REIGN OF TERROR IN FAIR CUMBERLAND COUNTY, N. J.

Forty Lashes for Miss Runnells—Experience of a Herald Correspondent in Search of Truth.

[New York Herald.]

The people of Bridgeton, N. J., were more excited yesterday than at any time during the past six weeks, or since Mr. William Bowen received his notice from the White Caps, who have taken upon themselves the purification of the Augean stables of this section of Cumberland county.

They were surprised to read in Sunday's Herald an account of the local sensation, for they believed that there was not a man among the twelve thousand inhabitants who had the temerity either to speak disparagingly of the White Caps or to disclose their recent operations. The local press of the place has been very chary of its criticisms of the mysterious band, and has merely given in the form of news paragraphs mention of the untoward events which have shaken this fair settlement to its centre and have filled the souls of women and children with a paralyzing dread of an unknown and unseen foe.

The whipping of Miss Runnells, mentioned in the Sunday Herald, was a tragic affair; nevertheless it was impossible almost to obtain a particle of information concerning the details of the episode. I scratched an acquaintance with every man of any note in the place, and visited those who should have known all about it. They invariably turned the cold shoulder upon me and as determinedly as possible refused to speak upon the subject. Closely pressed for the reason of this reticence, they gave me to understand that it was not healthy for a man to divulge what he might know concerning the White Caps, or to venture upon a statement touching their acts which might be traced back to the communicator.

FORTY LASHES WITH WHIPS.

I travelled over many miles of country roads in the storm in quest of a clew on Sunday, but I returned to the Cumberland House as empty as I went. Even the driver of the vehicle that bore me from place to place was, for a wonder, silent as the petrified fossil near Cumberland dam on the subject of the White Caps. On my return to town, however, I was more fortunate in my search, as I met a gentleman in the hotel who knew a great deal about the whipping of Miss Runnells and gave me some of the details.

He said: "You will understand that it is not safe for me to converse with you on this topic. I am a resident here, and although I have not thus far received any notices from the mysterious brotherhood that have kept this town in terror, I would fall under their displeasure were it known that I had been foolhardy enough to impart to the New York Herald the facts that I am about to give to you now. The White Caps are not low ruffians, as some people suppose. Of this I am convinced. On the contrary, I firmly believe that while their executioners may be rugged, ill-bred, and low-born men, the council and managers are men of rank, property, and standing in this community, who have resolved to frighten into propriety or drive out of the county scamps, unprincipled bachelors, drinking men, and gamesters. The Law-and-Order leaders are unquestionably at the bottom of the movement, and try in secret those against whom charges are preferred by reputable citizens. Conviction results in the sending of warnings to the condemned, which, if disregarded, is followed by the infliction of the penalty prescribed. It is executed, as in the case of Miss Runnells, by rough, hard men, disguised in white masks and caps.

"This poor girl had incurred the displeasure of the Law- and-Order people by reason of certain acts which they considered had been satisfactorily proven against her. She was admonished to stay at home nights or leave Bridgeton. But she disregarded the admonition, and was found over the bridge, up Commerce street, late Monday night by those who had been watching for her. There were, she said, ten white men and three negroes in the party when she met them. They seized her and held her while two of the gang beat her over the shoulders with ordinary cart whips. They gave her forty lashes, she said, but I scarcely believe this, for so many must have almost killed her. Still she suffered dreadfully and her clothes were torn to shreds. It is not true that she was stripped of her dress. She was beaten across the shoulders and was otherwise roughly handled and ordered to leave Bridgeton at once or stand the consequences, which would certainly be more dangerous, probably fatal to her. She obeyed."

STRANGE PROCEEDINGS.

My informant went on to state that in his judgment the troubles had only begun, and that they would certainly culminate in some great tragedy from one side or other. I discovered that this was the general impression, and I also found that Bridgeton was like a leagured city or one of the towns in Spain under the Spanish Inquisition. Men stood around the drugstore in the Main street on Sunday whispering. Few of them spoke much. All of them eyed me and knew that I had come to Bridgeton on the White Caps' business.

I was informed by a member of the swell drinking and gaming club that the purport of my dispatch to the Herald on Saturday night was known to them and that it freed me from the suspicion of being a detective in the employ of the White Caps to ferret out violations of the local-option law. "This," said a man in the hotel, "saved you from the anger of the men against whom the shafts and malice of the White Caps have been directed. Had you been other than what you are your visit to Bridgeton would have cost you more than travel and money."

I confess I did not feel comforted by this avowal. On the contrary it dawned upon me that I was between the horns of a dilemma, in danger of being impaled on either. The good-will of the condemned insured me the ill-will of the White Caps, and vice versa. My sense of security was further increased by unannounced visits to my room, on the second floor of the Cumberland House, from strange men, who not only knew where I was located, but also came up-stairs in this, the best hotel in the place, without by your leave or let or hindrance. No one stopped them. Indeed, I learned afterward that no one even questioned their right to do so. My first visitor was a Mr. Kane. He stepped in and invited me without any preliminary circumlocution to accompany him to a secret-club room around the corner, where some of the "best of the boys" were waiting to show me the greatest place in town. He assured me, much to my surprise, that everything was all right, as he and they were aware of my long dispatch to the Herald and its contents. I declined the invitation unless it was to be attended by any disclosures concerning the White Caps, but as he assured me in the most pressing manner that it was purely social in its object I did not go. This displeased him, and he left in a sort of dissatisfied frame of mind.

He had not been gone over half an hour when two other gentlemen abruptly opened my bed-room door, unannounced, and pressed me to go with them to the club. One was Justice Riley, the other was Mr. Bowen, an old Australian miner, who took special pains to inform me that he was against the White Caps, and that he had received a warning from them for which he did not care a fig. "I have been in tougher places than Bridgeton," said he, "and I guess the White Caps won't scare me." As these gentlemen were anxious to give me a "good time" at the club, and had no information to impart, I failed to respond, and they left with something of chagrin in their manner.

THE TRUE INWARDNESS.

Now let it be understood that these men all knew the contents of my previous night's message to the Herald. How they got it I cannot tell. There was only one operator in the place. They even told me the number of words I had sent and I found out afterwards that other persons who had not received warnings from the White Caps, but who were acknowledged to be members of the Law and Order Society, were likewise familiar with the extent and details of my message to the Herald on Saturday night. I mention these facts to show the condition of things at Bridgeton at this moment.

The streets were absolutely deserted on Sunday. I drove over and through bustling for news and seldom encountered an individual in half a mile. Even small boys were indoors. Only the churches were attended in the morning. Even here the prevalent distrust and suspicion were most noticeable. Men merely nodded to each other as they went by. There were no groups of friends or acquaintances talking on the sidewalks. Everybody was in a hurry home and taciturnity reigned.

I found on every hand that the White Caps were men of means. Perhaps it were more proper to say that I drew the inference from the following facts: There are twelve thousand people in this thriving place, with only three policemen to keep order. All places of amusement for young men are closed up by law. Even the Opera-House proprietor has received a notice to go home early and to eschew his light companions and entertainments. There are no liquor stores licensed, no clubs or billiard-rooms permitted, and there are hundreds of young single men who are neither members of the church nor holy friars. They will not stay indoors o' nights and they have been given to natural impulses of flirtation and have offended the elders and saints by becoming factors of scandal and disturbers of domestic peace. The elders and saints have taken advantage of the new craze of the White Caps to start a vigilance committee for the sole purpose of restraining the exhuberance of youth and to check the thirst of roysterers for beverages which breed humors in the blood and distempers in the morale of the community. The White Caps are the law and order men arrayed against the jovial blades of Bridgeton.

SENTENCED TO DEATH.

Things have come to a pretty pass when men can be tried by proxy in secret and sentenced to be taken forth and flogged, as is the case with nearly fifty men of the place. It is time something were done by the State authorities when correspondents dispatches are no longer secure from the prying eyes of the belligerents; when a newspaper-man can be ordered out of town, told to hold his tongue and divulge nothing, and when a police officer can be warned to quit the force and does so rather than be cowhided at night on his post.

Here's a how d'ye do! Two men are sentenced to death, and they believe that there is more than paper and ink in the menace. Messrs. Simpson and Hicks have been told that they must quit the place or suffer death, and Mr Baker, a farmer, who lives on the outskirts of the town, is compelled to remain at home after dark or be flogged by the White Caps and their fifteen executioners. Even I was made to feel on Sunday that I would be far safer miles away, because the rivals in Bridgeton did not want their affairs pried into by the press. They prefer to settle them according to their own methods, which are both violent and murderous.

BURLINGTON COUNTY ALSO INFESTED.

John Murphy, Gersham Craft, John Chance, and Caleb Bennett, all residents of Columbus, Burlington county, on New-Year's day received letters from alleged White Caps, notifying them that on the repetition of certain offences they would be summarily dealt with. Since these letters were received Murphy has been notified that he must leave the place, and he has left. John Chance, who is a farmer, is also reported to have left the place.

Bennett, who is proprietor of a small saloon, states that he will shoot the first member of the band who enters his saloon to interfere with him. The band is said to be composed of young men, most of whom are said to be known, and they will be arrested if they attempt any violence.

The Richmond Hotels.

RICHMOND, VA., January 8, 1889.

To the Editor of the Dispatch:

Is it true, as assiduously advertised and carped upon by many prominent citizens, that Richmond is deficient in hotel accommodations? Was not this answered in the negative during the Exposition, when the thousands of strangers were comfortably accommodated?

It's true we have no "Fifth-Avenue" nor yet a "Thurber's Mammoth Grocery House." In all candor isn't there as much reason to advertise that Richmond needs a first-class grocery and drive away this trade to New York? We have no Ponce de Leon nor a Wannamaker's emporium, but is this an excuse for daily advertising to the world, thus offering inducements to our people to send their money to Philadelphia? We have no Delmonico's, nor boast of a world-famed paper-box factory. But surely this is no excuse for our drawing invidious comparisons, thereby inviting our home trade to go North upon the theory one can do better where the largest works can be found. Whilst we cannot boast of a "Palmer," 'tis equally true we have no Field, Lighter & Co., nor Lorrillard Brothers. Still, it isn't incumbent upon us to depreciate our excellent tobacco and dry goods houses by constantly drawing comparisons. It's true we have no "Grand Pacific," nor have we in our Tredegar works a counterpart of the Carnegie rolling-mills. But would it become Richmond, from a business point of view, to say nothing of honesty and fair dealing, to be constantly calling the public's attention to the inferiority of our home works. In conclusion, we have none of the famous hotels mentioned. We say—and we say it without fear of contradiction—Richmond hotel accommodations are as fully abreast of the times as are those of any line of business conducted in this city. Then why should gentlemen insist upon placing this one line of business at such disadvantage as to drive away thousands of its legitimate trade, thus doing their city untold injury? If there are capitalists who think it advisable to make Virginia's metropolitan city a "sorter" of "winter-summer pleasure resort," and believe that such a scheme will pay, let them put up the cash and build the hotel.

But the press and business-men should not spend sleepless nights decrying a particular line of business which is much more advanced than their own, and whose business, if half as much bad been so unjustly and unkindly said against it, would have long since been driven away. As a frequenter of hotels in and out of the State I can truthfully say in no city the size of Richmond can be found a superior hotel to the chief hotel here. In fact, its upholstery, corps of assistants, and servants evidence extravagance that deserves better treatment at the hands of the business-men in whose interest a liberal proprietor yearly expends a large proportion of his legitimate profits that he may offset the unseemly war raised to his detriment; there being no question that northern people are deterred from stopping in the city owing to the manner the citizens are defaming their hotels, as it would seem not to be the proper thing for them to do.

Count Herbert Bismarck is particularly popular among the young officers of Berlin, and his bachelor dinners and other entertainments are much sought after.

The Code of Virginia provides that if any person shall accept any office of honor, profit, or trust under the Government of the United States, or any emolument whatever, the acceptance shall ipso facto vacate any office he holds under the government of this Commonwealth, or under any county, city, or town thereof.

COLUMBIAN GROVE, VA., Jan. 5, 1889.

To the Editor of the Dispatch:

Will you please inform me through the columns of the Dispatch how many nails there are in a pound each of 4-, 6-, 8-, 10-, and 12-pennys?

This information will be useful to others as well as to me.

Yours truly, THOMAS BAGLEY.

Theoretically one thousand 4, 6, or 8d. nails ought to weigh respectively 4, 6, and 8 pounds. But whether this is now the fact or not, we cannot say. Our correspondent can easily test the matter.

The Agonies of Lumbago.

W. S. Phillips, East River National Bank, New York, writes:

"It gives me great pleasure to add my testimony in favor of your valuable Plasters. Last October I had a very severe attack of lumbago and suffered untold agony; could not turn in bed or get in any position without assistance, and with pains almost unbearable. The folks suggested Allcock's Porous Plasters. As soon as possible I had one applied to the small of my back, and to my great surprise I experienced almost instant relief; I continued wearing it until entirely cured, and am happy to say that I have not had the slightest symptoms of lumbago since. They are a wonderful and valuable Plaster for lumbago, and I take much pleasure in recommending them."

TOOK LAUDANUM.

A NORFOLK UNFORTUNATE FOUND DEAD IN HER BED.

The White Republicans of Norfolk and Mahone—Portsmouth Republicans—The Navy-Yard—Notes.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

NORFOLK, January 9, 1889.

This morning the dead body of Miss Mary A. Dulan, a young girl about eighteen years of age and quite pretty, was found in her bed in a room she occupied in a house on Avon street, in which she was a regular inmate. An empty laudanum bottle on her dressing-case revealed the fact that she had committed suicide by poison. She was a buoyant-spirited girl, and no cause can be assigned for the rash act, yet it is believed that remorse at the shameful life she was leading tempted her to her death. She was a native of Norfolk. Dr. E. V. Newton, city coroner, held the usual inquest.

The white Republicans of Norfolk of the Mahone stripe have met and recommended General Mahone to President-elect Harrison for a Cabinet appointment. It is thought the white Republicans of Portsmouth will meet and recommend somebody else to President Harrison, probably Hon. John S. Wise.

The Republicans seem to be already "getting their hooks in" at the navy-yard, although they have yet three months to wait, in the regular course of things, before they can legitimately take possession of the spoils. The local Democrats are anything but pleased with this state of things, and will doubtless enter formal protest, but their efforts will hardly amount to anything, as their period of party control is rapidly drawing to a close, and the Republican heads of departments in the yard will take all the advantage they can. The fact is, all during the Democratic Administration the naval officers at the head of the working departments of the yard have been Republicans, and not less than fifty local Republicans have kept places in the yard to the exclusion of good Democrats.

A large number of workmen have arrived here from Baltimore to work for house-building contractors who have extensive building operations in the Brambleton section of the city. As the new ward is the only busy field for housebuilding just now the unemployed mechanics in the city are indignant that the contractors have gone abroad for labor. It is presumed that the imported mechanics work for lower wages. One enterprising property-holder of Brambleton erected thirty-three buildings in that ward last year, and no portion of the city ever extended its improvements half so rapidly.

Captain C. W. Jester, of the steamer Alpha, is seriously ill at St. Vincent's Hospital.

Captain Kelley, of the Old Dominion steamship Guyandotte, who was suspended by the inspectors yesterday, has received three months' leave from the company, and will go to Florida for his health.

Rev. J. W. Bincoe, of Richmond, is in this section in the interest of the Colportage Board, of which he was elected general agent at the late session of the Virginia Conference.

Mr. H. O. Williams, of Richmond, State secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, is in Portsmouth working up the finances of that institution.

Against the Sugar Trust.

[By telegraph to the Dispatch.]

NEW YORK, January 9.—Judge Barrett, in the Supreme Court circuit to-day, rendered a decision in favor of the Attorney-General and against the sugar trust. The suit was brought by the people of the State of New York against the North River Sugar Refining Company by Attorney-General Tabor to forfeit the charter of the North River Refining Company, of this city, on the ground that it had virtually passed out of existence by selling out all of its stock to the sugar-trust combination and closing up its works.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF THE VALUABLE FARM KNOWN AS "LANDORA," SITUATED IN CAROLINE COUNTY, THREE MILES FROM HEWLETT'S STATION, ON CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO RAILWAY, AND FORTY MILES FROM RICHMOND, AT CAROLINE COUNTY COURTHOUSE.—In execution of a deed of trust bearing date on the 23d day of December, 1882, to R. A. McCurdy and W. C. Moncure, trustees, and duly recorded in Caroline County Court, Deed-Book 39, page 394, the undersigned as surviving trustee, being required so to do by the holder of a bond thereby secured, default having been made in the payment thereof, will offer for sale on at 12 o'clock M., at Caroline Courthouse (that being court-day), the PROPERTY conveyed by said deed. "Landora" contains 678 ACRES, more or less, and has a front of one and a half miles on the North Anna river, and about two thirds in cultivation; 100 acres of excellent creek and river bottom and about sixty acres of original growth, and about 160 acres in second growth pines. It is one of the best watered places in the State. The improvements are six-room dwelling, frame, kitchen, quarters, tobacco-barns, &c.

The farm can be readily sub-divided to advantage, and is well adapted to all crops in this section. Good neighborhood, schools, mills, churches, &c.

TERMS: Cash as to cost and expenses of sale and to pay off a bond of $359.50, with interest thereon from 23d December, 1883, and as well as all taxes due, if any. Balance as may be announced at sale. H. A. MCCURDY, Surviving Trustee.
