FAUQUIER'S TRAGEDY.

THE DETAILS OF THE TURNER SHOOTING CASE.

The Testimony Before the Coroner's Jury—The Evidence of One of the Principals.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

WARRENTON, VA., June 11, 1889.

At the Coroner's inquest yesterday in the case of the killing of Robert Turner by his cousin and brother-in-law, E. P. Turner, the verdict of the jury was voluntary manslaughter. E. T. C. Turner, a brother of the deceased, gave the following testimony regarding this most unhappy affair, which occurred at The Plains, this county, last Sunday:

My brother and myself went to my brother-in-law's house with the purpose of giving him a good, plain talking, without the intention of striking him if his conduct was at all reasonable. We knocked at his door, and the colored boy appeared in the hall above and said he was in and would be down shortly. After some fifteen or twenty minutes he came down and met us at the door. He offered us his hand. My brother said: "Edward, excuse us a minute. What is this we hear of your beating Mary?" He said, "That is a G— d—lie." With that I struck him in the face and over the head several times. Then (he not offering to resist) I held him a minute and told him I thought him a coward and contemptible puppy, and he called me like names, and said: "This is your way of fighting, is it?" I think he said I was a d— coward, and I gave him more blows, and still he did not resist. He said: "This is not my way of fighting. Let me go and get two pistols; you take one and I one and fight like gentlemen fight." I said, "No; I don't want to fight that way. I don't want to kill you or to be killed, but want to let you know that this bad treatment of our sister has to be stopped." More names from him, (d— coward, cowardly dog, &c.,) and more blows from me. I held him in a bent-over position and kicked him once in the stomach. He said: "This is your way, is it? This is your way, is it? Go ahead as much as you want." Before this my brother said, "Don't kick him." He proposed again to get two pistols, to which I objected, and more words followed. I called him a s— of a b—h. I struck him another blow which I think more severe than any before; it staggered him and he almost fell to the floor. My brother said "That will do; that will do." I think I struck him two more lighter blows, and said, "Now, sir; don't let us hear any more of your bad conduct. If we do there will be more trouble (or worse trouble). He said, "Do you think I am done with this, sir? Do you think I will let it drop here? We must settle this with pistols." I said, "I will not fight you with pistols, nor will I fight any man with pistols. I do not want to kill you." He said, "My way is with pistols, as gentlemen ought to fight." I said, "I have never heard of any of your fights with pistols; I have heard of your challenges and the next hour of your apologies."

He asked me what challenges and what apologies had I heard—specify. I did not specify, but told him to let us hear no more of his bad conduct, and we left the porch and walked towards our horses. We had gotten about fifty or seventy-five yards down in the field in front of the yard when we heard him calling after us and pursuing in a brisk walk, a pistol in each hand, and I can't be positive what he said, as he talks low, but think it was the like of this: "Hold on there, hold on there. This thing cannot stop here." We walked on, sixeked our pace somewhat, he coming faster than we were going, getting nearer and nearer. I said to my brother Robert, who had the pistol in his pocket, or his clothes: "We had better right about and forbid his coming nearer," which we did, but which he did not regard. My brother drew his pistol, and he (Edward P. Turner) said something, I can't be positive what, but it sounded like this: "Ah! you have one, have you?" He continued to approach. When my brother raised and levelled his pistol at him he stopped and levelled his at my brother. They both fired. I cannot say which fired first—very little difference—and then they both repeated. I think it was the second shot that killed my brother. I then took the pistol from my brother's hand, and he (Edward Turner) and I shot at each other until all my balls were gone. I said to him, "I have no more shots," which I don't think he heard, and he fired again. I said again, "I have no more shots." Then he lowered his pistol and came towards us. As soon as the shooting ceased I stooped down, put my hand upon my brother, and called his name. He did not answer. By that time Edward had gotten to my side. He offered me his pistol and said, "Kill me; I do not want to live." I said, "I do not want to kill you." He insisting, I said, "I do not want to kill you; you can kill yourself if you want."

E. P. Turner is in a critical condition from his wounds and may die. He is in the hands of an officer, and cannot be moved. He is a prominent member of the Democratic Executive Committee of this county, and was offered a consulship by Secretary Bayard.

THE EASTERN SHORE.

A Lady Badly Beaten—The Johnstown Sufferers.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

ONANCOCK, VA., June 10, 1889.

The neighborhood around Hollies church, in the lower part of Accomack, is considerably stirred up over an assault made by Mrs. Lillie Stevens on Mrs. John Henry Mears. Mrs. Mears thought her husband was too attentive to Mrs. Stevens and used some rather uncomplimentary language about her to some of her neighbors. This came to the ears of Mrs. Stevens, who determined to take her revenge out on the woman who dared to assail her character. She accordingly armed herself with a stout blackgum and took her stand at a place where she knew Mrs. Mears would soon pass. When Mrs. Mears came up Mrs. Stevens knocked her down and beat her unmercifully about the face and body. Had not a man luckily come along and stop Mrs. Stevens she would probably have dangerously if not fatally injured her victim. Mrs. Stevens was arrested and carried before a justice of the peace, who sent her on to the grand jury. She was then taken to the court-house, where she gave bond to appear at the next grand jury term of the County Court. Mrs. Mears is known as a very exemplary woman, is well connected, and enjoys the esteem of all who know her. The affair has created no little sensation and bad feeling in the community where it occurred.

Rev. Mr. Burk, of the northern Methodist Episcopal church here, preached a fine sermon last night on the Johnstown disaster. A collection was taken up for the benefit of the sufferers and a handsome little sum was raised. If every church congregation in the country should be as liberal as this one the sufferers would not want for the necessaries and comforts of life.

Judge Garrison, of Accomack County Court, who has been confined to his home for more than a month, is reported to be slightly better to-day.

The weather to-day is the warmest of the season. KALLIAS.

The Virginia Female Institute Commencement.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

JUNE 12, 1889.

The commencement exercises at the Virginia Female Institute, Mrs. General J. E. B. Stuart, principal, will terminate this morning. The session has been a very fine one in every respect.

The Art School, under the continued instruction of Miss Little, made an exhibit which judges and critics say was the best ever made. It shows a growing interest in pupils, and illustrates the high degree of taste and culture to which the accomplished teacher has brought them.

Miss Stuart, of Wythe, had several portraits that were very much admired. Among them was one of her uncle, the late General J. E. B. Stuart. Miss Kate Duval had an excellent portrait of Rev. Dr. McBryde, of Lexington.

It is Mrs. Stuart's custom to deliver in person each certificate of distinction. This was done yesterday morning.

A Singular Accident.

[Special telegram to the Dispatch.]

NORFOLK, VA., June 12.—On Monday a circular saw, fifty-six inches in diameter, in the mill of R. R. Thomas, at Rayner, Isle of Wight county, while running at the rate of 650 revolutions and cutting up an oak log eighteen inches through, suddenly burst into fifteen pieces, scattering the fragments in every direction and wrecking the mill. One of the flying pieces struck Mr. Thomas on the right hip, inflicting a painful but not dangerous wound, and another struck him in the right breast.

Clearing Up the Burned District.

[By telegraph to the Dispatch.]

SEATTLE, W. T., June 12.—The work of clearing away the debris in the burned district began yesterday in earnest. All the contents of the vaults of the various banks have been found to be in perfect order.

The telegraph, telephone, and electric light wires are being rapidly replaced. The telephone system will be in operation in a few days, and the electric light in a few weeks. The water-works are already in operation. The railroad and steamboat transportation has hardly been interrupted by the conflagration, though considerable inconvenience has been experienced by both in landing passengers.

The business-houses are finding locations in tents and temporary structures, and schools have started up, and all the churches except the Trinity Episcopal and the Methodist Protestant had services as usual Sunday. The daily newspapers are all issuing as usual. Offers of aid continue to pour in together with much money and more provisions.

No statement of the losses can be made more accurate than that already given. The loss is placed at $15,000,000, and this, it is believed, will be found to be a good estimate. The contributions of cash now aggregate $368,004.

Non-Partisan.

[By telegraph to the Dispatch.]

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Civil-Service Commission has sent the following telegram to Nashville, Tenn., to be published in the newspapers there:

In view of the examination to be held at the Nashville post-office next Saturday the commission desires to announce that all the examinations held under its auspices are strictly non-partisan. All qualified persons are invited to apply, whether Democrats or Republicans. They will be examined, marked, and certified purely with reference to their capacity. Political considerations will be allowed no weight. The commission is determined to enforce the law and its spirit. The employees of the Government violating it will be most rigorously punished. CHARLES LYMAN, President;

THEODORE ROOSEVELT,
HUGH S. THOMPSON.

A letter containing views as those expressed in the above telegram has been mailed to Atlanta, Ga., where an examination similar to the one at Nashville will be held shortly.

[By telegraph to the Dispatch.]

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Lieutenant Carter, of the Engineer corps in charge of the harbor improvement at Savannah, has submitted a report on the charges brought against him through the press of that city by discharged employees that he has been having a corrupt understanding with his contractors, and that he has wasted the public funds. General Casey has referred the matter to the Secretary of War. Colonel R. P. Hughes, of the Inspector-General's department, has been ordered to Savannah, presumably to investigate the charges. He will stop at this city on his way south to receive instructions from the Inspector General and on his return will make his report.

Nine-tenths of the mineral water sold through Soda Fountains is artificial and injurious.
