closed. Indeed, it is stated that the street-cars of St. Louis hauled more passengers the year after the exposition than they hauled during the year previous. The Portland Exposition was even more successful, comparatively speaking. It gave that section of the country a splendid advertisement, and brought in many settlers and much capital. No higher testimonial could be paid to it than the statement now made that Seattle will follow Portland's example in 1909. The Jamestown exposition will be in many respects totally different from those of the West, and there is now every promise that it will prove a good thing for the Old Dominion.

for the Panama Canal in the open market of the world.

A newspaper correspondent was asking Mr. W. J. Bryan about his engagements for speaking, to which he replied that, on a certain date he would speak at Detroit, another date, Chicago, then at St. Louis, at his home in Nebraska, and on the 25th of September he "will spend with ex-Governor Tyler, in Virginia, at a small town somewhere in southwest Virginia, the name of which had escaped him."—Roanoke World.

But Richmond needn't fret. A delegation once called upon President Cleveland in behalf of Governor Jarvis, of North Carolina. Mr. Cleveland heard them patiently, but finally said, in his abrupt way, "Gentlemen, pray excuse me, but who in thunder is Governor Jarvis?"

One can easily agree with the Washington Post that Mr. Bryan is not a politician, and that the success of no great measure is associated with his name. But it is hard not to be skeptical as to the assertion that he has not the personal magnetism of Clay or Blaine. If he has not, how can the wonderful popularity he enjoyed for—Tulsa Times-Appeal.

Mr. Bryan has his faults; but there is no question about his magnetism. He has more of the compelling force with a multitudinous crowd than any man we have ever heard. Under the spell of his oratory men who do not agree with him will shout his praises. That is why he is so much stronger with the assembled crowd than he is at the polls.

The South Boston News is sixteen years old, but it shows no sign of age, except richer wisdom and richer treasures. May its growth in all that is good and desirable be continuous.

Rhymes for To-Day

A Roundel of Romance.

'Tis not a loud and brazen Muse
That guides a poet when he woos,
But one that lures like some faint star
Or sweetest music from afar,
And turns the harp to gentler use.

So, Amaryllis, must you be:
The passion that these strings refuse,
My heart has love to tell, but ah!
'Tis not allowed.

And I would lie me 'neath the yews
And write you, darling, slews and slews
Of softest nothings that there are—
But here again, there is a bar . . .
You see . . . in poems meant for news,
'Tis not allowed.

VIRGINIA COMMENT.

Great Guns!

Is it possible that the upholders of anti-candidate on the ballot tariff industry are so hard up for right and a good cause that they are compelled to endorse their policy against the people at the Chamberlain mouth?—Culpeper Exponent.

Voting and Praying.

Colonel Bill Bailey, the irrepressible editor of the Wise Post, says he thinks a man ought to look up his prayer to his vote if he happens to be drinking from the pulpit. He ought to announce it at the ballot-box. Certainly no one can find a defect in that kind of logic.—Norfolk City Herald.

That Unruly Member.

It is not to be expected that a man that takes as much as Colonel Bryan does should say all good things.—Danville Herald.

Scottsville Branches Out.

An article printed in the local page of this week's issue in a general way is conducive to the organization of a Wholesale or Jobbing House in Scottsville. Briefly stated, the plan is based on the principle of buying a trade in bulk instead of a little bit. By taking advantage in this way of lower prices from the manufacturers and leading jobbers, and also effecting a saving in freight rates through a purchase in carload lots.—Scottsville Courier.

Suspicious.

Of course we may be wrong and the Governor may be, and perhaps is very busy, but we suspect that but for some portions of Mr. Bryan's New York speech he would have found time to visit Radford and let those who "Prefer Cox" to the great multitude of people who will undoubtedly be there to hear him.—Fredericksburg Star.

Prodigious.

By some unpardonable freak the types made us say on yesterday that the Albatross in the "Rime of the Ancient Mariner" was an island. We do not often commit typographical errors, but this was in the words of Dominic Sampson on "prodigious" to let pass unchallenged.—Charlottesville Progress.

With a view to determining how much America's educational system has helped establish this country in its commercial and industrial position, Alfred Mosley, the millionaire London publisher and philanthropist, will bring a large party of educators to this country this fall. He will pay all expenses of the trip, which will keep them in the United States three or four months, visiting and studying the schools of the home cities.

That Winston Churchill, candidate for Governor of New Hampshire, has a predilection for the letter "C" is seen in his choice of titles. His first published work was "The Celebrity," and this was followed by "Richard Carvel" Then came "The Crisis" and "The Crossing." Cornish was his home when he entered politics as a member of the New Hampshire Legislature, where he introduced a bill relating to Congressmen from Connecticut. In "Coniston," his latest work, he turns his political experience to account in the drawing of the principal character, a political "boss," whose original he found at Croydon.

WEDDING BELLS IN OLD VIRGINIA

Miss Mary Campbell Moore the Bride of Mr. Daniel Edward Brown.

A BEAUTIFUL CEREMONY

The Lexington Presbyterian Church Filled With a Brilliant Assembly.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

LEXINGTON, VA., September 11.—A pretty nuptial event was celebrated this afternoon at 6:30 o'clock in the Lexington Presbyterian Church, when Miss Mary Campbell Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James William Moore, of Lexington, was married to Mr. Daniel Edward Brown of San Antonio, Tex. The spacious church was filled with interested spectators, and the decorations were simple, but tasteful. The bride's pastor, Rev. Thompson B. Southall, officiated, using the impressive ring service. Mrs. Andrew D. Estill presided at the organ and rendered the wedding marches. The bride was given away by her father.

The bride looked charming in white chiffon cloth, and carrying bride's roses. Her ornaments were pearls. She was accompanied by Miss Eleanor Moore Donlap, of Lexington, as maid of honor, who wore white net and carried La France roses. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Frank Moore, of Lexington, as best man.

The ushers were Messrs. R. C. Ladd, of Richmond, Va.; J. Allen Smith, Jr., of Abbeville, S. C.; Charles F. Spencer, of Staunton, Va.; Charles N. Campbell, of Charlestown, W. Va.; John A. Moore, of Lexington, Va., and Captain M. M. Stith, United States Army.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Main Street, only the bridal party being present. After a bridal trip of several weeks, Mr. and Mrs. Brown will return to Lexington, and in October they will proceed to Dallas, Tex., where they will make their future home. Mr. Brown is engaged in business in that State. He was formerly a resident of Rockbridge and Lexington. His mother, Mrs. M. M. Brown, lives in Lexington.

Among the guests from a distance were: Messrs. S. C. Clay, of Paris, Ky.; Francis G. Jones, of Atlanta, Ga.; L. J. Deaths, of Philadelphia, Pa.; J. H. Land, of Charleston, W. Va.; N. A. Tapsley, Jr., of Ashland, Va.; J. D. S. Brown, of Snider, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. William M. Brown, of Buena Vista.

A VETERAN IN JAIL.

The End of a Long List of Matrimonial Infelicities.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

SPOTSYLVANIA, VA., September 11.—Harvey Alexander, an old ex-Confederate soldier, who has been living in Essex county, is now languishing in the Spotsylvania county jail, his wife being the prime mover in getting him locked behind the bars.

From his account of his married life, his call on the sea matrimonial has been anything but smooth and pleasant.

Leaving Essex county several days ago, Alexander and his wife landed at Fredericksburg, from which place they drifted to a farm in Spotsylvania, their troubles all the while, it seems, according to Alexander, increasing.

Like his ancient ancestor Adam, Alexander puts all the blame for this connubial infelicity on his wife, alleging that she took his money and would not let him have the necessities scarcely of life, and at last capped the climax by leaving him.

Another side to the story is to the effect that the said Alexander imbibes too freely of the ardent, and having secured quite a sum of money from his wife without her knowledge and consent, while intoxicated in an eating-house in Fredericksburg was robbed, and the disgusted wife had him promptly arrested by Assistant Deputy Sheriff Waller and put in jail at Spotsylvania Courthouse.

Alexander's mind is not sound, and he is a pitiable object.

BRYAN AT RADFORD.

Will Be the Guest of Ex-Governor Tyler.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

RADFORD, VA., September 11.—Further than that Mr. William Jennings Bryan will speak here Saturday his program is not yet known. He will arrive either Friday night or Saturday. He will be the guest of Ex-Governor Tyler during his stay here.

Women Fined.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

STAUNTON, VA., September 11.—The grand jury, which has been in session for several days, and which has examined a large number of witnesses, today indicted and fined the following women of the "Redlight" district: Blanche Evans, $100; Annie Gaines, $50; Maud Raymond, $50; Ella Clifton, $25; and Olite Campbell, $25.

Danville, 10; Farmville, 2.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

FARMVILLE, VA., September 11.—The Danville league team creeped up for their defeat yesterday by defeating the locals 10 to 2.

Richie was slab artist for Danville, and allowed seven hits and struck out five men. Armistead, for Farmville, allowed eleven hits and struck out nine men.

Each team has one game to their credit; to-morrow afternoon decides the issue.

Taylor—Brook.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

EANES'S CROSS ROADS, VA., September 11.—Williams Church was the scene Tuesday, September 4th, of a beautiful wedding, which was solemnized as the rays of the autumn sun were faintly playing hide and seek just over the tops of the pines. The contracting parties were Miss Pearl Brooks and Mr. William H. Taylor. The bride is the daughter of Mr. J. K. Brooks, a prosperous farmer, who resides near Eanes's Cross Roads, and the groom is the son of Mr. P. G. Taylor, of Hollydale, Va.

The church was tastefully decorated with evergreens, asmaliums and roses. The bride, who was beautifully attired, came in, leaning on the arm of her sister, Miss Alyse Brooks, while the groom was escorted to the altar by his brother, Mr. Louis Taylor. The wedding party marched to the strains of the wedding march, which was beautifully rendered by Miss Maude Thompson. While the ceremony was being performed by the Rev. J. M. McSparran the audience was surprised to hear the mellow strains of "Annie Laurie" float out from the organ and fill the church with its soft melodiy.

After the ceremony the happy couple set out immediately for the home of the groom.

Coming Wedding.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

WEST POINT, VA., September 11.—Mr. Leland Boone Treat, son of Marshal Morgan Treat, will be married to Miss Daisy Johnson Denmead September 12th, at 11 o'clock in the morning, by Rev. Haley, of the Seventh Street Christian Church, in the parsonage, Richmond, Va. The contracting parties are both of West Point, and after a Northern trip will reside in West Point.
