JUSTICE JOHN'S COURT.

THE GREAT DISPENSER OF JUSTICE TAKES BUT SEVEN MINUTES.

The Morals of the City are Steadily Improving, He Says, and Gives Figures to Prove It.

It took Justice John exactly seven minutes to dispose of all the business before the court yesterday morning. Nobody went to jail, not a cent was collected, and only about thirty or forty people were present.

This falling off in the attendance is a cause of great disappointment and chagrin to Justice John, and he said yesterday morning that inasmuch as his circulation was falling off he would have to adopt the New York newspaper methods and furnish an affidavit daily of his attendance.

"The fact is," continued the learned jurist, "this city is growing better all the time in point of morals among the classes which naturally find their way to this court. During the first few years of my occupancy of this bench the fines used to run up to between $12,000 and $14,000 per annum; and these days from $7,000 to $9,000 is the best we can do."

Then Justice John leaned back in his chair with the air of a man who knows that his great mission on earth is being fulfilled. Error and darkness flee at his approach as the shadows of night hasten away with the advent of a glorious dawning.

In the light of his eagle eye, "the hiding-place of falsehood is uncovered, and the refuge of lies swept away."

Great pulpit orators may paint the picture of the sleeping shepherds and the star that stood over Bethlehem until we almost catch the faint echoes that float still down the corridors of time of the glorious anthem of "peace on earth, good will to men."

With magic words and irresistible oratory, they may portray the wild night when the stars were hid and the waves, lashed into fury by the tempestuous winds, were calmed with "It is I; be not afraid."

Gethsemane and Golgotha, lonely, mournful Calvary, may by eloquence and fervid words be told, until the Rabbi with the Talmud, the Mohammedan with his Koran, the Buddhist with his Bedegat, and the Hindoo with his Vesta and Zendavesta, come trooping up, and place the volumes of their creeds in one mighty pile; Faith may apply the torch, and the curling smoke, wreathing in fantastic shapes to heaven, proclaim to the world the triumphs of Christianity and the dawning of a brighter day.

NOT HIS CLASS.

But Justice John is not in this class. His library consists of Judge Flournoy's revision of Mayo's Guide, the city ordinances, and a thumb-worn copy of the Code of Virginia. Yet who can say he does not do good? Who can know but some of his arrows, tipped with wholesome advice and shot at random, have found lodgment, perhaps, where the archer little meant, yet where its work was accomplished?

He may not make a very noticeable division of the goats and sheep, because he has a tough gang to deal with, but one thing is sure—he will have the herd so well rounded up when the day comes that it will be no trouble to find out where his constituents belong.

Justice John had a few colored men before him yesterday morning, whom he was questioning about a matter which he was not quite ready to try. He was not just certain that any of the four men were any too scrupulous about dallying a trifle with the truth, so he was speaking rather plainly upon the subject when one of them exclaimed:

"You knows me, Mr. Crutchfield; I'm gwine to tell mo' truf 'bout dis thing den eny nigger in dis State."

This seemed to put the next man on his mettle, and he 'lowed as how he was gwine to tell more truf den anybody in dis whole country.

"Fore de lawd," chimed the third, "you done hear dat nigger, Mr. Crutchfield? He ain gwine tell you de truf; I gwine ter tell you nuthin' but de truff—mo' truff den any nigger in dis whole world."

Justice John saw that they had raised the limit on him from the State to the whole world, and he felt sorry for the ante-man, but he turned to the fourth old darkey and said: "How about that, Jeff?"

"I dean no nuthin' 'bout all de niggers in dis State, Mr. Crutchfield," he said, "nur in dis country, nur in de whole world, but I knows dis, I'se gwine tell you mo' truf den any nigger in dis hur cote-house."

Even Sergeant Thomas joined in the laughter that followed this, and Jeff was taken as the witness in a case which will come up to-morrow.

THE GUILTY GERTRUDE.

Gertrude Quarles (colored) plead guilty to the charge of being drunk and abusing Lizzie Shields. Gertrude is about eighteen years of age, and is readily accorded the cake as being the best-looking girl in the neighborhood of the Chesapeake and Ohio depot.

Gertrude is, however, as bad as she is reputed to be good-looking, and when she manages to get a comfortable and complete supply of the "coffin varnish" they call whisky in that neighborhood, she makes night hideous and says some very uncomplimentary things about her girl friends.

"Why do you drink so much?" asked Justice John.

"'Cause I always gits so dry," tersely replied the wicked Gertrude.

"Yes, and you will drown yourself some of these days. Fine you $2.50," said Justice John. Then, seemingly to justify his last remarks, he said:

"So Noah, when he anchor'd safe on
The mountain's top, his lofty haven,
And all the passengers he bore
Were on the new world set ashore,
He made it next his chief design
To plant and propogate a vine.
Which since has overwhelm'd and drown'd
Far greater numbers, on dry ground,
Of wretched mankind, one by one,
Than all the flood before had done."

Gertrude pranced off to the pen, as she was a little short of funds after her entangling alliance with "night-caps" and "eye-openers," but some acquaintance went her bail for a couple of days, and she started off to locate a few of her prosperous friends.

The case of Budd Morgan, who is charged with driving to death a horse belonging to James Sweeney, had been set for yesterday, but was continued until May 8th.

ANCESTRAL PRIDE.

There is something grand in a long line of ancestry, if it happens to start right, but even then we know—

"The sap which at the root is bred
In trees, through all the boughs is spread,
But virtues which in parents shine,
Make not like progress through the line."

Still, it is a grand thing to have noble ancestors, and in these times when we are getting reasonably far away from the departed dead, it is quite the thing to hunt up a few fossils in Washington or New York who keep a supply of "trunks" on hand and can fit any "branches" into it that will pay, just about as we reserve the old holders for next year's Christmas-tree.

These old men keep records, as very old people do, curiously carved candlesticks, and at a moment's notice can drop any colored wax candle that is desired into it, and cast over a certain social element any describable shade of ancestry that may be duly bargained for.

It is a grand thing to have a long line of ancestry, for even some people that Justice John knows make a business of having ancestors, and a profitable business at that, and whenever they get out of a job or grow weary with the burden and heat of the day they just nestle up close under the family tree and wait for the lightning to hit it again.

Lucien Young! Lucien Young! called out the bailiff yesterday morning, and a decrepit old negro hobbled up before Justice John on a minor charge.

"What's your name?" asked Hissonner.

"Lu'shun, sah," was the laconic reply.

"What Lucien—who did you belong to?" asked Justice John.

"I gess disremembers, sah," politely responded the white-headed old man; "but I spose, sah, I belonged ter Marster Revolu'shun; I heerd folks talkin' mitey heap 'bout dem sons ob his dese days, an' I recin' sum ob dems what own'd me."

"All right, old man, you can go; I guess you must be all right," said Justice John.

"Yes, sah; yes, sah; thanke, thanke, sah. I'se all rite, sah," and the great spirit of the Revolution passed out upon the common sidewalks.

TO SAMUEL P. WADDILL, CLERK OF THE COUNTY COURT OF HENRICO COUNTY, VA.:

As provided by Acts of the General Assembly of Virginia, amending section 666 of the Code of Virginia of 1887, we hereby make application to purchase a LOT OR TRACT OF LAND, standing in the name of William Thompson, containing 82½ acres, adjoining Satterwhite, and purchased for the year 1884, on the 17th day of February, 1887, in the name of the Auditor of Public Accounts, for the benefit of the State of Virginia and county of Henrico, and am prepared to pay the amount for which it was knocked down to the Auditor, and the taxes, levies, penalties, costs, and charges for the subsequent years, and the costs incident to this application. Respectfully,

J. L. HENLEY,
S. L. HENLEY.

March 21, 1896.

I, Samuel P. Waddill, clerk of the County Court of Henrico, in the State of Virginia, do certify that the foregoing is a true copy of a paper filed in my said office on the 21st day of March, 1896.

Given under my hand, this 17th day of April, 1896.

A BRICK OR GRANITE HOUSE AT HOME PLACE NEARLY AS LOW AS A WOOD HOUSE COSTS YOU that is expensive to insure, to warm, to keep in repair, and never has a fixed value. Our building facilities we have doubled, and we seek by building fine, substantial houses, and without profit, as we do, and on such terms as to make them within the reach of all, and thereby enrich ourselves and you by keeping the standard of residences up to those of the city ten squares east of us, where a half square recently sold for $225 per front foot.

We sell lots from $11 to $36 per front foot, and every one of them are fancy home sites, for we have the modern conveniences; our car service, electric arc street lights, free United States mail-delivery, streets and sidewalks, midst grand parks and drives, are not surpassed in any part of the city. Then, the modest taxes we pay here are so much less than in the city that on a fine residence this item alone will quite abundantly supply your table.

We will furnish you house-plans and designs until you are perfectly satisfied free of charge, and build you a house on long credit, plain 6 per cent. interest, after you own or secure the payment for lot to put it on, either solid walls, or cased with brick or granite only. The cased house is the warmest, dryest house known; while costing slightly more than the solid walls, is well worth the difference to live in. CONSULT G. H. A. HALL, ON THE GROUND DAILY AFTER 4 P. RICHMOND RAILWAY AND ELECTRIC COMPANY.

Street-Car Transfers.

ADDITIONAL FACILITIES OFFERED TO THE TRAVELLING PUBLIC.

Commencing JANUARY 1, 1896, this company extended its transfer system to embrace all connecting lines of street railway in Richmond and Manchester. A passenger is allowed the privilege of transfer to any connecting line in either city and in any direction at junction points.

The payment of a five-cent fare entitles a passenger to only ONE TRANSFER TICKET, but additional transfers are allowed on the same ticket at any point printed thereon which does not return the passenger to the point of starting.

All the parks and suburban districts can be reached from any point in either city by payment of one fare.

It is a standing order of the company, for the convenience of transfer passengers, that cars shall wait at junction points for the arrival of car on connecting line if the approaching car is within the distance of one square. The travelling public is requested to advise the company of any infringement of this order. ap1
