Cotton-Gin Burned—A Hog-Thief Killed—Burned to Death—A Peculiar Accident.

[Special telegram to the Dispatch.]

RALEIGH, November 28.—The cottin-gin and storehouse on the plantation of H. C. Dockery in Richmond county has been burned. Loss $2,500.

The foot-ball match here to-day between Trinity and Wake-Forest College teams was very exciting. It was won by Trinity. Score 8 to 4.

It is rumored that Judge Gilmer, of the Superior Court, will resign about January.

W. C. Moore's livery-stable at Graham was burned with ten head of horses. Loss $3,000. No insurance.

Samuel Gardiner, of Montgomery county, was found dead in bed by his wife. The bursting of a blood-vessel was the cause of his death.

HOG-THIEF KILLED.

A negro was arrested at Springhope, Nash county, for hog-stealing. While under arrest he tried to escape. A white man, J. W. Valentine, fired at him and the load of shot entered the negro's head, killing him instantly. Valentine made his escape.

Fifty white emigrants left Monroe Tuesday night for Arkansas. A number of them had not decided what they would do after reaching their destination.

BURNED TO DEATH.

A seven-year-old daughter of John Russell, of Caswarrus county, was burned to death Sunday while playing too near the fire.

Two children of Gideon McFadden were killed at Leman's Springs, Moore county, yesterday, by a boiler explosion. They were very young.

A PECULIAR ACCIDENT.

A twelve-year-old boy was killed near Falkland, Pitt county, in a very peculiar manner. He was fastening a house from the inside, intending to make his exit through a window left open for that purpose. In getting out of the window the sash fell, catching his neck against the window, in which position he strangled to death.

Samuel C. White, ex-cashier of the defunct State National Bank, has secured 500 signatures to a petition for executive clemency. He has affidavits from many persons to the effect that Cross and not White forged the names to the notes, and that Cross so admits.

Thanksgiving-day was very quietly and pleasantly observed here. There were services at the various churches and collections were taken up for the four orphanages in the State. The city was also canvassed in aid of St. John's Hospital, a most worthy institution located here. The Odd-Fellows, inaugurating a new custom, attended church in a body. The Governor and the other State officers, save the Secretary of State, who is disabled, attended church. Governor Fowle has for years been a member of the congregation of the First Presbyterian church here.

THE BOYLE CASE.

There is a yet further postponement of argument on Boyle's appeal before the Supreme Court, so that it will not be made until week after next, as soon as the docket is cleared of appeals from the Twelfth district.

The Dismal Swamp canal and other property has passed into new hands. The people in that section hope this is not another bogus sale, as the first one was.

The Farmers' Alliance of Washington county has adopted resolutions pledging aid in the construction of a railway to Creswell, in that county.

THE OYSTER PIRATES.

The Governor is petitioned to use a police or military force in putting a stop to the depredations by people from other States upon the oyster-beds in this State. It is alleged that the counties are not enforcing the law. This is what your correspondent stated would very probably be the case. There is no power which will stop the robberies save the strong hand of the State, as the county authorities appear to have neither the desire nor the ability to enforce the law and fear armed resistance if they attempt to enforce. Upon petition by the people the Governor can use the strong hand. The next Legislature can enact a better law, and then the State can have an oyster police and an oyster navy—something it has needed these two years or more. It may be very frankly said that now the oyster-laws are violated with impunity—not only by Maryland and Virginia people, but by North Carolinians also. The latter are taking oysters from the natural beds and selling them in Virginia.

A SPECIAL ESCORT.

Governor Lee will have as a special military escort at the Sampson-county fair one of the finest companies in the State. People from a great scope of country will be there to see one of whom they have heard, for Fitz Lee's name is as familiar in North Carolina as in his own State. Mr. C. W. Macune, president of the National Farmers' Alliance, will be at the fair, as will also Colonel L. L. Polk, president of the Interstate Farmers' Association.

TURNED UP.

Two students at Wake-Forest College, who ran away a few days ago, have turned up in New York. One is the son of a well-known missionary now in Africa, and the other of a leading business-man. The matter has been kept quiet. The missionary's son had received only one demerit less than the number necessary to acquire his expulsion.

The cyclone last week in the eastern counties is said to have blown away entire fields of cotton.

NORTH STATE METHODISTS.

Fifty-Third Session of the Conference at Greensboro'.

[Special telegram to the Dispatch.]

RALEIGH, N. C., November 28.—The North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is holding its fifty-third session at Greensboro'—Bishop Hargrove presiding. Nearly all the ministers and one third of the lay delegates responded to the roll-call.

Four ministers have died during the past year—Rev. Dr. W. M. Robey and Revs. James W. Randall, J. J. Grigg, and T. S. Campbell.

To-day at noon the Conference adjourned for Thanksgiving services, and a collection was taken for the Oxford Orphan Asylum. Rev. Dr. Dixon, superintendent of the asylum, was requested to preach the sermon, but he being unwell the Conference requested Rev. Dr. J. D. Barbee, of Nashville, to preach in his stead.

Rev. Dr. Wilbur F. Tillett, dean of the Theological Faculty of Vanderbilt University, addressed the Conference on the subject of ministerial education. Bishop Holsey, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, addressed the Conference in behalf of Paine Institute.

Resolutions of thanks and good will to Bishop Holsey were adopted, and in response to his appeal a collection was taken to aid in the erection of new buildings at Paine Institute.

WELDON MATTERS.

The Cotton Crop—Petition for Commutation of Sentence.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

WELDON, N. C., Nov. 27, 1889.

The almost entire failure of the cotton crop in this section of the State will, it is feared, cause a great deal of suffering. Farmers are very despondent and the outlook is anything but encouraging. Farms which usually produce fifty or sixty bales of cotton will this year average about ten.

Stonewall Jackson, the condemned murderer now confined in the county jail of this county, will be hanged December 19th unless the Governor commutes his sentence. A petition is in circulation signed by the judge, jury, and solicitor asking for a commutation of sentence. While he is technically guilty of murder in the first degree there are extenuating circumstances which caused the petition to be circulated, and it is thought his sentence will be commuted to imprisonment for life. WEST VIRGINIA'S VENDETTA.

A Reliable Statement of the Murderous Affairs in Lincoln County.

A Charleston (W. Va.) special to the Baltimore Sun says: There has been a great deal said and printed in the eastern and western papers within the past few weeks about the Brumfield-Runyon vendetta on Hart's creek, Lincoln county, this State. Much of the stuff which has been sent out from various points is false, and it has done much injury to the good name of the State generally, and believing that the readers of the Sun desire to learn the facts of the trouble and what brought it on, a Sun correspondent interviewed a gentleman from Lincoln county who is quite well acquainted with the parties and circumstances which brought about the trouble. After denouncing the false and very sensational reports heretofore sent out he prefaced his interview by saying that the people of Lincoln county are law-abiding, and with the exception of some few family misunderstandings, no trouble of a serious nature has transpired in the county for years. In the Hart Creek settlement there are probably about one hundred residents, and not over fifteen people have at any time, on either side of the Brumfield-Runyon affair, carried arms to protect themselves, and no deed of violence has been committed since the attempted murder of little Al. Brumfield and wife some time since, except the catching and lynching of McCoy and Haley, who confessed that they had shot Brumfield and his wife with the intention of killing them, and that they were to get $500 for the murder.

The Brumfields compose a large number of families, who have been quite active in Democratic politics, and in their section they had much influence and virtually controlled the local election. The Runyons, Halls, Adkins, and Haleys also consist of a large number of the Hart-Creekers, and while some of them are Democrats others are Republicans, and owing to the political influence of the Brumfields the other fellows became somewhat jealous and hard-feeling was the result. This happened years ago, but it was not until about a year ago that the present trouble began.

It appears that Floyd Dingess, one of the Brumfield adherents, quarrelled with his wife, who was one of the Halls, and sent her home to her family. Dingess and one of the Halls about ten days later met in the road near Hall's home. The Halls had determined to avenge the wrong which they claimed had been thrust upon them, and at the meeting a fight followed, in which Dingess was killed and Hall severely stabbed, there being not less than ten dangerous wounds in his body. He recovered. Little Al. Brumfield had married a Dingess, a sister of Floyd, who was killed by Hall, and he swore to be avenged. This brought the Brumfields into the trouble, and the Runyons, Haleys, and McCoys sided with the Halls, and the first fight took place near the mouth of Hart's creek at a country store, there being seven or eight persons engaged in the fight, and when it was over and the smoke of battle had cleared away two of the Hall party were found to be seriously wounded. Their companions escaped, and the victorious Brumfields refused to take advantage of the wounded men, but sent them to their homes.

During this time Paris Brumfield and Jeff. Runyon became involved in a quarrel. Jeff. had not been a participant in the trouble. He was an ex-deputy sheriff, and was quite a prominent man in his locality. He was charged by the Brumfields with having assaulted the wife of one of their number, and while this feeling existed Paris was shot from ambush by unknown parties, and on Sunday, two weeks later, Al. Brumfield and wife, who were returning from a visit to Mrs. Brumfield's parent, Hen. Dingess, were shot from ambush. They had passed on their return several of the houses of his enemies and were near his own home, on Hart's creek, when they were shot. Mr. and Mrs. Brumfield were riding one horse and the lady received a bullet in her jaw, which tore it to pieces, and the husband's arm was shattered to pieces, but after he fell from the horse he returned the fire. After much exertion he and his wife reached their home, where help was called in, and all that could be done was done to relieve their suffering. A few days later a brother of Mrs. Brumfield, Mr. Dingess, was waylaid and shot by unknown parties. His wound was slight and he soon recovered.

It was learned that Burt Haley and Green McCoy were the parties who shot Brumfield and his wife. The assassins escaped to Kentucky, but were later on arrested in Martin county, Ky., and returned to this State, and while en route to Hamlin, Lincoln county, W. Va., in which county the shooting occurred, the guard and the prisoners stopped for the night at the residence of a man named Fry. During the night a mob visited Fry's house and took Haley and McCoy out, and after fearfully maltreating them and after a confession from them that they shot Brumfield and his wife they were lynched. After killing these men the lynchers started for Runyon's house, not far distant, with the avowed intention of lynching him, but as he had gotton wind of their coming he left and thus saved his life. The lynchers then visited the home of Conrad Atkins, McCoy's father-in-law, but he was absent. Atkins, Runyon, and five of their friends escaped, going to Huntington for safety. There have been several reported collisions between these parties since September, but the reports were false. No other trouble is expected at present, as the Runyon people are keeping out of the way.

A Little Crowing.

COURTLAND, November 25, 1889.

To the Editor of the Dispatch:

I write you from the county-seat of Southampton, in the very heart of the black belt, and Southampton, which has made the very heaviest change of any county of Southeastern Virginia (1,100 votes), sends greetings to Richmond with her 5,000 Democratic majority, and proudly leading all the other cities; and we claim the Second congressional district to be the banner district of the State. Our gain on the Cleveland vote of 1888 was 7,000. Multiply that by 10, the number of the congressional districts. If all the other districts had done as well the majority would have been 70,000—just the majority of the whites over the blacks in the State.

You in your city and in other parts of the State where the whites have an assured majority can form no idea of the painful interest and intense excitement which was felt in Southeastern Virginia over the issue of the contest. For here we felt that it was really a contest between civilization and barbarism, and when Mahone advertised his mass-meeting here on October court-day, knowing his methods, we prepared fully for the contest. He came from Norfolk with a train of eleven cars, with George E. Bowden in command of the bread-and-butter brigade from Norfolk and Portsmouth. He recruited heavily with negroes from Suffolk, and arrived here with his mixed multitude to be received by a mob of howling negroes. The Democrats of Norfolk and Portsmouth with a train of twelve cars followed close on his trail. They met here the Democrats from Nansemond, Isle of Wight, Southampton, Sussex, Greensville, and Brunswick—in fact from Southeastern Virginia. Here we joined battle with his black-and-tan hordes, and gave them a most disastrous and overwhelming defeat, for where Mahone expected 5,000 majority there were 2,000 against him. The battle of the Second congressional district was fought and won here that day.

We are hardly done handshaking yet over our happy deliverance. Defeat meant possible negro representatives, sheriffs, clerks, Commonwealth's attorneys, magistrates, and constables, and victory has placed Virginia at the head of the Democratic column of the South, and made her a firm, steadfast, and immovable Democratic State. This victory is full and far-reaching, and we have not yet gathered its fruits. We have assured home rule, a great thing no matter how the general government may be; we have won without the kickers and Republican sore-heads; we have beaten not only the Republican party of Virginia, but we have beaten the National Republican Administration, with President Harrison at its head.

Freed from all care we now hand the Republican corps over to McKinney and the Legislature for burial, and now turn to the development of our State, whose safety and prosperity was so seriously threatened by the vandal horde whom we have beaten. S.

O. K.

[For the Dispatch.]

Your correction in a late Dispatch of the Chicago Herald as to the origin of the term "Orl Correct," as expressed by the letters O. K., needs a slight correction in its reference to Major Jack Downing and General Jackson and the Latin phrases attributed to the latter; also, as to the place and circumstances under which "the Gin'ral" (as he always called General Jackson in his letters) made the speech referred to. It was not in New York, but on the occasion of the laying of the corner-stone of the Bunker-Hill monument, when President Jackson took part in the ceremonies and made an address. But it was reported very differently by Major Downing from what it was in the newspapers of the day. Just before that time Harvard College had conferred the title of LL. D. upon the President—a fact that had produced a broad smile all over the country from its supposed inappropriateness. Major Downing reports the President as about to close his address when he, being at his side, whispered to him, "Gin'ral, don't forget that you are an LL. D. now, and you ought to give 'em a little Latin." At this you oughter seen the Gin'ral, how he spread himself and exclaimed, "E pluribus unum—sine qua non"; and I thought the crowd never would stop hollerin' and shoutin', during which time the Gin'ral whispered to me: "Major, I forgot all about bein' an LL. D. until you 'mind'd me of it."

The letters of Major Jack Downing were read with great eagerness at the time of their publication, which was about the close of General Jackson's second term, and ran through two or three years—say 1833,'34-'35, when the Whig party was first formed, and I am old enough to remember how much amusement was afforded to the Whigs of that day by the letters of Major Jack Downing, of Downingsville, with his droll humor and happy hits at "the Gin'ral." A WILD PLUNGE.

A REMARKABLE RAILROAD ACCIDENT IN PETERSBURG.

A Train Goes Into a Warehouse—Engine and Tender Wrecked—Escape by Jumping—Notes.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

PETERSBURG, November 28, 1889.

A very remarkable accident, attended with considerable loss, occurred here this morning shortly after 11 o'clock. On what is known as the connecting track between the upper and lower depots of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad there is a heavy grade, the ascent being from the Appomattox depôt. The heaviest portion of the grade is between the latter depôt and the crossing on Bollingbrook street. If the trains are heavy, either passenger or freight, it generally requires two engines to run them up. Usually the descending trains have to stop on this grade to allow the changing of a switch, which is put there as a means of safety.

This morning a heavily-laden through freight train, bound for Richmond, in charge of Engineer H. P. Yarbrough and Fireman Julius Massenburg, left the upper or Washington-Street depôt, pulled by Engine No. 155. On reaching the usual place of stopping near the switch the engineer found it impossible, by reason of the length and momentum of his train to stop, and the consequence was that the train, instead of keeping on the regular track was turned off on a side track leading down to the warehouses of Messrs. Booth & Kidd and Marks & Friend, near the foot of Third street. Messrs. Marks & Friend's warehouse is a large, new brick building, erected since the flood of last spring, by which their old one was destroyed, and stands at a right angle with the side-track. In front of Messrs. Booth & Kidd's warehouse a box-car was being unloaded. This car was struck by the engine of the freight train and was pushed forward and driven through the brick wall of Marks & Friend's warehouse and entirely into the building. The engine was stopped at the wall foundation, overturned, and wrecked. The tender was lifted off the trucks and landed in the street. The box-car next the tender—one of the "Kanawha Despatch" cars, laden with fruit for Richmond—was driven over the engine and partly into the building. It was shattered almost to fragments and left standing at an angle of about 45 degrees. The remaining cars of the train were uninjured.

JUMPED.

Seeing his danger as soon as the train had been switched off from the regular track, Engineer Yarbrough sounded the alarm, reversed his engine, and opened the safety-valves. Having done all that could be done he jumped from his engine, followed by the fireman. If they had kept to their places they would have met certain death, as in the wreck that followed no one on the engine or tender could have escaped.

It is a remarkable circumstance that the car driven through the walls of Marks & Friend's warehouse, while it tore up the floor and sills of the building, was apparently but little injured. It stands squarely across the interior of the building.

There were several gentlemen in the office of the warehouse at the time, but no one was hurt. They were dazed for the moment and knew not what the crash meant. One thought it was a cyclone, another that it was an earthquake which was destroying the building.

The hole knocked in the wall extends from roof to base, and is fully twenty feet wide. It will cost four or five hundred dollars to repair the damage. The loss to the railroad company will amount to some thousands of dollars.

As soon as the accident occurred an alarm of fire was turned in as a matter of precaution. It was feared that the fire from the engine might be communicated to the building. Fortunately there was no need for the services of the department.

It is said that one or more persons who were engaged in unloading the car in front of Booth & Kidd's warehouse narrowly escaped being caught and crushed in the wreck.

There was a pleasant little incident at the Appomattox depot this morning just before the departure of the University football team for Richmond. It was the presentation of a beautiful gold medal by the team to Mr. William Widnus, one of its members, for his lucky playing at the recent game in this city. The presentation was made by Judge D. A. Hinton, of the Supreme Court, in a graceful and happy speech. ROBIN ADAIR.

CHARLOTTESVILLE.

The Observance of Thanksgiving-Day.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

NOVEMBER 28, 1889.

To-day was very generally observed here as a day of thanksgiving, and the post-office, banks, and all the principal business-houses were closed.

The Methodist, Baptist, Disciples, and Presbyterian congregations held their usual thanksgiving service at 11 o'clock this morning in the Methodist church. The sermon was preached by Mr. T. H. Rice, a young Presbyterian minister who is attending the University of Virginia.

Mr. Rice took his text from Galatians vi., 14, and preached a very able and instructive sermon, which was attentively listened to by a fair-sized audience.

Thanksgiving services were also held in the Episcopal church this morning, and were conducted by the rector, Rev. Dr. Hancket.

The services which were to have been begun at the Baptist church on next Sunday have been postponed until the latter part of next January, owing to the fact that the Rev. H. M. Wharton, of Baltimore, who was to have conducted them, could not conveniently do so at this season. W.

Will Be Ordered to Vacate.

[By telegraph to the Dispatch.]

CALDWELL, KAN., November 28.—The Cherokee Live-Stock Association held a special meeting yesterday. The business of the meeting was conducted with secrecy, but it has been learned that the conclusion was reached that the association's days on the strip are numbered, and the only question considered was the length of time that may be given to vacate.

A lengthy memorial was prepared to be presented to President Harrison stating that great inconvenience and financial disaster would follow the enforcement of Secretary Noble's order to vacate by June 1, 1890, and praying for further time that they may dispose of their cattle gradually and not produce a panic in the live-stock market by throwing their cattle on the market at once. The memorial was sent to the President last night.

HILL-CITY GATHERINGS.

Accepted a Call—A Good Joke—Notes.

[Special telegram to the Dispatch.]

LYNCHBURG, VA., November 28.—Dr. W. R. L. Smith, the popular pastor of the First Baptist church of this city, has accepted a call from the First Baptist church of Nashville, Tenn. Dr. Smith has held his charge here for about twelve years. The people generally are much attached to him.

Robert E. Gish, a prominent tobacconist of this city, and Miss Bessie B. Ambler, of Amherst, were married at "Glenn Ambler" yesterday.

Judge J. Singleton Diggs, of the Corporation Court, and lady celebrated their wooden wedding last night, and were the recipients of many tokens of esteem from their friends.

IMPROVING.

J. M. Speece, clerk of Bedford, who suddenly lost his voice last Sunday, is improving, and his voice has returned almost as strong as before he was stricken.

The store of Paddon & Co., at Liberty, was robbed last night of a large amount of goods.

The residence of M. L. Griggs, near Charlemont, Bedford, was totally destroyed by fire Sunday night. Loss about $5,000, with $1,000 insurance in the Virginia Fire and Marine, of Richmond.

A GOOD JOKE.

A good joke is told on one of the prisoners from the mountains in Liberty jail. He seems contented, and was allowed the privilege of walking around occasionally for exercise. The other afternoon he was out later than usual, and, meeting an acquaintance, remarked: "I can't stop to talk, but must get back, or them yer fools will lock me out."

Thanksgiving was not as generally observed here to-day as it was thought it would be, but services were held in nearly all the churches.

WOMEN AND HICE.

The reason why a woman is afraid of a mouse is a profound mystery—indeed, it has never been very clearly proven that she is. But some women are constantly in such a nervous, irritable condition that the slightest thing answers and startles them. The cause of this unfortunate state of affairs is usually some functional derangement; some distressing or painful irregularity, some derangement or peculiar weakness incident to her sex; or, it may be due to inflammation, ulceration or displacement of some part of the pelvic viscera, or to other organic lesions peculiar to her sex. From whichever cause it may arise, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive remedy, to certain in its curative results that its manufacturers feel warranted in offering it, under a guarantee of its strong satisfaction in every case, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded. As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, exhaustion, prostration, hysteria, spasms and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womb. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

"Oh! those advertised things are humbugs."

Madam, permit us a word of plain talk. "Some advertised things" are humbugs, just as you find hypocrites and humbugs in the holiest of places. It is the humbug and the imitator who follows in the wake of a successfully advertised article, deceiving the people by crying out "just the same as Pearline," or "better than Royal," or "as good as He-No."

Ask yourself if those articles which experience has taught you are the best, are not the most advertised. Would it pay Pear's Soap to spend so much if they were not confident of its quality?

Will it pay us to spend more than we can hope to get back in two years, if we are not positive beyond question that in the end you will discover the true merits of He-No tea, and by its continued use eventually repay us.

We are casting bread upon the waters knowing that it will come back to us. But would it if the tea was poor?
