IT TAKES POWER TO RUN A FACTORY.

It takes power to run a business of any kind—one kind of power to produce goods, quite another kind to sell them. Steam power, electric power, water power will enable the manufacturer to fill his warehouse with saleable merchandise—that's all; but if he wishes to create a demand for the goods he must have a selling power. So it is with the merchant. If he has a large stock of goods he requires a selling power to move them. The best economical selling power in the South are the Tee-Dee Want Ads. A trial in those columns will convince any merchant.
