THE TIMBER SUPPLY IS RAPIDLY FADING

The Great Forests of the Country Will Soon be Only a Memory.

"Within five years Michigan will be stripped of its timber, and the chief source of lumber supply for this and other cities along the lakes will be cut off." This statement was made last evening by Charles A. Nicola, one of the largest lumber dealers of the city.

Continuing, he said: "A few years ago the lumber supply of Michigan and other States surrounding the great lakes appeared to be limitless. But the destruction has been terribly rapid, and the end is now in sight. Already much of our wood comes from remote districts, and we are required to push farther and farther from home each year to obtain the lumber required for use in Cleveland. The amount of this is very great, approximating 200,000,000 feet yearly.

"By far the greatest part of this is white and Norway pine, for which lumbermen have long been accustomed to look to Michigan, with the result I have already stated. Indeed, the white pine supply is practically exhausted already, but some hemlock remains. Much of our lumber is now being brought from Wisconsin and Minnesota, while my firm has just placed a big order for timber from the Mesaba range, 100 miles north of Duluth.

"Thus we are having to push farther and farther north for our lumber, with the result that the price is steadily increasing because of the increased expense of transportation. This is true of white and Norway pine. Yellow pine, on the other hand, we have to get from the South. Some of it comes from as far as Mississippi, although it is scattered all over the Southern States. Northern capitalists, anticipating that the supply of yellow pine may ultimately become as scanty as that of white pine in the Northern States, are rapidly buying up the best timber lands. Only a few days ago Chicago parties concluded the purchase of 500,000 acres of pine land in Mississippi. The purchase price was $1,000,000 and the land is expected to yield 700,000,000 feet of lumber.

"In the matter of yellow pine the southern part of our State must not be overlooked, as it contains forests which are constantly yielding timber. Ohio also still contains abundant oak and poplar forests in certain districts. For much of our hardwood, however, we must go farther afield and the most important supply is derived from West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, and other Southern States.

"The wood for which we must go farthest is that for shingles, which comes all the way from Washington. As yet no other wood has been found as satisfactory for shingles as the red cedar, which has its growth almost exclusively on the Pacific coast.

"I do not wish to create the impression that we are in danger of any such thing as a lumber famine, at least not within the present generation, but it is true that the time is almost at hand when people in this part of the country must pay much higher prices for lumber than they pay now, because of the greater distance it will have to be transported.

"Within recent years the systematic renewing of forests has been given no little consideration in this country, as it has in Europe for a much longer period. Every year schools of forestry in connection with our great universities, notably Yale and Cornell, are turning out large classes of young men at least a part of whom will devote their energy to this important problem. The work of restoring our forests is already under way in several States, and the next generation may see this renewal proceeding as rapidly as the destruction.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
