AFTERMATH OF GREAT SERIES

Comisky Now Has Ten Flags and Is the Champion Pennant-Winner.

STILL PRAISING WHITE SOX

National League Men Unite in Saying Better Team Won Series.

BY FRED BARBER.

NEW YORK, October 21.—With the world's championship settled, nothing remains [illegible] to organize the "round-the-stove" league and figure out what might have been. As the "fig" in the case offer limitless possibilities they are referred respectfully to the learned brother in the [illegible] corner who [illegible] qualified as an expert in playing the [illegible] season and the post-[illegible] series backward. And when the stove-warmers have canvassed 1906 to their hearts' content, it will be in order for them to speculate on the chances for 1907. By the time they get through with that weighty subject all the teams will have finished their spring practice, ready to debouch on the emerald diamond for next season's struggle.

The outcome of the world's series was a big surprise to thousands of National League fans, who [illegible] been led to believe or had [illegible] themselves into believing the Cubs were invincible. Most of them doubtless based their judgment on the sweeping victories Chance's men scored in Manhattan and Brooklyn. They took it for granted that since Huck's Huskies had wiped up the Polo Grounds and Washington Park with the world's champion Giants and Donovan's Doctors necessarily the White Sox would be so much tender, juicy, [illegible] meat for them.

All the dyed-in-the-wool supporters of the older organization long ago jumped to the conclusion that there was nothing in the wide, wide world that the Cubs couldn't beat in a walk.

All sorts of silly excuses and clumsy explanations have been offered by the upholders of Chance's men, in particular, and the National League in general. Yet, whatever admirers of the Cubs may think, the fact remains that "Chub" Murphy, president of the Chicago Nationals; Frank Chance, manager of that team, and Harry C. Pulliam, president of the National League, unite in saying the world's series was won by the Sox strictly on their merits as superior players. There was no fluke anywhere in the series. Every game was played to a finish. Both sides worked well, and though the Americans made more errors, their bungles, as a rule, were not costly. Fine fielding is a fine thing, but when all's said and done, it's the punch in a pinch that wins. To the amazement of National League rooters, the hard-hitting Cubs were outclassed in the hickory-hefting department. Fielder Jones and his men were noted for their ability to make many runs with few hits, but they didn't have to fall back on that qualification. They beat the Cubs fairly and squarely on batting and box-work.

* * *

By winning the world's championship Charles A. Comiskey again becomes the most conspicuous figure in baseball. The Old Roman, who has won almost a dozen pennants, is prouder of this achievement by his White Sox than of any victory ever won, even when he himself was in the thick of the fray as captain and first baseman of the old St. Louis Browns. Yet Commy captured four pennants in a row when he piloted the Browns, which feat never has been duplicated in professional baseball. Comiskey, at the head of the Browns, won the American Association championship in 1885 and 1886, and in the same years [illegible] the Chicago Nationals for the world's championship. He won the Association pennants of 1887 and 1888, too, but in 1887 the Detroit Nationals, and in 1888 the Giants defeated him for the world's championship. That made six pennants—four Association and two world's pennants—before he broke into Chicago with the White Sox. In 1900, 1901 and 1906 Comiskey's Sox won the American League championship, and in this last year they also, as everybody knows, won the world's pennant, making ten trophies. Comiskey himself, therefore, is the champion pennant-gatherer of the world and likely to remain such forever, since it's highly improbable any other man will win eleven of them.

* * *

One of the happiest of all the Sox at the end of the series was big Frank Isbell, known affectionately to fandom as "Busy Izzy." He was busy enough when he [illegible] off those four two-baggers in one game, all right, and yeoman service they did. Nobody wondered, therefore, when he was seen sauntering from the clubhouse with a big bat in his hand—the same with which he tore off those doubles. However, Charlie Comiskey couldn't resist the chance to do a little quiet kidding on the side, so he asked Izzy where the bat was going, knowing all the while it was destined for the place of honor in the second-baseman's Wichita home.

"Right down to Wichita for that piece of wood!" said the busy one, briskly. "That grand old bat has seen its last hard work on the ball field. It's going to pass the rest of its days in peace. That stick helped skin the Cubs. I was pretty wobbly once or twice in the field during that series, but when I got hold of this bludgeon I felt better. Oh, it's a great bat, but you'll never see it on the ball field again. That's the souvenir I prize above all the rest."

* * *

It wasn't all beer and skittles for the Sox in one or two respects—witness the generally listless flight of Noisy Nick Altrock, the sunny southpaw.

"Where—did—you—get that hat?" asked Comiskey the Conqueror as Nick strolled into the president's office for his wedge of the melon in the cold, gray dawn of the morning after. No wonder the old Roman was amazed. The hat Altrock wore was fearfully and wonderfully made.

"Say, Commy," answered the pitcher, "this lid is the sixth I've had since we got to be champions. When I was coming in from the field some [illegible] swiped my ball cap and when I got out on the street some one else grabbed my street hat. During a celebration last night I lost three more bonnets—all good ones, too. Of course, I smashed up a few myself, but the way my skypieces disappeared was awful. I finally got a 50-cent skimmer, and told the bunch that I was with they could start in smashing that as soon as they liked, but it was such a rummy piece of headgear that nobody would touch it. I wonder where I can go now to buy some more hats?"

* * *

One of the rarest bits of humor in connection with the world's series lies in the way the Cubs apportioned the spoils among themselves in advance. So confident were Chance's men of capturing the championship of the world that, before the series was begun, they went to Chairman Herrmann, of the National Commission, and told him that, instead of the gold buttons the Giants got last year, they would prefer diamond cuff-links. In the first place, each man thereby would receive four buttons instead of two. Moreover, the cuff-buttons would prove more useful than mere badges or medals. They thought they were carrying all the medals they could string across their chests, anyhow. Guess how he'd see about it, and—well, the Cubs won't get those diamonds, anyhow. Now it's up to the Sox to say whether they'll take the cuff-buttons or have the regular medals. One of them remarked the other day he was obliged to the Cubs for the suggestion, and he believed most of his comrades would feel the same way.

LIPTON TO RACE IN CHICAGO NEXT

SIR THOMAS LIPTON.

CHICAGO, October 21.—Sir Thomas Lipton will build a twenty-one foot racing yacht and enter the annual races of the Columbia Yacht Club next year for the trophy given by himself.

For some time pressure has been brought to bear on Sir Thomas to have him build a boat for the races in the Chicago harbor, but not until Friday did the donor of the Lipton cup give us final answer. The English baronet made known his decision after a conference with a committee from the Columbia Yacht Club.

After the meeting Sir Thomas discussed his plans for building the challenger. The boat will be made from a design of either Hope or Payne, two of the greatest designers in Great Britain. In all probability after the design has been selected the boat will be constructed in Canada. It is possible the challenger will sail under the colors of some Canadian club.

Sir Thomas will in all probability come to Chicago to see the races sailed next year.

"In fact," said he, "I don't know but I may sail on my own boat in the race. I should like to try this fresh water sailing."

CHESS CHALLENGE FORMALLY ACCEPTED

Americans Willing to Play for Newnes Trophy if Details of Match Can Be Arranged.

NEW YORK, October 21.—Answering the challenge of the City of London Chess Club, which desires another match for the possession of Sir George Newnes's $1,000 International trophy, now in the custody of the Brooklyn Chess Club, the latter organization has, through its secretary, Thomas J. Johnston, sent a communication to the Britons informing them of the readiness of those interested on this side of the water to resume play.

The refusal of the cable companies to provide the wires on two successive week days interrupted these interesting encounters, with the result that none has been contested since 1903. In the letter of acceptance inquiry is made as to whether the City of London people have devised a plan by means of which the match may be successfully played, and word is eagerly awaited.

The new board of officers elected at the annual meeting of the Brooklyn Chess Club is made up as follows: President, J. Herbert Watson; First Vice-President, R. P. Mossiter; Second Vice-President, Samuel H. Cragg; Secretary, Thomas J. Johnston; Treasurer, Dr. S. T. King.

CANUCK MARATHON TO HONOR SHERRING

Fourteen-Mile Run in Montreal Thanksgiving Day Open to the World.

HAMILTON, ONT., October 12.—In commemoration of the victory of William J. Sherring in winning the Marathon road race at Athens last spring, a Marathon race will be held at Montreal, Canada, on Thanksgiving Day, which will be open to the world.

The course will be about fourteen miles and the trophy will be in the form of a tall vase with three handles, carrying on one side a large figure of a runner. On the plates at the base of the trophy will be inserted the names of the winner and his two nearest competitors.

The trophy will become the property of the person winning it three times. Gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded to the runners according to the order of the finish. The race will be held under the auspices of the Montreal District Harriers' League, to which entries must be sent.

VIRGINIA VS. BUCKNELL.

Two Universities to Meet on Football Field Here.

The big Bucknell University team from Pennsylvania, and the doughty football warriors from old Virginia are scheduled to meet on the football gridiron at Richmond November 24. Last year Virginia defeated Bucknell at Norfolk by the score of 17 to 11, in a game that brought out all the various elements in football, such as punting, running, dashing and line smashing. It was a great game for the spectators, and was played before a big crowd. This year the Pennsylvanians are coming down to turn the trick, if they can, and return to the Keystone State with the scalp of the "Fast Flying Virginians," as they are called in the North. The game will be played at the park, and will be one of the great football events of the season.

The Virginia alumni will be out in force, and a great crowd will doubtless witness the game.

Bucknell made many warm friends last year at Norfolk on their first football trip South. They are scheduled to play the V. P. I. at Norfolk on November 10th, and adherents of the latter will doubtless attend the Richmond game to get a line on the Bucknell team.

2 DRAUGHT HORSES SOLD FOR $25,000

Remarkable Rival Bidding Between James J. Gaffney and W. Bradley.

THE CROWD PREVENTS GAMES

Fiss, Doerr & Carroll's Sale Ring Swamped by Throng of Nearly Ten Thousand.

NEW YORK, October 21.—Testifying to their personal friendship for J. J. Carroll, Aldermen James J. Gaffney and William Bradley were rival bidders in a sensational sale of a pair of fancy draught horses last night at the formal opening of the [illegible] Doerr & Carroll Horse Company's new million-dollar plant in the old Bull's Head district.

To entertain the invited guests of the evening at the housewarming in the horse market a series of equestrian games had been arranged, but the crush of spectators in the new auction ring was so great that it became impossible to carry out the program.

Fourteen thousand invitations were sent out and despite the rainy weather nearly ten thousand persons thronged the great buildings. With the aid of the police the crowds were kept under control until the opening parade of fancy draught horses had taken place, but when the mammoth Percherons left the ring the people swarmed in and completely swamped the big arena, leaving no room for further manoeuvres.

It was then proposed to sell a pair of draughters to dedicate the new auction mart. The horses led out were a pair of iron grays, reasonably worth $1,000 or $1,200. Horsewise folks were confident they would bring a fancy price, for the ring was full of "Joe" Carroll's personal friends and admirers, among whom were many wealthy brewers, truckmen and contractors.

The crowd gave three cheers as he mounted the block, and after a neat little speech of appreciation called for bids. Some one started the pair at $500. Frederick Rheinfrank raised the bid to $1,000. John E. Madden came in with an offer of $1,500 and stayed until the high bid was $2,500. Mr. Bradley's first bid was $2,000, and from $2,500 up he and Mr. Gaffney had the game to themselves. They raised each other $500 and $1,000 at a bid until $5,000, $10,000, $15,000 and $20,000 was reached, and passed amid suppressed excitement and frequent outbursts of applause as Mr. Carroll smilingly called the bids.

Mr. Gaffney jumped from $20,000 to $22,000, and Mr. Bradley as promptly raised him to $25,000, at which bid the hammer fell.

The price was so immeasurably beyond the real value of the horses that some persons in the crowd thought the bidding must have been a joke, but horsemen acquainted with the bidders were well aware that it was real, and that it represented the determination of two game men to prove their friendship and good wishes for an intimate associate in business, politics and social life.

Mr. Gaffney is associated with Mr. Carroll in the Pennsylvania Terminal contract, while Mr. Bradley has been interested with him in many big business affairs. The winning bidder is now contractor and was the builder of two sections of the subway.

FIGHT CLUBS TURN TO ROLLER SKATES

PHILADELPHIA, October 21.—The boxers are getting a move on, as if to forestall the roller skating "fever," which threatens to become epidemic in Philadelphia this winter.

At least two of the Quaker boxing clubs, the National and the Washington S. C., have arranged to convert their arenas into skating rinks on the nights when bouts are not scheduled.

It is unlikely, however, that the roller craze will interfere with the mitt artists. The promoters have been busy in the last week, and some exciting mills are on the carpet for early decisions.

W. E. CLOW, OF YALE, WINNER OF GOLF FINAL

Captain of New Haven Team Defeats His College Mate, Dwight Partridge.

NEW YORK, October 21.—W. E. Clow, Jr., captain of the Yale golf team, defeated his college mate, Dwight Partridge, by one up in the final for the intercollegiate golf championship at Garden City yesterday. The struggle was at thirty-six holes, and was so prolonged that it was practically impossible in the failing light for the men to distinguish the cup when they putted on the home green.

The match was played under the most unfavorable conditions, as during the progress of each round the rain pelted down in such volumes as to drench in a few minutes even a Chesapeake Bay dog. The wind was blowing directly from the east, a most unfavorable quarter, especially on the outward journey.

The contest was a fine illustration of the advantage of the short game over the long. Time and again the play through the fair green indicated success for Partridge, only to be refuted by the magnificent work of his captain within hailing distance of the hole. In fact, it was a repetition of Clow's match in the semi-final against Robert Abbott, when the former, apparently hopelessly out of it through the fair green, either won or pulled a half out of the fire.

Need of Beveridge.

The worst that Senator Beveridge's enemies can say of him is that he needs a good managing editor.—Chicago Tribune.
