way to consult Kearney on the labor question. Long working hours during the Arctic summer, and an Asiatic invasion across the Behring Straits, are among the subjects to be discussed."

Ann Eliza Young, describing how woman suffrage works in Utah, furnishes this example: "I voted once—being compelled to do so by Brigham Young—and his coachman was deputized to take me to the polls and tell me how. His instructions consisted in telling me to write my name on a piece of paper, which he handed to me, and to this day I remain in blissful ignorance of whom I cast my only vote for."

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The April number of The North American Review opens with an article entitled "Retribution in Politics," by ex-Gov. Hendricks. It is intended as a reply to the charges which Senator Blaine, in the March issue, made against the Southern wing of the Democratic party. The second paper is on "The Public Schools of England," and is by Thomas Hughes, author of "Tom Brown at Rugby." The object of the writer is to show the need of establishing in the United States educational institutions similar to those in England. The subject is to be continued in another number. The present portion is devoted principally to the history, organization and management of the most notable English schools. Next follows a discussion on "German Socialism in America," by an anonymous writer. It embraces a large number of statistics of the origin and progress of socialism in this country, and have never before been published, and states the dangers that are believed to threaten the States from measures which Prince Bismarck is said to be taking to rid Germany of the socialistic element. It also claims that socialism in this country is entirely German in its origin and doctrines, that its leaders are Germans, and that there is a sympathy of action between the socialists of Germany and those of America. The fourth article is by Henry James, Jr., and is entitled "A Friend of Lord Byron." It reviews the recently published memoir of the Rev. Francis Hodgson, and notices the Byron scandal. Mr. James believes that the memoir furnishes evidence sufficient to exonerate Byron from the suspicions of his wife and the accusations of Mrs. Stowe. "The Census of 1880," by George Walker, offers suggestions as to the best means of taking the national census, and shows how the business interests of the country can be advanced by census statistics if they can be made full and accurate. The sixth article is a plea for the Indians, by the noted Nez Perces Chief, Joseph, with an introduction by Bishop Hare. It gives a detailed account of Joseph's famous campaign, from its beginning to his surrender to Gen. Miles, and presents with all the force of Indian eloquence the claims of the race for justice and protection. W. W. Story, poet and sculptor, concludes his discussion of "The Pronunciation of the Latin Language." Hartmann's Religion of the Future" is the subject of a treatise by M. A. Hardaker. The writer says that there is as much diversity in religious thought as in the trees of the forest, and that while Mr. Hartmann's new religion may appeal to the most cultivated and esthetic minds, Christianity has in it certain elements that will preserve it and enable it to flourish for centuries to come. He attacks Mr. Hartmann's idea of the unconscious in religion. The closing paper is a critical review of recent miscellaneous literature.

Published at 551 Broadway, New York, and for sale by booksellers and newsdealers generally, at 50 cents per copy.

Frank Leslie's SUNDAY MAGAZINE.

The April number of this highly popular periodical is promptly on our table, and fully maintains its well deserved reputation as one of the best, in every respect, published, and worthy of a place in every American household. As this may be regarded as the Easter number, the leader is a deeply interesting Easter story, entitled "Winona," by Mary G. Hollister, Missionary at Aintab, Turkey. This is followed by a very instructive paper on "Some Easter Customs," by Mr. Godfrey A. Hudson. Mrs. Hemans's beautiful poem is reproduced—"Easter Day in a Mountain Churchyard." Among the stories is one of thrilling character, "On the Edge of a Glacier." "David Fleming's Forgiveness" continues to grow in interest. Thomas Middleton has an admirable story, "Dr. Ellerton's Own Case." We have not space, however, to enumerate even the most attractive features of the contents of this richly freighted publication, filling 128 quarto pages, and embracing every style of literature; the reader can not fail to be interested, entertained and edified. The illustrations are profuse, and of great artistic merit, adding not a little to the interest and popularity of the Sunday Magazine which is certainly a marvel of cheapness, the subscription being only $3 per annum, postpaid: a single copy 25 cents. Address, Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.
