THE CRIMSON PALACE

BY MRS. ANNA MORROW, OF CINCINNATI, O.

Come, builders, and build me a Palace
That is grand and befitting my rank;
Not moonlight, but rivalry, splendor,
Not alabaster, marble of Mont Blanc—
Let a dome indeed be reared to the Westward,
Gem-cast, a magnificent hall,
With Corinthian front on the northward—
But, mind me, crown it with an Oriental.

I want from your quarries examples
Of work manship exotic and rare,
Fitted Rome, in the bloom of her glory,
No palace could with it compare.
I want here all charms for the senses
I want here enchantment divine,
That in this Palace Adoration begins
I forget the blood-curtains of mine.

Let the lavation and mirrors be silver,
Floors of the white as the snow,
Let like the breath of sea billow
Be touches with crimson all glow
Let fabrics as white as the moon be—
Let art that the world adores;
And across like the starlight shall deck it
Fleecing my room tropical flowers.

Let in gardens be spread with care lilies
Its pathways be glittering white—
And the fountains of marble all glisten
Neath showers of silvery light
Let the ripple of wind and of waters
Pass only to dance to my dread mood
That I walk thro' my palace of silver,
Never mended of ghosts or of blood.

And the mosaic white palace was finished
And it floor like an icicle there,
The soul of moonlight for splendor,
The ritual of summer for Air
And the light of the Palace of silver
Flashed out to dance my dread mood
But he raved as one frantic with fever
Palace in the crimson of blood."

Little need that the builders have built me
The Palace befitting my rank,
Dim moonlight was never more splendid,
Nor whiter the snows of Mont Blanc—
Its gorgeous adornings of silver,
Its face like the snow of the flood,
Its pathways like the golden of lilies
All take to me red fingered blood.

Its floor in its east front at sunrise,
Its crimson my form doth enfold,
Its lilies its west front at sunset,
It floods me with crimson and gold;
Its fountains with crimson and gold;
Its floors from its turrets to starlight,
Stars, mein'ry gives sickening food,
Blue skies like caves of the dying,
They are shineless as colors of blood.

Little need that my fountains all warble
With ripples of wind in their song,
Neath the roof of the heaven so noble
Its charms in the south winds prolong
And they steal thro' its chambers low sighing,
Thro' the wall to their unbroken stood,
And they flush all my palace of silver
Force or in the crimson of blood.

No matter my dead be in ocean,
Or bleaching now under the south,
Fine blood, earth nor wave ever forgives,
For blood has the wind for its mouth
It shrieks thro' all nature to Heaven,
It shakes over mountains and floods,
And the curse of eternal damnation
Rings round her of innocent blood.

Little need now I call on the ocean,
Or roam the wide world o'er for rest
For half my sickness is free in my bosom,
I've murdered the dove in my breast.
For shelter there's no where to fly me,
The spirit must forever pursue
Ellis the air but with fleckings of crimson,
Mt. Blanc's star bath turned into blood.

And no crimson-hued three-fronted Palace
Crown thee as in years thence
Thy ritual of summer for Air
Thy blood-haunted hand of the Palace
Not for the glittering stood,
He had passed down the aisles of the sunset,
Self-famed in his own crimson blood.

OUR LITTLE "WEAKLY" CONFAB.

Oh, for the wings of a dove or a buzzard, a bat, a tadpole, a "fifery flyin' varpint," or any other four-footed "varmint" or "creepin' critter," that we might fly away and be at rest! We're tired and sick. Tired enough to enjoy a nice comfortable coffin, with black velvet trimmings, silver plated handles, and a cotton-batting head-piece, out in a calm, cosy corner of "Machpelah." Sick enough, if it was well scattered around, to start a first class charity hospital; put a whole herd of young elephants to bed, and leave forty-seven cosy stove-pipe hats full of elegant head-aches, heart-aches, neuralgias, corns, bunions, hysterics, multigrubs, rheumatisms and miscellaneous good-for-nothing-isms, to be distributed, as testimonials of our regard among our friends. The only hour of peace and quiet that, in all the live hours of the week, we ever enjoy is on the evening when we seat ourself for our accustomed little "tete-a-tete," which in plain backwoods English means "gab-swapping" with our friends. And lo! this looked-forward to evening finds us scarcely able to spell back when we're spoken to. As for originating a new idea, or even re-stamping an old one, you'd as well expect a lecture on temperance, dignity, integrity and propriety from Jim Fisk, "National Hog" whom the "Party of Progress, Enlightenment and High-Morality" has sent to wallow for four years, in the White House, once graced by a Madison, a Polk, Pierce and Buchanan. Friends, all, we're glad to see you; but we can't throw up our hat, (as grant often does his boots), and shout our happiness, as usual. Pity the misfortune of a sick young man.

Very solemly do we welcome No. 1, Iarisima avis, a real, live, white man, an honest man, a true Caucasian, from the great fountain-head of "loyal" affinity, rottenness and blackness:

COLUMBIAN COLLEGE, WASHINGTON, D. C.,
October 22, 1870.

Col. P. Donan: The White Man's Party asks me promptly, and I am sure I would be guilty of an awful sin were I not to congratulate you upon the bold manner in which you proclaim the truth, and expose the foul deeds of our devilish and lecherous political enemies, and that the teachings of the Caucasian's ecclesiastical youth, proclaiming the gospel of Democracy, whose principles constitute the sheet-anchor of American liberty, and whose success will be the healing of the nation's wounds, could reach the courts of every household throughout the land. I trust the actions all good men, armed with the spirit and the determination of razing, to their rotten foundations, all Radical, bayonet-propped institutions.

The Chairman of the Central Democratic Executive committee is receiving cheering news from all parts of the country. The State elections already held will change to some extent the political complexion of the next Congress. Oregon and North Carolina having secured Democratic Governors will send to the U. S. Senate two white men to fill the seats now occupied by two Radical wooly niggers. The latter State has also gained four Representatives to Congress. Indiana has wheeled into line, given the State to the Democrats, and gained one Representative in Congress, and thus prepared herself for the work of 1872. In Illinois the Democracy has also gained four Congressmen in Pennsylvania So the grand work goes bravely on.

The fact is the people of Missouri are beginning to go forth manfully to battle for its right. The recent elections show that Radicalism is no longer a shield to hide behind. It will be a fearful reckoning of the people, by the people, and for the people. To build up a new America, more glorious than ever coined the dreams of an enthusiast, or entered into the limitless bounds of a prophet's vision.

The sun of your own Radical decline, Missouri, is now one of the battle fields for freedom and efficient government. Disseminate the Caucasian, that all good men may be guided in a well-directed effort to strike blows, bold and fearless, and using, armed heart and hand upon the Brown platform, success will await them, and when the ballots shall have been cast, the entire people throughout the State, and throughout the State, may be counted to exclaim, as with the voice of one man, in tones louder than Sinai's thunder, "Sound the loud trumpet, our country is free."

God speed the Caucasian, and all its co-laborers. Please send me a few copies of your photographs. I want to see the portraits of a real live editor.

Respectfully yours, E. P. H.

Soul-stirring, cheering words! We'll send the photophiz in a few days.

From a good old friend in that glorious State, against whom heaven, hell and Yankeedom, all seem to have conspired. War, devastation, Capitol meshes, floods, railroad disasters and carpet-bagdom.

WYCOMBE, Va., Oct. 21, 1870.

Col. P. Donan—Dear sir: Enclosed you find that I am but one of thousands, dissatisfied at some other disturbed, but I can't. I have been trying to get subscribers to the club, and I am in hopes of to get you some more in the course of his mean events. The fact is, our people have had so many backsets of late, that they are completely discouraged. Yet, as you remark, "Hope springs eternal in the human breast." It is essential to keep soul and body together. Although our crops of this year should not be materially injured, yet the prospect of the next year is very gloomy. Our people have been so taxed out of place, out of the performance of duty. The arms always tell me the fact that the aforementioned "Union" is a thing of the past. Our people are trying to make gather heaven from the "pot-vanquished" they get.

During the whole period of the war the sensibility of the old people, and when, on one occasion, a gentleman and lady visited the place, they were forced to refer to the delightful to Richmond, to see the wounded and sick needed it more than he. To
