SURGEON-GENERAL OF GRAND CAMP

Dr. Herbert M. Nash Appointed to Succeed the Late Dr. J. M. Claiborne.

IMMENSE CARGO OF POTATOES

Three Thousand Bags to Be Used for Seed in Planting.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

NORFOLK, VA., November 28.—Dr. Herbert M. Nash, of Norfolk, has been appointed by Grand Commander William H. Stewart, of Portsmouth, surgeon-general of the Grand Camp, United Confederate Veterans of Virginia, to succeed Surgeon-General J. M. Claiborne, of Petersburg, deceased.

A native of Norfolk, having been born here seventy-six years ago, the career of Dr. Nash is a long and honorable one, both in war and peace. No citizen in the community is more respected than he.

He went into the War between the States in April, 1861, as surgeon in the Ninth Virginia Infantry. The two years following he served in the Sixty-first Virginia, and the last year of the war was chief surgeon of artillery of the A. P. Hill corps.

He was captured by the Federals the night before Lee's surrender.

The three-masted schooner Hattie C. Luce, Captain Cooper, arrived here this morning from Presque Isle, Me., with 5,000 bags of potatoes, consigned to a local firm.

In marine circles this enormous cargo of potatoes is a rare occurrence, and it is also the largest one that has ever come into this port. A similar cargo is expected to arrive here in a few days. Three thousand bags are for planting.

TRY WOMAN FOR HUSBAND'S DEATH

duced by the prosecution so far is, in brief, as follows:

How Crime Was Committed.

That on the morning of November 12th Mrs. Moulter and her husband got into a family quarrel about certain insurance papers and a deed while in the kitchen of their home; that the woman, claiming that her husband threatened her with a pistol, went into her bedroom, some thirty feet away, and separate from that of her husband, secured a pistol from between the mattresses of her bed, and, returning, fired the first shot at her husband while he was standing in a door
