WEDNESDAY....JANUARY 9, 1895.

The Capital City of Virginia.

Our Common Council has taken the first step in the matter of the consolidation of Richmond and Manchester by passing a resolution providing for a committee of conference between the two city councils. The Board of Aldermen at its next meeting will doubtless concur in the action of the Common Council and then the resolution will go to Mayor R. M. Taylor for his approval. Then the City Council of Manchester will be called upon to act.

This movement for the consolidation of our two cities is the result of years and years of deliberation. Few public-spirited men who have given the subject careful thought have failed to reach the conclusion that consolidation will be mutually beneficial to the two communities.

Manchester as a part of Richmond would have a brighter future than it has now. Its property would improve in value. And with additional means of communication between the two places Manchester would certainly increase in population and business. We should never be content until the river was arched over for a great, broad avenue sufficient for all the traffic of "Bigger Richmond" for one hundred years to come.

Richmond would gain by consolidation by getting the position in the list of cities which she is entitled to. For years we have been dropping lower and lower in rank—not because we have ever failed to show a good increase of population—but because annexation and consolidation have been practiced by other cities and not by us.

Richmond appears to disadvantage in the table showing the population of the chief American cities. We are below the 100,000 mark, whereas we should be above it. It is only when an exhibit is made of bank clearances and property values that Richmond gets her true rank. Then it is seen that we have more business here and have more real and personal property than most of the cities in the 100,000 class. Between Richmond and New Orleans there is no city that equals ours, tested by such telling figures as those we have mentioned. And with Manchester and Richmond and their most important suburbs united we should have a population to reinforce our financial statistics.

All that separates Richmond and Manchester is James river. Nothing but an imaginary line separates us from some of the thickly populated suburbs that should be annexed. As to the other suburbs which should become a part of Richmond, they are separated from us only by Shockoe creek—an insignificant stream.

The Dispatch would have the people of Richmond and Manchester and their suburbs go about this matter calmly and deliberately. The committee of conference should be composed of our wisest councilmen, because, inevitably, knotty questions will have to be met. Those who may not favor consolidation will be able to raise questions which may be made difficult of solution.

Let us all resolve to deal with the subject with broad-mindedness and in the spirit of patriotism. Is there any Virginian who does not wish to see Richmond occupying her proper position in the galaxy of large cities? We trust not.

We believe that our two communities are ready for union. But there are many details which must be arranged before terms can be signed. There must be negotiation and discussion. These we hope will be so conducted that those who may be unfriendly to the consolidation scheme will have no opportunity to arouse prejudice against it. In our opinion Manchester needs Richmond. We know that Richmond wants Manchester. Let them come together as one corporation.

The First Regiment.

The troubles of the First Regiment seem to be increasing. The majority of the officers are antagonistic to Colonel Jones, while a considerable number of the enlisted men are exceedingly friendly to him.

The regiment cannot prosper in this way, and we fear that the existing difficulties cannot be amicably settled. Soon it may be necessary for the Governor to take charge of the case and see if a reorganization cannot be effected.

It this be not done the command will suffer irretrievably. Citizens who have always been cordial in support of it are becoming disgusted with this factional strife. The regiment has lost ground in public favor.

We suppose that there will have to be some sort of inquiry, and that the faction least to blame for existing troubles will have to be charged with reorganization. The regiment seems hopelessly divided against itself, and this would lessen public confidence in it should it be called into public service during an emergency.

We shall not venture to undertake to point out who is right and who is wrong, but it is our duty to say that this community would hail with pleasure any executive action which would put an end to existing squabbles. No matter how shrewdly this is done it will cost the regiment many of its officers and men, but it will have to be done, and we say the sooner the better.

Protection to Depositors.

We have several times heretofore remarked in speaking of new banking and currency schemes that the depositors seemed to have no friends amongst the members of Congress. It is somewhat remarkable that such a condition of things should obtain in that body. The depositors in any prosperous bank might at any time make a "run" upon that bank, withdraw all its cash (that is, if permitted to do so), set the whole community by the ears, and bring about a most deplorable state of affairs in the bank. The depositors live in the town, city, or village where the bank is located, and can easily go to the bank and demand their money. On the other hand, the note-holders of any bank are scattered far and wide, a few here and a few there, and are not so circumstanced as that they could easily embarrass a bank, even if damaging reports were rife in the community as to the solvency of the bank.

But the depositors found a friend last week in Mr. Johnson, of Indiana, another expert in financial matters, who addressed the House of Representatives on the subject of the Carlisle bill. He objected to the bill that it robbed Peter to pay Paul. "It despoils," said he, "the security of the depositors in national banks in the interest of the note-holder." Under the present system, added he, whenever a bank fails, all of its circulating notes are paid, and yet only 90 per cent. of the par value of the bonds which secure these notes is exhausted. "The depositors have the difference between that 90 per cent. and the premium value of the bonds for their payment." "They have also the tangible assets of the bank; they have its commercial paper; they have the double security of the stockholders," "so that whilst the existing system guards the note-holder securely, it at the same time protects the depositor." So that the losses of the note-holders have been next to nothing. We now quote Mr. Johnson:

"But how about the system proposed in this bill. It takes away the bond-security to the note-holder. It requires a specific guaranty only of 30 per cent. of the amount of circulation upon the part of the bank; and, if you please, the safety-fund in ten years would amount to 5 per cent. more for security.

"Suppose a bank to fail. These specific assets and securities are applied to the payment of its notes, but a large margin is left unpaid which is to be satisfied out of the safety-fund made up by the other banks, and they in turn have a first lien on the assets of the failed bank to reimburse them their outlay. So the fund that ought to be saved for the benefit of the depositor is wiped out of existence, and he is left to bear the loss. The security of deposits is necessary to good banking, to the millions of depositors, and to the people at large. It has been the policy of the government under the existing law to protect these interests. This policy ought to be pursued in the future. Let us have a good security for the depositors, as well as a good security for the note-holders. Any other system will fail to answer the needs of the great American people."

It does seem to us that Mr. Johnson's argument is worthy of serious consideration. The depositors ought to have a fund saved for them. It is creditable to the intelligence of the depositors in the national banks that they have made no ruinous runs upon the banks. There is many a sound bank which, nevertheless, has on deposit three or four times as much as the capital stock of that bank. We can all join in Mr. Johnson's declaration that a fund ought to be saved for the benefit of the depositors.

It has been contended that if the depositors were as well secured as the note-holders, there would never be another panic. There could be no occasion for alarm on the part of the former. And so each bank might use with perfect safety the full amount of its deposits, or, at any rate, a large amount of them.

Don't Know What to Do.

The Charlotte (N. C.) Observer has, we suspect, come ere now to the conclusion that the Dispatch was right when it said last week that Congress did not know what to do. Were not the proceedings of the Democratic congressional caucus on Monday, notwithstanding the endorsement of the Carlisle bill, proof positive that many, if not all, of our congressmen are at sea on the subject of the finances? We do not doubt that there are numbers of men in the House of Representatives as well as in the Senate, who, they being the judges, "know it all." But they are not the men whom the country needs. The men who know most on this subject—the real experts in finance—are men who distrust their own conclusions, and are willing to sit at the feet of any financial Gamaliel who can enlighten them on the intricate problems of finance, or solve for the world the problems in money-dealings which have hitherto baffled the efforts of those who have tackled them.

It must not be supposed that we have despaired of "a happy issue" out of our monetary and currency troubles. In this matter the old couplet is as true now as it ever was:

"Attempt the end, and never stand to doubt;
Nothing's so hard but search will find it out."

If the proceedings of the Democratic congressional caucus of Monday indicated that the members of the House of Representatives are still in the dark on the financial question, they also indicate that discussion will probably kill the Carlisle bill, or the substitute for the Carlisle bill. We say "indicate," but we would not be understood as saying that that bill is already killed. There may be the promise of a good law in the Carlisle bill.

Nicaragua in 1856.

Persons who are raising constitutional objections to the Nicaragua-canal scheme would do well to ponder the following resolution adopted by the Democratic National Convention in 1856—thirty-nine years ago:

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature, as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans constitutes one of the most important achievements reanzed by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our government and the governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

There is no small-pox within twenty odd miles of Richmond. We want to make the disease keep its distance. However, in a week or ten days our entire population will be vaccinated. Manchester and Henrico county would do well to follow our example in this respect. In this matter an ounce of prevention will, doubtless, be worth a ton or two of cure.

The Governor could not have chosen a worthier man as Register of the Land Office and Superintendent of Public Buildings than Mr. Sidney P. Epes, of Nottoway county. He comes from a section of the State which has no other representative in the corps of "Capitol officers," and he is personally deserving. He is a staunch and true-blue Democrat, and as the editor of the Blackstone Courier has done excellent service for his party—that is to say, for our State.

The Gas.

There is much complaint against the city gas. We wish that something could be done to relieve it of its horrid odor. Possibly it might also be improved in illuminating power, but as to this we are not so sure. Gas-light was a dazzling light to those who had previously known nothing better than a candle or oil or spirit lamp. Now it is outshone by the electric-lamps. However, we should be content with the illuminating power of our gas if we could get rid of the objectionable odor.

The Baltimore Board of Trade has adopted a resolution urging the City Government to establish a hospital for contagious diseases.

A THIEVING CHAMBERMAID

Robs a Stateroom of $110—Incohance's Visit—Jesuit Fathers' Mission.

NORFOLK, VA., January 8.—(Special.) A chambermaid on the Washington-Line steamers, Sarah Shepherd, is in jail for robbing a stateroom of a pocket-book containing $110, and belonging to E. A. Townsend, of this city.

Andrew H. Paton, great incohance, Great Council of the United States, I. O. R. M., arrived from Boston, and visited Black Hawk Tribe last night. This morning he was in conference with the chiefs of the Great Council of Virginia at the Atlantic Hotel. The visit of the Great Incohance to Virginia is to put into effect a plan to largely increase the order in this State.

A mission, conducted by the Jesuit Fathers, has commenced at the new Catholic church, on York street, and will continue ten days.

PAINFUL RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.

A Young Lady and Gentleman Thrown Out of a Buggy and Injured.

BLACKSTONE, VA., January 8.—(Special.)—This morning Captain Saunders, of Lawrenceville, and Miss Lillian Bagby, of Lunenburg, left the residence of Mrs. Julia Bagby with the intention of crossing over to this place. They were driving a pair of very spirited horses, and when near Cross's bridge, on Nottoway river, they became unmanageable and dashed down the road at a furious gait, turning the buggy over and painfully injuring both the occupants. Miss Bagby was cut across the face and had one arm broken or dislocated. Captain Saunders escaped with no broken bones, but is severely bruised about the body and face. Dr. E. W. Goe, who happened to be passing near by, was at once called in and rendered the necessary attention.

Mr. Upton Brown, who was on his way here with a three-horse load of tobacco, had a very narrow escape from being run over by the runaway horses after they got loose from the buggy. Mr. Brown saw the horses coming on him at break-neck speed, and before he could get his team out of the road they ran separately against his wagon, and they were going with such force that one of them went over the top of the wagon, falling on the opposite side, barely missing Mr. Brown, who was sitting on the load of tobacco.

BIG FIRE IN NEAPOLIS.

Stock in T. Aller's Store Totally Destroyed—The Building Damaged.

DANVILLE, January 8.—(Special.)—A fire occurred to-night on Main street, Neapolis, in the dry goods store of T. Aller. The storehouse is located in the most central part of the business of the town, and but for the prompt arrival of the fire department the loss would have been heavy. The fire was caused by the explosion of a lamp. The stock, which was valued at $5,000, is a total loss, the greatest damage being done by water. Insurance, $3,000. The building, owned by Mosby & Mitchell, is damaged to the extent of $2,500, fully covered by insurance.

To Contest Barnet Jones's Will.

WILLIAMSBURG, VA., January 8.—(Special.)—A notice of contest of the last will and testament of the late Barnet Jones, of York county, who died a few weeks ago at Staten Island, has been served. Mr. Jones was a New Yorker by birth, but had for a number of years preceding the war been a resident of Virginia and at the same time maintained a home both here and on Staten Island. He was the largest oyster-planter on York river. At the time of his death he was so odd years old, but within few months of his demise he was strong and remarkably active. He came here last summer, and, taking legal advice, proceeded to bequeath his property. By the will then made he divided his property into two parts—one half in Virginia and the other half in New York. Of the Virginia half he devises one third in trust to each of his two sons living here, and the other third to Mrs. Margaret Jones, the widow of another son, and in the event of the death of the two sons their shares to revert to the children of Mrs. Jones. The northern half of his property he leaves to his daughters now living on Staten Island. But for some reason the testator saw fit to disinherit a son now living in the county of James City, and who has a family. This son, with others, feeling aggrieved, have instituted the proceedings before mentioned, and have employed Judge D. C. Richardson, of Richmond, to represent them. Judge Henry B. Warren, of Texas, was named in the will as sole executor, with Judge R. L. Henley as legal adviser. The Virginia part of the estate consists of real estate here, in York county, West Point, and elsewhere, together with a large quantity of oysters planted in York river and vessel property, and is said to aggregate some $50,000.

Professor Boatwright and His Ancestry.

To the Editor of the Dispatch:

Having been a pupil of Richmond College a long time ago, I have watched its progress for many years, and especially the action of the Board of Trustees in the recent election of Professor F. W. Boatwright as president of the college. I am not personally acquainted with the young man, and yet I feel as if I know him from my long and intimate acquaintance with his ancestors. I knew his great-uncles, Thomas, John, Josiah, and William, for about forty years, and his grandfather, who was a Baptist preacher. These five brothers were successful farmers, living in the same community, and were true and trustworthy citizens, whose characters were unstained by the pollutions of the world. Rev. R. B. Boatwright (the father of the President) is a consecrated Baptist minister, and has labored long and faithfully in the Master's cause. Had the trustees chosen the son of a nobleman or millionaire, the purity of their motives might be impeached; but they selected a young man who claims no royal birthright, but stands upon the platform of his own merits and challenges an investigation as to his fitness for the high position to which he has been called. In addition to his scholastic attainments and his determined purpose to overcome every impediment which may hinder his success, he invites the co-operation of the brotherhood, and invokes the additional endowment of divine grace to enable him to prosecute the work entrusted to his care. With such a man as president, aided by the counsel and prayers of friends, it seems to me we need not fear the result.
