

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation. Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of its kind ever produced, pleasing to the taste and acceptable to the stomach, prompt in its action and truly beneficial in its effects, prepared only from the most healthy and agreeable substances, its many excellent qualities commend it to all and have made it the most popular remedy known.

Syrup of Figs is for sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all leading druggists. Any reliable druggist who may not have it on hand will procure it promptly for any one who wishes to try it. Do not accept any substitute.

"German Syrup"

J. C. Davis, Rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, Eufaula, Ala.: "My son has been badly afflicted with a fearful and threatening cough for several months, and after trying several prescriptions from physicians which failed to relieve him, he has been perfectly restored by the use of two bottles of Bo-

An Episcopal scribe's German Syrup. I can recommend it without hesitation."

Chronic severe, deep-seated coughs like this are as severe tests as a remedy can be subjected to. It is for these long-standing cases that Boschee's German Syrup is made a specialty. Many others afflicted with this lad was, will do well to make a note of this.

J. F. Arnold, Montevideo, Minn., writes: I always use German Syrup for a Cold on the Lungs. I have never found an equal to it—far less a superior.

PRICKLY ASH BITTERS

One of the most important organs of the human body is the LIVER. When it fails to properly perform its functions the entire system becomes deranged. The BRAIN, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS, all refuse to perform their work. DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY DISEASE, etc., are the results, unless something is done to assist Nature in throwing off the impurities caused by the inaction of a TORPID LIVER. This assistance so necessary will be found in

Prickly Ash Bitters!

It acts directly on the LIVER, STOMACH and KIDNEYS, and by its mild and cathartic effect and general tonic qualities restores these organs to a sound, healthy condition, and cures all diseases arising from these causes. IT PURIFIES THE BLOOD, tones up the system, and restores perfect health. If your druggist does not keep it ask him to order it for you. Send 2c stamp for copy of "THE HORSE TRAINER," published by us.

"CALICO CHARLIE."

The Dubious Prospect Before Mr. Win-

dom's Successor. The appointment of Hon. Charles Foster, of Ohio, as secretary of the treasury, was a colorless one, and if it were designed to have any significance, Mr. Foster himself has taken care to deprive it of any meaning by announcing in advance of his departure for Washington that he is "in accord with the policy of the administration." As ambiguous utterances, silence when speech was demanded, and forgetfulness of unequivocal statements when made, have characterized the "policy of the administration," Mr. Foster has put himself on ground that cannot be supported or assailed because his position is masked.

In his personality and factional standing in his party in his own state, Mr. Foster resembles Warner Miller more closely than any republican we have in mind. Since the ascendancy of Foraker, which was brought to an end only a year ago, Mr. Foster has been an eclipsed Ohio politician. Last year, to be sure, he was nominated for congress and the canvass which he conducted was a much more remarkable one than that which Maj. McKinley succeeded in making the center of attraction in Ohio. But in spite of this momentary burst into prominence Foster is as essentially a political "back number" as is Warner Miller. Probably that was why President Harrison chose him. Mr. Foster, by no effort of the imagination, can be regarded as a possible candidate for the republican nomination for president in 1892.

The new secretary of the treasury will enter upon the discharge of his duties under the most embarrassing conditions. He becomes part of an administration which has just been condemned by the people in tones of more positive emphasis than they have used before in many years. Furthermore, the fiscal policy of the administration has been the chief cause of popular complaint, and it is that policy which Mr. Foster will be forced to defend. He goes into office as a congress, controlled by his party, is about to expire—a congress more thoroughly obnoxious to the American people than any which has assembled since the close of the war, and his first recommendations will be addressed to a congress entirely out of sympathy with those views which Mr. Harrison will force upon his secretary of the treasury. His "duty" to his party will compel him to present doctored statements of the country's receipts and expenditures; it will force him to recommend schemes to benefit individuals at the expense of the country, and Harrison himself will demand that the patronage of his great department be used to promote the re-nomination of a president who enjoys a smaller degree of popularity than any president whom this generation recalls.

The prospect before Hon. Charles Foster is thus a dubious one. Virtually a political bankrupt, he is summoned to a task which calls for a larger amount of political capital and a larger amount of brains than any republican in sight seems to command. For the next two years business will almost turn upon his word, and, for the general welfare, it is to be trusted that he will prove equal to the position. But he is merely a politician of the Warner Miller brand, with the additional Ohio faculty of always keeping in office.—Albany Argus.

A DANGEROUS METHOD.

Effect of the McKinley Bill Upon the Powers of the President.

The attempt of the McKinley bill is to vest the president with absolute power in treaty-making, freeing him from the constitutional restriction under which a treaty negotiated by the executive department must have the advice and consent of the senate before it has any validity as law.

This attempt is the more dangerous because of the skill with which it is made. The method of treaty-making which has thus far prevailed, which is the only method contemplated or authorized by the constitution, involves the entering into a formal contract between the powers, which on the part of the United States must be approved by the senate after it has been drawn. Were it otherwise, an act of Mexico, of Brazil, of Guatemala, of the Cannibal Islands, could be given the effect of "the highest law of the land" over the United States by the mere consent of the president.

This is exactly what is now being attempted. Under the plan of the McKinley bill the arrangements are made between the powers as in case of a treaty, except that the senate is ruled out. The act of a foreign government has only to be confirmed by the proclamation of the president of the United States to have the force of a treaty binding the United States.

This, at least, is what has been attempted. No one in the least familiar with our system of government will believe, however, that the congress has the shadow of authority to delegate to the executive department power either to make laws or to suspend their operation. Under the constitution special privileges to one country over another can only be granted by treaty, and every such treaty must be approved by the senate before it has any force.

Congress, if it pleases, can pass an act saying that hereafter any law of the United States may be suspended by the proclamation of the president, and that the presidential proclamation ratifying the act of a foreign country shall have the effect of a treaty binding the United States. This theory is embodied in the clause of the McKinley bill under discussion, but it has no force as law, because the constitution of the United States cannot be altered or set aside by mere act of congress. When the president issues his proclamation pretending to suspend a law of the United States and purporting to give the enactment of a foreign power the force of law over the United States his act is not only without constitutional warrant, but is in direct, plain and open transgression of express constitutional limitations. It has, therefore, nothing of the validity of law, though it may have the practical effects of it through the persistence of the executive department in an unlawful course.—St. Louis Republic.

REPUBLICANS IN TROUBLE.

Obligations Incurred by Their Platform of 1888.

We believe the democratic party will be found, after a thorough discussion, to be in substantial agreement with Mr. Cleveland in this matter, as it was when he was in office and when the 1888 platform was adopted. The republican party, not the democratic, is the parent of the silver heresy, and we see no reason for fearing that the people will be permitted to forget that fact. In the republican platform of 1888 these memorable words occur: "The republican party is in favor of the use of both gold and silver as money, and condemns the policy of the democratic administration in its efforts to demote silver."

That was a bid for the vote of the silver ring and silver states, and the bid was accepted. The republicans are being called upon to redeem their pledge, and are in trouble over it. If they live up to their promise they will lose the eastern states. If they do not, they will unquestionably suffer in the west. But for the democracy there need be no embarrassment. A party that has incurred no improper obligation can well afford to stand straight on its record when its adversary is being torn by conflicting and irreconcilable elements. Looked at as a matter of political expediency, the democratic position, to which Mr. Cleveland urges his party to adhere, is one of ideal strength. But the people, it is suggested, may be deceived, and then what? Well, first of all, it is the duty of democrats to assume that the people will not be deceived, and secondly to be true to their own principles even if for a time deception prospers.—Brooklyn Citizen.

NOTES FOR POLITICIANS.

Tin deposits have been discovered in Mexico. In the strictest confidence, now, upon your cross-cross, so-help-you-Peter honor, the discovery is due entirely to the wisdom and beneficence of William McKinley, Jr.—Chicago Times.

The republican papers treat the mugwumps as if they had been unfaithful to their party and as if Mr. Cleveland was the one correspondent to whom they all collectively make love. The mugwumps, however, claim to belong to no party and have as much right to love Mr. Cleveland as anybody else.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Mr. Harrison—What's this "reciprocity" idea of yours, Jim? I don't exactly catch on to it.

Mr. Blaine—I'll give you an illustration. I worked for you in '88, now you turn in and work for me in '92. That's reciprocity.

Mr. Harrison—Humph! I don't think much of that scheme.—Life.

The anxiety of the republicans to "relieve the supreme court" is stimulated by the reflection that the relief contemplated will create eighteen fat offices for Mr. Harrison to distribute among his partisans, chiefly congressmen who have been repudiated by the people for their zeal in the service of the monopolists.—N. Y. World.

The democracy of the country accept with enthusiasm Grover Cleveland's leadership, not because of his personality, although he has many qualities that endear him to men of character and intelligence, but because he represents in his own person, as no other American does, the aspirations of the people to greater liberty and better government.—Evansville (Ind.) Courier.

The republicanism of the administration—excepting, of course, that exemplified by the secretary of state—is not the sort which commends itself to the masses of the party. There is nothing robust or inspiring in it. It calls up no recollection of preceding administrations save by way of contrast, and at the expense of the present regime. No republican shouts when the name of the head of the government is mentioned. The name of no cabinet official—always with the exception referred to—excites any enthusiasm. This is bad for the party. It is also without precedent. The administration needs a tonic and needs it "bad."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.).

Mr. Quay's Denial.

Mr. Quay and his friends cannot suppose that his defense in the senate will of itself avail to exonerate him. He makes an explicit denial and explanation. But all that he says he could as readily have said long ago, when the charges were made. The delay admits of no favorable interpretation. He cites Alexander Hamilton, but Hamilton did not allow years to pass before his complete explanation. He answered promptly and conclusively, and at a cost inconceivably painful, disposed of factually and forever of the charges against his official honesty. The value of Mr. Quay's defense depends wholly upon his word. It is a simple denial. But his previous course and long delay and the method of his defense have not encouraged confidence in his simple statement. When charges so very grave and circumstantial are made against a public man he cannot set them aside by silence, or by calling them mud-fingering. He can dispose of them only by a statement so fortified by acknowledged fact and affidavit that no doubt remains, or by a summary suit for libel, which will force the publication and establishment of the facts.—Harper's Weekly.

Jug-Handle Reciprocity.

Mr. Blaine's jug-handle reciprocity does not seem to work as well as he anticipated. There was a great shout of triumph among the Blaine organs when the treaty, so called, with Brazil was announced. It turns out that the rejoicing was very premature, Brazil not having yet agreed to the proposed plan. The government of the new republic is friendly enough in the matter, but the merchants of Rio, Bahia and Pernambuco are not quite so ready to break off their friendly and profitable commercial relations with Europe. They have most emphatically protested against the ratification of the treaty. They probably know, as everybody else knows, that they can always sell their coffee to us for cash, in spite of Mr. Harrison and the foolish Aldrich provision of our beautiful tariff. They also know that they can buy what they want cheaper from Europe than they can from us, while our producers are handicapped by a most oppressive tariff. The Blaine trumpet was sounded a little too soon.—Albany Argus.

It is a Horrid Nuisance

To be nervous. Starting at the slightest sound, uneasiness by day and fitful slumber by night, unreasonable apprehensions, odd fancies, constant restlessness—these are among its diabolical symptoms.
