OF HUMAN INTEREST: STORIES OF TO-DAY

A Golden Wedding Divorce.

While nine grown children were assembled at the house to celebrate the golden anniversary of their parents' wedding, Christian Trilck, a rich Louisville brewer, entered suit for divorce.

For five years he had deferred taking steps to secure a legal separation because of his desire to finish fifty years of married life with Mrs. Lena Trilck.

The Trilcks are Louisville's leading German family. Christian Trilck was born 75 years ago in Baden, Ger., but had lived in Kentucky fifty-five years.

He served in the Union army during the war, and since then had attained wealth in the brewery business.

His nine children, all married and prominent, had no idea that he contemplated securing a divorce. His grounds for asking a separation are inattention, inconsideration and general unsociability.

"I made up my mind five years ago, when I had lived with her forty-five years, that she was not fitted for a man of my temperament. I decided to wait until the half circle was completed. That was to-day, and the suit, which I had had prepared ten days ago and was filed without further delay.

"The children say I am wrong, but it seems to me that I need a divorce and need it bad."—New York World.

As to Gold Mining.

The largest gold-producing mine in the world, according to the London Economist, is the Homestake, in South Dakota. Although it is the largest, it is, relatively, one of the poorest, on account of the small amount of gold yield per ton. It only yielding about $3.75 to the ton, and the cost for mining is $2.50. The average yield of this mine is about 20,000 ounces of fine gold a month. The next largest mine is on Douglas Island, Alaska. The yearly average of this mine is about 600,000 tons of ore. Another important mine is the Portland, at Cripple Creek, which is turning out $200,000 monthly. The next in size are the West Australia gold mines, which command an enormous output, and which brings them up to the front ranks. These mines all have a big reserve and are said to assure a large yield for years to come. India also contains several very large gold mines, but it is said that they have reached their maximum output and have no very large reserve. The Transvaal constitutes probably one of the largest gold countries in the world. Among the thirty largest gold mines in the world the Transvaal has seventeen of them, six of the remaining thirteen are in West Australia, three in the United States, two in India, one in Queensland and one in New Zealand. In summing up the statistics it is found that the richest district is that of Cripple Creek, Col. So it may be said that this country has the largest gold producing mine and the richest gold mining district in the world.

Protecting the Birds.

The unrestricted slaughter of plumed birds in Florida to supply the demands of the millinery trade nearly resulted in the extermination of many native species, but thanks to recently enacted protective laws, prohibiting the killing of all but game birds, this critical condition has now passed. A small colony of brown pelicans established a breeding colony on a small island in the Indian River, on the east coast, near the town of Sebastian, and in order to preserve the colony, now numbering several thousand birds, from further inroads of the slaughter, the island has been declared a United States government reservation for the protection of native birds and placed in charge of the Department of Agriculture.

Bird Study.

The more we study birds the more they seem to baffle our science, says Nature Notes. Buzzards have been seen to ascend 1,000 feet in a minute or so in a dead calm, without visible motion of their outstretched wings. A Virginian plover starts one evening from Labrador and arrives next morning in Brazil, doing the journey on an empty stomach without stopping on the way. Young birds go by themselves thousands of miles on a journey they have never been before.
